WALLACE CALLS MILK CONTROL VOTE THIS WEEK

Fear Higher Prices in Chicago.

Secretary of Agriculture Wallace yesterday called for a referendum of Chicago milk producers and dairymen to determine whether the market shall be put under federal price dictatorship. The balloting will begin by Tuesday and is expected to end before Saturday.

A. H. Lauterbach.

Wallace also announced a tentative plan which will go into effect early in September if the vote is favorable. The plan would increase the average amounts that have been paid to farmers by dealers. While retail prices would not be fixed, dealers said the plan probably would raise the price to the consumer. This has been the result in all cities in which the government exercised control over milk.

Can Override Dealers.

Under the law, the secretary may declare his so-called agreement in force if two-thirds of the milk producers [figured by volume rather than individuals] and one-half of the dealers approve. If the producers approve and the dealers are in opposition, the agreement still can be put into effect by the department of agriculture, with the permission of President Roosevelt.

Arthur H. Lauterbach, manager of the Pure Milk association, which persuaded Wallace to hold preliminary hearings on the matter in June, said it was likely the vote of the members would be cast as a unit. This organization furnishes about 75 per cent of Chicago's fluid milk, and its vote alone, if entirely favorable, would put the plan over.

District Meetings Tomorrow.

"There are fifteen members on the board of directors," Lauterbach said. "Each represents a district. Meetings are to be held tomorrow night in each district. The plan will be explained then and each district will instruct its directors how to cast its vote at a directors' meeting on Tuesday."

Wallace has indicated that he would approve this voting method.

The secretary's proposed plan is that prices paid to consumers be fixed at different rates for different parts of the year. At present they are determined by bargaining.

Condensery Price Basic Factor.

The basic factor would be the price paid for milk at condenseries. This price varies. Recently it has been between $1.07 and $1.10 a hundred pounds [46.5 quarts], or slightly less than 2¼ cents a quart. Under the Wallace plan Class 1 milk—that used for distribution as whole fluid in bottles—would be valued at 70 cents a hundred pounds above condensery prices for the months of July through November; at 55 cents above condensery prices for the months of December through April, and at 45 cents above the basic figure in May and June.

Class 2 milk, which is utilized as cream and ice cream, would command 32 cents above the condensery price in the first period, 28 cents above in the second, and 25 cents above in the third. The price to be paid for class 3 milk, the grade used for all other purposes, notably butter making, would be 3.5 times the average butter price [wholesale] plus 20 per cent.

The condensery price is now set by the government under an evaporated milk price agreement compact.

Now Get Almost as Much.

At present the farm producers are receiving 65 cents over the condensery price for their class 1 milk, and the Wallace plan would give them only a negligible additional return for the present at least.

If the plan is adopted, Wallace would appoint an administrator who would control the farmers' price everywhere within seventy miles of the city hall. Administration expense would be borne by the milk dealers who could be charged as much as 2 cents a hundred pounds of milk. The farmers would pay a checkoff levy, not to exceed 3 cents a hundred pounds. It has been estimated charges might total $547,000.

The control attempt is the third made by Wallace in the local market.

FESTIVAL MAGIC HOLDS CROWD IN 3 HOUR RAPTURE

Field Jammed; 15,000 Turned Away.

FESTIVAL FACES.

Turn to page 5 for closeup pictures of the throngs at last night's Chicagoland Music Festival. See if you can find your face or any face you know. Also on page 5 is a panoramic picture of the spectacular match lighting scene that was a Festival feature.

BY CHARLES LEAVELLE.

Into the vast reaches of Soldiers' field last evening there streamed 90,000 persons who for nearly three hours listened to music for the soul, music for the heart, and music for the toes. More than 15,000 were turned away. Including the performers, there were nearly 100,000 persons in the vast amphitheater.

The occasion was the Chicagoland Music festival. It was the tenth annual festival—and the greatest festival of them all

The music loving multitude saw at first hand one of the spectacular triumphs that come—once in a long while—to an unknown singer. They heard Marjorie Farrage singing to the largest audience she ever had seen. Miss Farrage, who is 20 years old, was adjudged the best woman singer in the British isles in a contest conducted by the London Daily Sketch.

A Judgment by the Throng.

And the crowd realized she was singing to them—the judges who were to pass upon the clear soprano voice that had lifted her from the obscurity of Darlington, England, and had brought her to them as "Miss Britain." Across the Atlantic and across a third of a continent she had come by airplane. And if the enthusiasm of the judgment is a barometer, Marjorie Farrage will go far in the world of song.

The long evening of melody closed upon a note so sublime that it made history, even at this history making music festival. Every one carried away the memory of a stately white haired lady who had just enjoyed the greatest triumph in a long life of them.

She is Carrie Jacobs Bond, who last night, in the twilight of her 80th year, heard 90,000 persons shouting to her the greatest applause of her career and saw 90,000 persons listening breathlessly to her compositions, "The End of a Perfect Day," and "I Love You Truly."

Moments of Majesty.

There were many moments last night that those thousands will carry long in their memories. One came when the strong young voice of John Carter, of the Metropolitan Opera company, filled the big arena with golden sound.

There were moments of majesty such as those when the music of the great massed bands and choruses came to them in waves of solemn melody.

The match lighting spectacle, which was so popular on its first appearance last year, was one of the moving events of the evening. Every light on the field was extinguished. The throng sat breathless and waiting.

Then, at a command from the master of ceremonies, thousands upon thousands of matches flared into light, making myriads of yellow stars around the oval. And how the audience applauded itself! It was permitted one encore, and then the floodlights blazed again.

Novachord Tones Open Festival.

The night of music thrills began at 6:45 p. m. when Porter Heaps, famous organist, sent the tones of the novachord swelling through the arena. The concert continued for thirty minutes, while bands and baton twirlers marched along the cinder track, finding their places of assembly.

Mr. Heaps is a master of this new instrument, which reproduces electrically the tones of the principal instruments of an orchestra.

The crowd was in a jovial mood. Clouds that had obscured the sun earlier had rolled away. The slanting rays of the late afternoon sun gilded the classic columns that flank the field. Men in white and women in gay summer frocks made the arena a great horseshoe of color.

At 7:15 p. m. the festival proper opened with the presentation of in-

SIX FOOTERS ORGANIZE FOR LARGER BEDS AND BIGGER SHOW SEATS

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 19 (AP).—In self-defense against "a world created for midgets," eleven Kansas City cloud dusters got together and organized the Skyliners club with a goal of 7 foot beds in every hotel and size 16 shoes in every store.

If you're male, you've got to be 6 feet 4 to join the club. If female, an even 6 feet will do. Miss Rowena Wheeler, 6 feet 2 inches tall, has ambitions to boom it into a national organization.

Ducking under a chandelier, she moaned "when I have to stand in a bus, my head thumps the top. We need longer beds and longer sheets. I have to sleep cat-a-corner and when I pull the covers around my neck, my feet stick out."

Ray Shelley, 6 feet 7, hopes to make merchants comply with an ordinance about awnings not being less than 7 feet above the ground.

"Maybe," added Paul Campbell, 6 feet 6, "we could get theaters to put in a few seats a guy can sit in. I haven't been to a show in two years, although I like 'em."

TINY GIRL SPEEDS 60 MILES AN HOUR IN BABY CARRIAGE

BRIMPTON, England, Aug. 19 [U.P.].—Eileen Lainsbury, 17 months old, was back in her mother's arms unscathed today after setting what was believed to be a world's perambulator speed record—60 miles an hour over six miles of a rough, bumpy country road.

The mother left the baby in her carriage outside the post office in care of a girl six years old. Joseph Hezel left a nearby pub and started off in his automobile, unaware the perambulator had been caught in a rear bumper. The mother heard screams and ran out of the post office. She managed to catch hold of the luggage carrier of the car but lost her grip.

A crowd took up the chase and the mother joined it. Hezel said he was traveling 60 miles an hour and heard no shouts. The baby clapped her hands and laughed at pursuers. Pedestrians finally waved Hezel's car to a stop. When the mother arrived, Eileen was playing with the helmet of a policeman who was holding her.

Bogus Checks Put Night Life Couple in Jail

Night club managers rubbed their hands at the lavish spending of the handsome youthful couple who seemed to have an inexhaustible supply of travelers' checks. And the same night club managers rubbed their heads sadly when they learned that the checks were forged.

Marjorie Mitchell.

Robert Russell, 21 years old, was locked in a cell last night, identified by eight of the victims as the young man of the couple. And locked in another cell was Miss Marjorie Mitchell, 20, a pretty blonde girl from Hudson, in McLean county, Russell's night club companion. The police also were holding Arthur Parkhurst, 24, of 1057 East 47th street, an ex-convict.

Girl Denies Aiding Plot.

Miss Mitchell denied that she knew there was anything illegal in the checks which financed the parties. Sergt. Timothy Dwyer, whose detective work brought the arrest of all three, said he believes her.

Now angry, now sad, Miss Mitchell said that Friday was to have been her wedding day. But Dwyer seized her and Russell as they were walking into their rooming house at 4139 Washington boulevard last Thursday night.

Russell told of Parkhurst, who was arrested later.

Dwyer, desk sergeant at the Pekin Inn station, worked on the case after hours and on his furlough. American Express officials told him the checks were stolen from sub-stations and then forged. Proceeds netted the pair about $2,500.

Visits All Victims.

Dwyer visited every person he could find who had cashed one of the checks. At last he found a night club man who had thought to note the license of the car in which the free spending couple rode.

The sergeant found the owner of the car, an innocent man who had lent his automobile to an acquaintance. The acquaintance proved innocent, too, but he had been on a party that night with a girl and a young man named Robert Russell, who said he lived near Madison street and Pulaski road. By questioning many persons in that neighborhood, Dwyer learned Russell's address. The sergeant said that while Russell passed the checks in night clubs Parkhurst passed other checks in stores.

17 INJURED WHEN N. J. TRAIN JUMPS TRACK IN STORM

Chatsworth, N. J., Aug. 19 (AP).—Seventeen persons were injured late today, three of them seriously, when the "Blue Comet," crack central railroad of New Jersey flier, was derailed in southern New Jersey's pine wilderness during a heavy rainstorm.

Most of the injured were in the observation car, the last of five which leaped the rails, and were pitched back and forth with furniture as the cars bounced 500 feet down the ties before breaking loose from the locomotive. On either side was a drainage ditch for a cranberry bog. Cars tilted at dizzy angles, but none went over.

Rescue squads from a dozen communities carried the injured for some distance along the tracks to meet a relief train blocked by the wreck.

Childlike Cries at Fire Give Firemen a Surprise

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 19 (AP).—Firemen chopped their way into a blazing house today when they heard cries they feared were those of a child. Instead of a child they found Midnight, a tabby cat, meowing beside her litter of week-old kittens. Firemen rescued the kittens, then fought the flames.

Germans Feign Holiday Air in War of Nerves

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Aug. 19.—Adolf Hitler and other high Nazi officials today sat back and, apparently calm, watched Europe writhe under the war of nerves which has become a part of the German-Polish dispute over Danzig.

A vacationlike quiet settled over the German capital and Hitler's retreat in Berchtesgaden. This official calm, however, did not prevent the battle of mutual recrimination between Germany and Poland from continuing with great violence.

Bernardo Attolico, Italian ambassador to Germany, and his embassy adviser, Count Magistrati, called on Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop at Fuschl castle in Salzburg today. Italian sources said they entrusted von Ribbentrop with a letter from Premier Mussolini to Hitler.

Suspension of Conferences.

Officials in Berlin and in Hitler's summer headquarters asserted that no important conferences were scheduled for the next few days.

"Since this is a war of nerves time is an important element," a Nazi spokesman said. "We have good nerves and delays do not strain us as much as other countries. We know that in the Czech crisis of last September the English nerves gave way at ten minutes to midnight. This time they may last until one minute before midnight when the final decision on the fate of Germany's eastern borders is taken, but our nerves will last longer and we are sure that the democracies are the ones who will make concessions in the present struggle."

Attempts to whip up the nerves of the German population with new accusations of Polish persecutions were the order of the day. The fact that the population did not rise in arms and demand immediate action "to liberate the persecuted brothers" showed that it either did not believe the atrocity stories or was indifferent to the fate of "brothers under the Polish knout."

Nazi Consciences Clear.

The organ of the armed forces, the Boersenzeitung, said: "What is now happening is the solution of the Danzig and corridor problems without a compromise. On our side is the right, and best conscience in the world, and iron nerves which have not yet been put to the test."

The Frankfurter Zeitung blamed President Woodrow Wilson for the present German-Polish conflict. The paper declared that "Wilson, too, dreamed once of a third term. When Roman Dmowski threatened at Versailles that Wilson would lose 4,000,000 Polish votes Wilson changed his course. Wilson, who up to that time had fully opposed Poland's wishes, decided a European question from the viewpoint of an American politician."

[Dmowski, who died last January, was leader of the Polish National Democratic party and delegate to the Versailles conference.]

Reveal Maneuver Plans.

Details of the large scale maneuvers the German motorized forces will hold from Sept. 10 to 18 were revealed today. The maneuver grounds cover a huge area extending from Chemnitz and Plauen in Saxony along the borders of the Czech protectorate down south to Munich. It is expected that most of Germany's tank units, as well as the fully motorized infantry divisions, will participate.

FIRE DESTROYS LUMBER TOWN; 600 HOMELESS

Klamath Falls, Ore., Aug. 19 [U. P.].—A forest fire tonight destroyed the lumber town of Pine Ridge, twenty-eight miles north of Klamath Falls, burning about 150 buildings and the $1,000,000 Forest Lumber company mill. Between 600 and 700 residents were left homeless, but there were no known casualties.

The fire, driven by a high wind, whipped into the town almost without warning and leveled it before residents could save their possessions. Forest company officials said the total loss will run well over $2,000,000.

1,500 Saved from Forest Fire.

Oroville, Cal., Aug. 19 (AP).—The forest service reported late tonight that a forest fire which threatened the town of Paradise in Butte county had been brought under control. A force of 150 men halted the blaze a few hundred yards from the settlement of 1,500 persons.

HITLER MASSES TROOPS ALONG POLISH BORDER

Ready for Fast Blow from the South.

BRATISLAVA, Aug. 19 (AP).—Gradual mobilization of Slovakia's army, pledged to coöperate with Nazi Germany's forces, was under way tonight throughout the little nation. Two divisions of Slovakia's army of 30,000 and 300,000 reservists were reported authoritatively to have been dispatched to the high Tatra mountains which constitute Slovakia's frontier with Poland.

Premier Josef Tiso.

These Slovak measures were described as "Necessary for the defense of the country." They were reported a few hours after Germany took military possession of her protectorate. Nearly 100,000 German troops were strung along the Slovak-Polish frontier with their headquarters at the railway junction of Zilina. These troops would be prepared to attempt to strike a fast blow at Poland should war come.

Demand Land from Poland.

Nazi military possession was accompanied by renewed expressions by Slovak leaders of territorial demands for their little country on Poland. Premier Josef Tiso, Propaganda Minister Sano Mach, and Dr. Moses Kirschbaum, general secretary of the Hlinka party, alleged in speeches at Trnava that Poland had stolen the Javornia region from Slovakia last September.

"Slovakia has a legal right to this region now incorporated in Poland," Tiso declared. "Slovakia will persevere and accomplish its will in regaining this object of Polish robbery."

Gen. Ferdinand Csatlos, Slovak minister of war, was still in his office today, having withdrawn his resignation offered last week in protest against ordering two divisions to the Polish frontier. The divisions went today.

Capital Is Quiet.

Members of Tiso's cabinet refused to make any statement regarding Germany's military possession of their country. Bratislava was quiet tonight, and, in contrast to the northern region, there were no German troops in sight. Reports that Nazi soldiers also were massed on the frontier between Slovakia and Hungarian Ruthenia, door to Polish Ukrainia, were denied in authoritative quarters.

"If there are any German troops in the eastern part of Slovakia, it is only a coincidence," these sources said.

Travelers returning from northern Slovakia said that Zilina's citizens were instructed to be ready to leave their homes at a minute's notice. The town of Orava was reported to have been turned into a huge German troop encampment.

Poland Ready for Action.

WARSAW, Aug. 19 (AP).—Armed Poland held herself in readiness tonight for developments generally expected in Warsaw to bring a decisive turn soon—possibly within a week—in European affairs. Feeling grew that pressure by the Rome-Berlin axis would be intensified in the dispute over Germany's demands for the Free City of Danzig, which Poland holds to be a lung of her economic organism.

"The forthcoming week," read a headline in the evening Warsaw newspaper Czas, "will be a week of crisis—to decide peace or war."

Not Surprised by Move.

The German propaganda campaign already has been described by the Polish press as "bordering on madness."

Official comment was lacking on military moves in Slovakia, German protectorate over which the Nazis have established military possession. Polish circles said the Polish army had been aware since last March of possible German penetration in Slovakia.

It was stated bluntly that "Poland is ready." In general, the Polish view was that the forthcoming week would see the actual threat of war launched in a new bid for an appeasement policy and compromise.

Report Poles Move Troops.

BERLIN, Aug. 19 [U. P.].—German press dispatches tonight reported that strong detachments of Polish troops were moving up to the frontier of the Polish corridor facing German Pomerania west of the Free City of Danzig. The dispatches said that Polish military authorities had closed the frontier between Pomerania and the corridor in the same manner as the Silesian border to the south was closed several days ago.

Fifty officers of the Polish general staff were reported in Berlin to have arrived at Dirschau on the Vistula river just below Danzig's southern boundary to survey the frontier situation.

"Polish troops with side arms are patroling the Polish side of the border," press dispatches said.

Danzig to Call More Troops.

DANZIG, Aug. 19 [U. P.].—Danzig Nazi leaders were understood tonight to have decided to conscript more reservists into the Free City's armed forces Monday after meeting with officers of the German army, navy, and air force.

The German officers came to Danzig for ceremonies today opening a new pontoon bridge over the Vistula river at Kaesemar, fifteen miles east of Danzig, and forming a new strategic link between the Free City and Germany's military bases in East Prussia.

URGES NEUTRAL HUNGARY

BUDAPEST, Aug. 19 (AP).—Amid cheers of members of his "small landowner's party," Tibor Eckhardt, one of Hungary's outstanding political leaders, proclaimed today the nation's firm desire to remain neutral if Germany and Poland should go to war over Danzig.

Tibor Eckhardt. [A. P. Wirephoto.]

Officials remained silent on Foreign Minister Csaky's conferences with German and Italian leaders.

Eckhardt, however, alluded to the anxiety in Hungary over the country's position on the Rome-Berlin axis.

Csaky's Return Awaited.

Officials said Count Csaky is expected to return to Budapest from Italy Monday to report to Premier Teleky and the cabinet.

Eckhardt, in referring to Csaky's talks in Germany and Rome, declared: "I do not think it permissible for Hungary to take on a new obligation of any kind when there is a dispute between two of our friends."

After attacking Nazi Germany's premise that Hungary, as part of southeastern Europe, formed Germany's "lebensraum" or living space, Eckhardt declared, amid loud applause: "We cannot subordinate our friendships with either Poland or Italy to that of Germany. If, in spite of our prayers, a conflict should come between them, we must not become involved in it under any circumstances."

"Long Live Poland."

He was frequently interrupted by shouts of "long live Poland."

"I think the government, and the premier in particular, could have prevented a lot of unnecessary anxiety by publicly expressing this unmistakably determined point of view," Eckhardt continued.

"It is more than ever necessary in the present situation for the Hungarian nation to see clearly, because this is a question of life or death, and the Hungarian nation has a right to see clearly and to come to a decision on the basis of the true facts."

Eckhardt declared Regent Admiral Nicholas Horthy, leading champion of Hungary's complete independence, had completely expressed the Hungarian attitude when he declared before parliament in June that Hungary is "tied by the unwritten law of true friendship" to Poland.

"We can only ask the foreign minister to hold to that speech," Eckhardt said, again referring to Count Csaky's talks in Germany and Italy.

GERMANY WIPES OUT REPUBLIC IN LESS THAN YEAR

Occupation of Slovakia Completes Process.

The assumption by Germany Friday of "military control" over Slovakia completed within a period of less then eleven months the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia, which had lived as a republic for twenty years after the world war. Germany now possesses or controls all of that one-time nation except the Carpatho-Ukraine [Ruthenia] area, which has been incorporated into Hungary, and the small Teschen area which was taken by Poland.

Although Czecho-Slovakia has been wiped from the map of Europe in this short period, rumblings of its fate actually were heard in January, 1938, when Konrad Henlein, Sudeten-German party leader, came into international prominence. A month later Reichsfuehrer Hitler proclaimed "the protection of those peoples of German origin who are not in a position through their own efforts to obtain along the borders for themselves the rights to general, human, political, and ideological freedom."

Hitler Seizes Austria.

Hitler seized Austria on March 12, 1938, and then concentrated military forces on the Czech frontier as agitation continued for a union of the Sudeten area, home of 3,250,000 residents of German extraction, with Germany.

Then came the fateful negotiations between France and England on one side and Italy and Germany on the other over the fate of Czecho-Slovakia. These negotiations culminated in the Munich pact. On Sept. 23, 1938, Hitler gave Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain of Great Britain his terms for peace. These terms included a demand for the predominantly Germanic regions and plebiscites in other areas in Czecho-Slovakia. The Czechs answered with a mobilization of 1,500,000 men.

But on Sept. 29 and 30 the representatives of England, France, Italy, and Germany met at Munich, and the agreement reached there allowed Hitler's troops to take control of the Sudetenland on Oct. 1, 1938, from which day the dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia dates. The same day Poland forced Czecho-Slovakia to yield the Teschen district, 300 square miles in Silesia with a population of about 100,000 Poles.

Threat of War Again.

Through the first few months of 1939 the threat of war hung over the world again as Hitler indicated that the Sudetenland was not enough and that he wanted another and bigger slice of Czecho-Slovakia. The internal affairs of the republic were further complicated by the rise of the movement for independence of Slovakia.

Last March 14 Slovakia declared itself a separate state. The next day Hitler's armies occupied the Czech provinces of Bohemia and Moravia. Slovakia was established as a Nazi protectorate.

The elongated state of Czecho-Slovakia had a population of about 15,000,000 and an area of 54,244 square miles. Carpatho-Ukraine has a population of 552,000 and 4,206 square miles of area. Adding the latter figures to the 100,000 population and 300 square mile area of Teschen and subtracting from the total population and area of Czecho-Slovakia discloses that Germany has extended dominance over nearly 14,500,000 persons and 50,000 square miles in central Europe since Munich.

STRIVE TO SAVE WORLD'S PEACE, POPE IMPLORES

Gives Audience to Farley Just Before Plea.

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Aug. 19 (AP).—Pope Pius XII. implored a settlement of Europe's critical troubles that would avert war today in addressing Italian pilgrims just before he received United States Postmaster General James A. Farley in private audience.

The pope told his hearers in the public audience that he kept his trust that those who govern the nations would refrain from an "appeal to force." He made his fervent plea in imparting his blessing on more than 2,000 Italian pilgrims who came to his summer palace for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the death of Pope Pius X.

Recalls Efforts for Peace.

The pope recalled he had been striving to prevent war ever since his election to the papacy last March. His remarks were published tonight in L'Osservatore Romano, Vatican newspaper.

"In view of the present hour, which renews acute anxiety and trembling of heart," he said, "we ourself, from the first day of our pontificate, have attempted and done what was in our power to ward off the danger of war and coöperate in the attainment of a solid peace, founded on justice, which would safeguard the liberty and honor of peoples.

"We do not want nor do we have the heart to give up the hope that feelings of moderation and objectivity will serve to avert a conflict which, according to every forecast, would exceed even the past in destruction and material and spiritual ruin. We do not cease to trust that the rulers of peoples in decisive hours will refuse to assume the inexpressible responsibility of an appeal to force.

Implores End of War.

"But above all, human hopes resting in the depths of goodness and in the wisdom of man, our eyes are lifted to the omnipotent, to the father of mercy, and to the God of every consolation.

"Of Him, in whose hands are the hearts as well as the minds of those who govern, we want to implore anew that, in his infinite goodness and mercy towards the human race, he put an end to war, wherever it now wages, and benignly save us all from the scourge of new and more cruel bloody conflicts."

Farley said after his audience with the pope he was convinced of the pontiff's anxiety for world peace and that the pontiff was doing everything possible to maintain it.

NAZIS EXPRESS HOPE POLAND WILL HEED PEACE PLEA OF PIUS

BERLIN, Aug. 19 [U. P.].—An official German statement tonight warmly supported Pope Pius XII.'s plea for peace and said the pontiff's appeal to European rulers recognized, in effect, the justice of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler's demands against Poland.

"The pope's words, uttered today to pilgrims at Castel Gandolfo, will spare Europe from war if Poland and other governments heed them and permit the restoration of justice and freedom to those who must still do without it," the statement said.

The statement stressed the pope's appeal to all nations to "coöperate for the attainment of a sound peace based on justice and safeguarding the liberty and honor of people." The German statement viewed this as "the pope's sharp condemnation of the Versailles treaty," although there was no direct mention of Versailles in the text of the pontiff's remarks.

POPE SPURS FRENCH HOPE

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS, Aug. 19.—The intense but secret diplomatic activity being carried on by the Vatican under the personal guidance of Pope Pius XII. is one of the last substantial factors for peace in the European crisis. This opinion was expressed tonight by French observers close to the foreign office.

The pope's speech to a group of Italian pilgrims earlier in the day is viewed as one of the few events to lighten the pessimism which has settled on French official circles in the last forty-eight hours. In veiled terms which contained no specific reference to the parties involved in the current crisis, the pontiff made it clear he is following developments with anxious interest.

Encyclical Believed Likely.

In view of the French government's excellent sources of information in Vatican City, much weight may be given to the conviction expressed here that the pope has already decided on a form of intervention, which he will offer.

It is believed that if diplomatic efforts the Vatican is making through its nuncios in the European capitals fail the pope may embody an appeal for peace in the first encyclical of his reign. According to some reports, the encyclical already has been prepared and the pope is merely awaiting the propitious moment to issue it.

Andre Francois-Poncet, French envoy to Rome, will see Count Galeazzo Ciano Tuesday to explain the French attitude toward the crisis on the basis of new instructions given to him by Premier Edouard Daladier in Paris this week.

THREATS TO RAZE EUROPE FROM AIR ARE OVERRATED

Recall Poor Record of Raiders in World War.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

In the light of current beliefs in many quarters that all large European cities will be crippled if not totally destroyed by aerial bombardment in event of a general war, it is interesting to consider how little actual damage was caused in either Paris or London by raiding enemy airplanes during the world war of 1914-1918.

Records from the military archives of both capitals show that while airplanes started from German bases on more than 1,000 occasions to raid these cities, the majority of the attackers were turned back before they reached their objective. Weather, mechanical difficulties, and defenses turned back 90 per cent of the raids on Paris and 70 per cent of the raids on London.

74 Tons of Bombs Dropped.

German aircraft dropped 74 tons of bombs on southern England and London during the war, killing 857 persons, injuring 2,058 and causing, roughly, $7,250,000 worth of damage. Enemy raiders dropped approximately 105 tons of bombs on Paris and its environs, killing 532 persons, injuring 1,249, and causing about $6,000,000 worth of damage.

In the London area nearly 8 million persons were subject to this attack; another 4 million were in Paris and vicinity. This means that about one-tenth of one per cent of the English population exposed to assault from the air was killed. Slightly less than one-half of one per cent were injured.

In Paris, the percentage of casualties was about the same. Just over one-tenth of one per cent of the populace exposed to aerial assault was killed and less than three-tenths of one per cent injured.

Air Strength Unknown.

It is difficult to determine the total number of aircraft engaged in the raids. It is known, however, that, counting each trip of an aircraft as one airplane, a total of 480 enemy airplanes started on raids for London. Of this number 144 got through.

By the same method, 532 airplanes started on raids toward Paris. Of this number 478 were turned back for one reason or another so that only 54 airplanes actually flew over Paris dumping bomb loads into the city and its environs. Almost all these raids, incidentally, occurred during 1918.

English defenses shot down 22 raiding planes and eight others fell in England due to motor troubles. Ten of the 22 were downed by fighter aircraft and 12 by anti-aircraft fire from the ground. Thus, about 6 per cent of all the planes that started raids fell in England.

The French shot down 17 raiders. Only one or two of these have been credited to fighter aircraft, although there is some confusion on this point.

The great majority were knocked down by cannon from the ground because the French depended almost entirely on anti-aircraft fire at night for Parisian defense and used only front line patrols and fighter squadrons by day. Roughly, 3.5 per cent of the planes that started raids on Paris were downed.

These figures are important because they are pertinent today. According to all military authorities the ground defenses of the last thirty years have improved almost proportionately with the advances in aviation. This indicates that strongly defended cities today can escape as lightly as did London and Paris in 1918.

No modern city, strongly defended in the air and on the ground, need suffer much more severely today than in 1918. Bombers fly faster, higher, and carry greater bomb loads. But ground defenses have been developed to cut them down if they fly at heights where they can bomb accurately. Fighters still are swifter and can climb even higher than bombardment planes.

Bad Navigation at Fault.

Probably the greatest single factor that prevented completion of raids during the world war was bad navigation. Most of the raiders lost their way, encountered unflyable weather, and turned back without ever approaching their targets. Others dropped bombs in open country in the mistaken belief that they were over their objectives.

Although aerial navigation has improved enormously since the world war, the ground facilities—lights, radio beams, and direction finding radio—are chiefly responsible for this improvement. In war, however, the ground facilities will be denied raiders.

Furthermore, direction finding radio from the homeland will be denied raiders. Radio experts from most of the European nations have already made arrangements to jam the frequencies so that—for instance—no German planes bound for England could be told by direction finding stations in Germany that they are near London.

Unless one side or the other quickly establishes a definite superiority in the air, raids will be attempted only during conditions of poor visibility when low cloud, rain or snow interfere with ground observation. Under these conditions raiders will probably be free from interference by defensive fighters.

Same Conditions Hurt Assault.

Nevertheless, the very conditions that cover their approach will prevent them from accurately bombing worth-while targets. Experiments have shown that it is impossible for bombers to fly for distances of 500 to 600 miles to a target in bad weather and accurately bomb it from within cloud.

If raiders appear low over a city modern quick-firing cannon and large caliber anti-aircraft guns with the latest types of range-finders will cause havoc.

This recapitulation, based upon the most accurate battle statistics available, indicates that threats to raze modern European capitals with aerial bombardment probably are overrated.

How World War Raiders Fared in Attacks on London, Paris

The map diagram illustrates that of the more than 1,000 German airplanes that started on air raids to the French and British capitals during the world war, only a comparative few reached their goals and were able to engage in bombing of the cities. Most of them were forced to turn back, fell, or were shot down by guns or defense planes.

HALIFAX RUSHES BACK TO LONDON; TENSION GROWS

British Believed Ready to Back Poles.

BY DAVID DARRAH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, returned unexpectedly to the foreign office today. His sudden return—he had planned to remain in Yorkshire over the week-end—was attributed to the increasing gravity of the European situation.

Lord Halifax.

Halifax wished to consult personally with his advisers and keep in touch with the situation as closely as posible. The British position presumably is unequivocal. Negotiations between Germany and Poland would be welcomed, but if Poland finds herself at war with Germany, then Britain and France, it is believed, would come at once to her assistance. Military plans for doing so are so well developed that they would immediately come smoothly into operation.

Change in Attitude.

In the opening phase of this crisis, which resembles that of last year over Czecho-Slovakia, nothing is more remarkable than the contrast between the demeanor of the British government today and that of twelve months ago. Then decisions on high policy were taken hurriedly as the situation developed. Today, those decisions already have been taken. The machinery for defense is working at full throttle.

Symptomatic of this change is the disappearance of the inner cabinet. It is worth noting that the meeting of ministers called for Tuesday is open to all members of the cabinet who may be in reach of London. The most disquieting feature of the present situation is that the German press has gone so far in demanding the unconditional return of Danzig that it might be difficult for Germany to retreat without loss of face.

As the full blast of clamor in the German press has just begun, it seems reasonable to suppose that the crisis will not reach its climax for at least ten days. However, the opinion is gaining ground that the climax will come before the Nuremberg congress, which opens on Sept. 2, and not after.

No Separate Peace.

Adolf Hitler's speech at Tannenberg next week-end may be decisive. It is to be hoped that by then Hitler will realize how determined Britain and France are to fulfill their guarantees to Poland.

Certain quarters close to Hitler are reported to believe that Poland could be annihilated before Britain and France could make any impression on Germany's western front and that then a separate peace could be concluded with the democracies.

The reply to this argument, it is said here, may be found in the Anglo-Polish treaty of alliance which provides that Britain should not make a separate peace or armistice with Germany.

90,000 THRILLED BY MELODIES ON NIGHT OF MUSIC

15,000 Turned Away from Greatest Festival.

dividuals and organizations, winners in the far flung contests that had preceded this night. These contests were held in thirty-five states and in Canada.

The first winner of the evening was a young accordionist, Frankie Ricchio, of Racine, Wis., playing Rachmaninoff's Prelude in C-sharp minor. Then came the winning Class A men's chorus, the Schwaebisher Saengerbund of Chicago. Under the direction of H. A. Rehberg, the chorus sang Handel's Hallelujah Amen chorus.

Johannes Rasmussen of Waukegan was the victorious cornetist. His playing of the "My Regards" waltz by Llewellyn won warm applause.

From Hamilton, Ont., came the winning women's choral group, the Wentworth Ladies' chorus. After a hearty greeting by the audience they sang "My Lover is a Fisherman," by Strickland.

Choruses Join in Song.

A Chicagoan, Monty Appelbaum of 901 Gunnison street, then played "Gypsy Airs," by Sarasate, on the violin with which he won first honors in the festival contest. He was followed by the Egyptian Choral club of West Frankfort, Ill., champion mixed chorus, singing "God of the Open Air," by Cain. This group was assisted by the competing mixed choruses.

Then came the voices of bands and a beautiful spectacle on the field. While nearly 200 baton twirlers hurled their silvery wands into the air the winning class A band and the victor in class C played a lively march. These were the Chicago Boys' club band and the Davenport, Ia., Summer High school band, respectively.

Presently the baton twirlers were joined by a score of flag throwers from Mishawaka and Elkhart, Ind., under the direction of Edward Clark of Elkhart. While they whirled and swung their brightly colored flags the great lights around the field were suddenly switched on.

Spectacle Moves Throng.

It was applause that was to continue almost thirty minutes, for immediately afterward there followed the greatest spectacle of massed music makers ever seen by a festival audience. It made festival history.

From every gate and entrance around the vast arena streamed columns of bands, bugle corps, and drum majors. The massed choruses came down from their high seats back of the stage. The massed accordion band moved in from the south. Seventeen hundred colorfully costumed square dancers stepped down from their bleachers.

And still they came. There were uniforms of scarlet, of grey, of purple, of white, yellow, green, and blue. Above the marching throng the golden bells of tubas reared themselves. Batons, spinning and whirling, glinted in the lights. The arena rang with their music.

Marchers Cover Field.

And when the marchers finally came to a halt the field was covered. Eight thousand musicians and performers almost blotted out the greensward in a pattern of riotous color.

When the music and applause had ceased Edgar Nelson, choral director of the Music Festival, led the throng on the field and the multitude in the stands in singing two stanzas of "America," while a gigantic American flag moved majestically across the north end of the arena.

As the last strains were heard all the performers except the massed bands of 1,900 pieces began leaving the field. Then, with the mighty voice that only massed brass can create, these bandsmen played the "Gloria March," by Losey, and "The Washington Post," by John Philip Sousa, who was the great attraction of the first music festival in 1930.

As the bandsmen marched off the silvery strains of the festival orchestra, directed by Henry Weber, was heard from the stage. It played Strauss' "Blue Danube" to thunderous applause.

1,000 Lift Voices in Song.

Then came one of the events that drew to the festival many in this vast audience—the music of the festival Negro chorus of 1,000 voices under the direction of J. Wesley Jones.

"Ol' Man River" was first, with Joel Peppers the soloist. Then came one that always brings festival audiences to their feet—"Swing Low, Sweet Chariot." The great arena went black. The white costumed singers, high in the tiers behind the stage, were flooded with light. When they finished the applause rolled deafeningly.

In the next spectacle Chicago had a look at 1,000 of its boys and girls in the massed high school band of 1,000 pieces. Dressed in white, they marched up the field playing "Invincible U. S. A." under the direction of Oscar Anderson, supervisor of instrumental music in the schools.

Lighted Baton Directs Throng.

Then came another of those events music festival audiences love—the community singing. Under the direction of Frank Bennett and Carl Craven the thousands sang for themselves. They made their own music with such songs as "Let Me Call You Sweetheart," and "In the Good Old Summer Time." They sang in darkness, watching the lighted baton at the north end of the field.

And from this darkness there rolled up the magic voice of a city singing—of many cities singing. Only once a year does this great voice rise up to the sky, and that night is Festival night.

When the lights blazed again the massed accordion band under the direction of Capt. Howard Stube had formed before the stage. The floodlights glinted on $150,000 worth of accordions. Their series of lively airs won them a harvest of applause.

The Advent of Swing.

More festival history now. The advent of swing! When the master of ceremonies mentioned Thomas [Fats] Waller and asked the multitude whether they liked this new music, there was a shout of approval. Then it was that Fats turned it loose. "I Got Rhythm" was first, followed by "Ain't Misbehavin'," which Waller wrote.

Above the din of applause were heard the shrill shouts of the jitterbugs. The first swing at any Chicagoland festival was a hearty one. There were shouts for more, but there wasn't time.

Already 1,700 square dancers were on the field, which became a spectacle of moving color while the old square dance calls resounded. Around the field came an old-fashioned hay wagon, with boys and belles swinging their legs from it. And the music? No one can sit still while hearing "Broken Down Wagon" and "Turkey in the Straw." The latter number almost stopped the show.

Chicago Winners Acclaimed.

The spotlights shifted to the stage now while the audience listened to the soprano voice of Miss Jane Nelson of Chicago, who yesterday afternoon was adjudged the best woman singer of Chicagoland. Her "Speak to Me," by Manna-Zucca, was warmly received.

She was followed by the Festival orchestra playing Enesco's "Rumanian Rhapsody," then the rich voice of Robert Spiro of Chicago was heard. He is the champion nonprofessional man singer of Chicagoland. But the reception given his "Roadways," by Rose, indicated he may soon leave the ranks of the amateurs.

Next came a chorus gathered from twenty-three Illinois counties. They comprise the University of Illinios rural chorus. Fresh from engagements at the New York World's Fair and the Illinois State Fair in Springfield, their strong young voices earned them a great welcome. They sang "The Soldiers' Chorus," from "Faust," and "Rain and the River," by Fox.

And at last one of the events that made this tenth festival the greatest of them all: The presentation of Miss Farrage.

It was a great moment in the history of the festival when the multitude in the seats and on the field roared a typical Chicago welcome to the charming little English girl. From the moment her car appeared at the south gate until it reached the platform, this great thunderous voice of Chicago continued its acclaim. Then Marjorie Farrage sang.

A Song of Her Homeland.

"Cherry Ripe," a song of her homeland, revealed a delicately textured voice, capable of considerable power without sacrifice of quality. She has a fine command of nuance, which gave her singing a direct, moving sort of expressionism. "The Waltz Song," by German, which followed, disclosed a brilliance and agility of this same voice. As an encore she sang the Mozart "Alleluia." Her range is nothing short of remarkable.

And her pretty little curtain speech which ended: "Thank you ever so much, good-by," brought down the house.

The parade of personalities was on. Following Miss Farrage came Carter, the Metropolitan Opera singer. The sensational young tenor has met triumph after triumph since his spectacular rise to fame. And there was another great Chicago welcome for him.

"Then You'll Remember Me," from "The Bohemian Girl," was his first number and was followed by "Hills of Home," by Fox. At the announcement of "The Donkey Serenade," by Friml, the thousands in the arena shouted their approval. The applause for the finely balanced, sincere young voice was tremendous. The audience loved this voice and its owner.

Came then that moment for which every one had been waiting—the appearance of Mrs. Bond, the white haired little lady whose songs have made the world happy and have soothed it over many rough spots. The stirring, moving welcome accorded her was probably the greatest ever seen in any festival.

As her car moved down the field she waved first to one bank of thousands and then to another. Men stood up and took off their hats. Women waved their handkerchiefs. And all the while the great voice of Chicago roared on.

Old at 79? Not She!

When Mrs. Bond reached the microphone she spoke in strong tones that defied the notion one is old at 79. And she told some things about little Miss Britain, whom she had met during the day and whom she thinks is a sweet girl with a great future.

Then she said: "Well, this is my last parade, and it's going to be my last. Not only because it's the greatest parade that ever could be, but because I think three are enough."

With Mrs. Bond seated in a place of honor on the platform, a great festival tradition was carried out. This was the singing of the "Hallelujah," the magnificent hymn of praise from Handel's "Messiah" by the Festival Reunion chorus of 3,500 voices. Their voices rolled out from the amplifiers in a paen of solemn melody.

Fireworks End Event.

And as ever the musical festival closed in a brilliant burst of fireworks that split the heavens with lurid color and thunderous sound. Set pieces on the field included patriotic tableaux, boat races, and even Ferdinand the Bull and the Three Little Fishes.

Finally, completing the Carrie Jacobs Bond motif, her portrait flamed across the end of the field while the orchestra played "The End of a Perfect Day." Then as the multitude stood, "The Star Spangled Banner" was sung by every one in the amphitheater and the tenth annual Music Festival—the greatest of all the music festivals—was history.

Between 9 and 10 o'clock millions of Americans and Canadians heard the festival program over W-G-N and the Mutual Broadcasting network, together with the stations of the Canadian Broadcasting corporation.

NAZIS BAN MUSIC OF BRITON THEY HONORED IN 1938

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York Times.]

LONDON, Aug. 19.—The music of Dr. Ralph Vaughan Williams, dean of British composers, has been banned in Germany, it was learned today. Only a year ago Dr. Vaughan Williams was honored with an important German prize.

No official reason was given publicly for this reversal of attitude toward the British composer, but it is known that he was one of a group of leading Britons who addressed a statement to the Hitler government appealing for a humane approach to Czecho-Slovakia.

The German action came as a distinct surprise to the composer and his friends. In 1937 the Hanseatic Shakespeare prize was set up in Hamburg. Worth 10,000 marks, the prize was to go to an outstanding cultural representative of foreign nations. Dr. Vaughan Williams was selected for the first award and received it in 1938.

CONTEST VICTORS WIN ACCLAIM OF FESTIVAL CROWD

Girl, 18, Captures Coveted Singing Title.

Final competitions of the tenth annual Chicagoland Music festival were a thrilling prelude yesterday morning and afternoon to the big show in Soldiers' field in the evening. Winners of the contests had their rewards in appearing before the festival, where they received the acclaim of the throng.

Among the most coveted titles in the competitions were those of leading woman singer and leading man singer in Chicagoland. The winner among the women was Jane Nelson, 18 years old, a contralto, of 6237 North Maplewood avenue. First place among male vocalists went to Robert Spiro, 21, a baritone, of 5440 Winthrop avenue. He sang "An Jenem Tag," by Marschner.

Wins Judges' Plaudits.

Miss Nelson, a slender, pretty blond girl, is a graduate of Senn High school. She sang Glueck's aria "Euridice" and won the plaudits of the judges, Marjorie Maxwell and Edith Mason, opera stars, and Wilson Mound of Memphis, Tenn.

Second place in the women's contest went to Cathryn Caligari, 23 years old, of 444 East 76th street, a dramatic soprano. Shirley Dickenson, 18, of 626 119th street, Whiting, Ind., a coloratura soprano, was third.

Miss Caligari sang "Dich, Teure Halle" by Wagner, and Miss Dickenson's selection was "Caro Nome" by Verdi.

Another Baritone Places Second.

Second place in the men's contest went to another baritone, Francis Rogier, 21, of Decatur, Ill. He also sang "An Jenem Tag." In third place was Lee Hewitt, 20, of St. Louis, Mo., a University of Chicago student, whose address here is 5639 University avenue. Hewitt, a basso, sang Verdi's aria "Infelice."

The instrumental solo competitions also developed into spirited affairs. First place among violinists was taken by Monty Appelbaum, 15, of 901 Gunnison street. Adrian De Prato, 17, of 2336 Huron street, won second ranking, and William Hennigbaum, 18, of Davenport, Ia., was third.

Among the cornetists, Johannes Rasmussen, 19, of Waukegan, was the victor. Raymond Makeever, 15, of Joliet, took second, and Harry Tully, 14, of 11100 Bell avenue, was third.

Racine Boy Accordion Winner.

Winner among the piano accordionists was Frankie Ricchio, 16, of Racine, Wis. Nancy Uland, 12, of Bloomington, Ind., captured second, and May Wightmann, 20, of Fennville, Mich., was third.

Each of the chorus singing competitions was divided into two groups—Class A, 50 to 100 singers, and Class B, 25 to 49 singers. Winner in Class A for men was the Schwaebisher Saengerbund chorus of Chicago, directed by H. A. Rehberg. Second place was taken by the Meistersingers' guild of Two Rivers, Wis., under the direction of Dr. Thomas Bailey.

In Class B men's groups the Public Service male chorus of Chicago, directed by George Calder, was victorious. The runner up was the Sarmatia male chorus of Chicago, directed by Wladzislaw Skubibowski.

TRAFIC SYSTEM OVERFLOWED BY FESTIVAL CROWD

Car Parking Lots Filled Early in Evening.

BY HAL FOUST.

The tenth and largest Chicagoland Music Festival overflowed parking and trafic facilities of Soldiers' field last night. Police were compelled to close all entrances to Grant park and to Burnham park at 8 o'clock.

The storage lots for cars, more than ample for all previous events, were filled. Lake front pavements were loaded with automobiles which had no place to stop.

The unprecedented crowd taxed a police experiment in two way radio and loud speaker regulation of trafic and parking.

Three Cars Insufficient.

Experience proved the value of such a system, but it also established the inadequacy of the equipment employed. Three cars with two-way wireless telephones were helpful, but they weren't sufficient.

At 6:50 p. m. the 3,800 car lot at the east side of the stadium was filled, as were three smaller lots near the administration building and the Field museum, with a total capacity of another 1,000 cars. Otto K. Jelinek, park district trafic engineer, radioed this information with instructions to the police and parking guards on duty.

From then on, new orders meeting changing conditions were on the air. This minimized cruising by motorists seeking space in lots already filled. Several thousand drivers missed police guidance, however, and were jogged about the huge loop of pavement around the stadium.

Observation Tower Suggested.

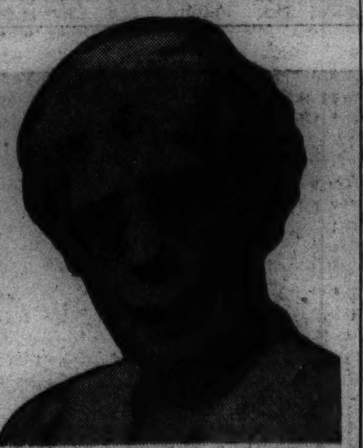
"What we need for a crowd of this immensity," said Chief James B. Kerr, "is a high observation tower with a view of all parking lots and all of their pavement approaches. A commander in this position could phone to amplifiers instructing police at strategic locations."

Kerr, with 300 police, got a semblance of order out of the tangled trafic conditions.

In the overflow of the parking facilities, several thousand cars were forced to park south of 23d street near the replica of Fort Dearborn. Others were forced to park at locations as distant in Grant park. They perhaps are due apologies, along with those who were unable to find a place in which to leave their cars.

There simply were more persons wishing to attend the festival than there were places to put them.

Festival Guest



Carrie Jacobs K. Bond, composer, who was guest of Chicagoland Music Festival in Soldiers' field last night.

CLUBBED TO DEATH IN BRAWL.

William Grinstead, 35 years old, 725 Connecticut street, Gary, was clubbed to death last night in a brawl in front of a rooming house by John Sarich, 50, of 950 Adams street, Gary, who was captured and confessed.

Notes on the Music Festival

Many early arrivals combined the Music Festival with a family outing and sat in scattered groups eating lunches and enjoying the cool lake breeze. More than 1,000 were crowded about Soldiers' field at 3 p. m. The gates opened an hour later.

At 6:30 p. m. 5,000 persons were waiting to buy general admission tickets. These tickets were placed on sale at 8 p. m., after all reserved seats had been filled.

When the general admission seats were thrown open, more than 30,000 persons were crowded about the gates. The throng flowed into every vacant seat and stood crowding the aisles and the infield track. Seats to the rear of the stage in front of the administration building were filled immediately. Later arrivals went regretfully home, unable even to purchase standing room.

The immense crowd was handled by 650 ushers and gatemen. There were thirty-two ticket sellers. Bill Sturm and Andy Frain said every one was seated more quickly than ever before because of the great advance sale of reserved seat tickets.

Marjorie Farrage, "Miss Britain," who was sitting among thirty spectators in the press box, was the only one to stand when the Stars and Stripes passed in review.

When the combined bands played on the field they covered so much ground that the difference in the speeds of light and sound became a factor in leading them. The drummers at the east wing could hear the west wing drums slightly after their own and vice versa—but, well rehearsed as the musicians were, the difficulty was scarcely noticed by the audience.

Because her train was late, Justine Havens, 9 years old, of Orange, Tex., failed to get to Soldiers' field in time for the juvenile girls' competition in baton twirling. But the judges asked her to give a demonstration alone, and Justine made a big hit with hundreds who saw her.

For the third year, Miss Miriam Shalan, a small brown-eyed woman of 70, was the first comer. She arrived at noon.

Three expert linesmen gave the festival a little circus atmosphere by spectacularly climbing a 100 foot pole to prepare a gigantic American flag for unfolding at the singing of America. After getting to their high perches at the three release ropes, the men had to remain hanging there for nearly an hour before they got their cues to come down.

In a row behind the speakers' stand sat eight veterans of the G. A. R., led by Capt. Thomas Ambrose, 90 years old, of Chicago, commander of the George H. Thomas post and Illinois senior vice commander of the G. A. R. He was the youngest of the group. The oldest was James H. Lewis, 98, of Chicago. Others present were Maj. A. E. Gage, 95; Ezra Peebles, 95; James Quigley, 93, and John Burke, 91, all of Chicago; Capt. Arthur Dawson, 95, of Oak Park, and William P. Lockwood, 93, commander and only surviving member of Post 414 in Kankakee.

One baton twirler who was strutting his stuff before the early crowd struck himself on the head when he slipped and fell on the cinder field track. He was revived quickly with smelling salts in the stadium hospital.

Automobiles bearing license plates from eighteen states were seen on the outer drive from the loop to the stadium.

Some time during the evening Carrie Jacobs Bond lost her purse. It contains identification. She asks the finder to return it to THE TRIBUNE.

A BIG BANK GETS THE ONCE OVER BY MISS BRITAIN

Singer Gives a Lesson on the 'Waste Book.'

BY MARCIA WINN.

Yesterday was a full day for Marjorie Farrage, the little English bank clerk whose soprano voice charmed the multitude last night at the Chicagoland Music Festival.

Being a bank clerk, Miss Britain wanted to see an American bank. She went to the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company.

There she confounded President James R. Leavell by asking to see his waste book.

'Waste book?" asked Mr. Leavell in astonishment.

Alas, No Waste Book.

"Why yes," said the English singer. "I was a clerk [clark, she called it] in Barclay's bank. I kept the waste book. All the debits and credits of the day must go into it."

Mr. Leavell confessed that the Continental bank had none. He hadn't even heard of such a book. But for half an hour he and the rest of the executives listened to her stories about banking, international affairs, clipper ships, and civilizaton.

Miss Farrage was at her desk in Darlington, 250 miles north of London, until her singing won her the title of Miss Britain and a trip to the festival two weeks ago. She will soon begin her return journey.

A Crowded Day.

And so she wanted to crowd everything she could into her visit. She went shopping, she read the countless letters that she received, and she enjoyed to the utmost the great basket of flowers sent her by a fellow passenger on the Dixie Clipper, on which she flew the Atlantic.

Carrie Jacobs Bond, who shared feminine honors with the English girl at the festival, visited with her.

"You are at the sunrise of your life," the composer told the young singer, "and I'm at my sunset. But we love the same thing—music.

"I've worked hard for mine—" she began.

Warning to Cinderella.

"And I for mine," interposed Miss Farrage, who is 20 years old, 59 years younger than Mrs. Bond.

"But your success has come more quickly than mine," Mrs. Bond went on, "which is as it should be.

"But be careful, Cinderella," she warned with a smile. "Don't take off your slipper. You might lose it."

Miss Farrage didn't. In her silver and white gown, she sang her way to Chicago's heart last night.

"Wouldn't it be strange after all this excitement," she said before she sang, "if I should open my mouth before the microphone and nothing would come out?"

But her voice did come out—beautifully.

NEW WPA FORMS PLEDGE WORKERS TO UPHOLD U. S.

Forms which all WPA employés must sign, certifying they do not advocate or hold membership in any organization seeking to overthrow the United States government by force, are now being prepared. They must be signed by the end of September.

This was announced yesterday by Charles E. Miner, Illinois head of the Work Projects administration. He said that signing of the certificates is required as a condition of WPA employment throughout the nation.

Miner said the forms will be distributed following the completion of the layoff of all WPA relief workers who have been on the rolls eighteen months or more.

10,000 Frolic at Moose Fiesta on Northwest Side

The annual frolic and fiesta of the Loyal Order of Moose was held yesterday in Kolze's grove, 6443 Irving Park road. About 10,000 members of the lodge and their families attended. Miss Honor Somerville, 18 years old, 7007 Osceola avenue, was crowned queen of the fiesta, and Christian Wiebe, 10, of 6321 Byron street, won the pie eating contest from twenty-five boys and girls in 1 minute 58 seconds.

BRITISH GIRL STAR IN PARK TONIGHT; TIBBETT TUESDAY

Miss Farrage to Repeat Festival Success.

Two musical events that are expected to draw thousands of Chicagoans to the free Grant park concerts this week will take place tonight and Tuesday at 8 p. m. They are the appearances of Marjorie Farrage, Miss Britain of last night's Chicagoland's Music festival, who will sing as a guest star tonight, and Lawrence Tibbett, great operatic baritone, who will make his first Grant park appearance Tuesday evening. Miss Farrage will be accompanied tonight by the George Dasch Symphony orchestra.

Tibbett will fly into Chicago from Hollywood tomorrow morning. He has interrupted his movie schedule to sing here. The park district expects his audience to be as large as that which cheered Lily Pons. At that time spectators were seated as far away as the steps of the Field museum. A new public address system has been installed so that the entire throng, regardless of size, will be able to hear.

Tibbett, who will sing four selections, three of them operatic, from the works of Massenet, Rossini, Wagner, and Schubert, will be accompanied by the Chicago City Opera orchestra, with Leo Kopp conducting. Tibbett's songs will be broadcast.

SLOT MACHINES BARRED, TAVERNS BOYCOTT A TOWN

Girl Editor in Homewood Defies Pressure.

An unusual civic controversy has developed in Homewood, a pleasant suburb twenty miles south of Chicago's loop, since the village board acted to bar slot machines.

The devices were taken out of the town's eight taverns last spring, during Attorney General John E. Cassidy's drive to eliminate slot machine gambling in Illinois. They reappeared about Aug. 1, and the board on Aug. 8 voted five to one to instruct the police to see that they were removed.

Now, it is asserted, the eight tavern owners have decided to boycott the village merchants and the village newspaper, the Homewood Herald, in an effort to obtain a recall of the order. Paul Cook, a member of the board, said yesterday he was investigating the boycott.

Paper Tells of Boycott.

The Herald, which is edited by Miss June Geserick, 20 years old, stated in its latest issue that plans for the boycott were formed at a meeting last Tuesday of the tavernkeepers. It added that the editor had been informed the eight agreed not to support any village enterprises until the slots came back.

"If the reason advanced for refusal of Homewood taverns to advertise in this issue of the Herald was correct," an editorial said, "the Herald and all Homewood must inform themselves of every detail involved. The action would actually mean that tavern owners would be attempting to force merchants to fight for the reinstatement of slot machines.

Girl Editor Stands Pat.

"As long as slot machines are in violation of the law, this newspaper will not urge the village board to reinstate the gambling devices in Homewood. The decision of the Herald will continue, regardless of the refusal of taverns to advertise in this or any further issue."

Miss Geserick is a graduate of the Thornton Township Junior High school. She edited the paper there. Last spring she and several associates founded the Herald.

SECURITY BOARD LISTS GRANTS TO ILLINOIS, INDIANA

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP).—The social security board today reported grants of $13,598,700 to Illinois and $5,364,600 to Indiana for old age pensions during the first eleven months of the fiscal year 1939, which ended June 30 last.

Other social security grants to the neighbor states reported by the board for the same period were:

Unemployment compensation—Illinois $1,218,000, Indiana $1,637,000, for administration expenses in both cases.

Public health services — Illinois $362,400, Indiana $188,100.

In addition, Indiana received $272,200 for aid to the blind and $1,635,800 for aid to dependent children. Illinois' plans for aiding blind persons and dependent children have not been approved by the social security board.

MRS. DABIDSON DIES AT 95.

Harvard, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—Funeral services for Mrs. Thomas Dabidson Sr., 95 years old, a resident of this community for many years since coming from Ireland, were held today. She died Thursday, leaving two sons, eight grandchildren, and two brothers.

100TH BIRTHDAY TO BE OBSERVED BY TEUTOPOLIS

Teutopolis, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—The men of Teutopolis are growing beards and the women are working diligently making hoop skirts in preparation for one of the biggest celebrations in the history of the community—a three day pageant observing the town's one hundredth anniversary.

The centennial will open on Saturday, Sept. 2 and will continue through the following Sunday and Monday. Nearly every one in the village of 750 residents has been working for weeks getting ready for the big event.

Teutopolis is internationally known through the activities of the Franciscan Fathers of the Sacred Heart Province, who settled here when they first came to America in 1858.

Townsfolk will trace by their pageantry the history of the town and how a thriving village was established in a countryside that was once wilderness and swamp.

DE VALERA DUE ON SEPT. 28 FOR AMERICAN TOUR

After a visit to Washington where he will be the guest of President Roosevelt, the legation announcement said, he will leave on a tour which will include New York City, Philadelphia, Princeton university, Hartford, Providence, Boston, Rochester, N. Y., Cleveland, University of Wisconsin, Madison; Minneapolis-St. Paul, Butte, Mont.; Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Mo.; St. Louis, Memphis, New Orleans, Houston, and Chicago.

While in Chicago he will address the American-Irish congress, which convenes on Nov. 2.

Speed Plan for Instalment Payment of Back Taxes

County Treasurer John Toman said yesterday that arrangement for accepting instalment payments on delinquent taxes at the new bureau of tax collections will be completed in about ten days. More than 5,000 taxpayers have inquired about the instalment payment plan since the bureau was formed a month ago.

FORGOTTEN BOY FINDS HAVEN IN JUVENILE HOME

Reveals Flight to Avoid Return to Germany.

Davenport, Ia., Aug. 19 [Special].—A forgotten boy is being held at the Scott county juvenile home. He is Lawrence Lorenz, 16 years old, who ran away from his home in Chicago July 17 because he said he feared he would be forced to return to Germany with his parents. Efforts of Scott county juvenile authorities to find the youth's parents in Chicago have been unsuccessful, and a belief that they may have returned to Germany was expressed.

Lawrence Lorenz.

According to the story told to Probation Officer Paul D. Covert by young Lawrence, he came to America and to Chicago in 1934 to join his parents, who had come from Germany previously.

"Several months ago a man visited our house and inquired if my father would be interested in returning to Germany. I like America and want to stay. So I decided to leave home," the boy said.

Lawrence was brought to Davenport police headquarters on July 18 after a motorist picked him up hitchhiking on a highway.

DEDICATION OF BRIDGE AT HENNEPIN WILL BE HELD SEPTEMBER 17

Hennepin, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—A double celebration will be held here on Sunday, Sept. 17. One will dedicate the new Hennepin bridge over the Illinois river. The other will commemorate one hundred years of occupancy of the historic Putnam county courthouse here.

Arrow points to scene of celebration.

Opening of the bridge will bring into use the first real connecting link between Putnam and Bureau counties. It fulfills the dreams of both pioneers and present day residents of bridging the barrier that isolated one county from the other.

Since 1817, when the first white men came to the vicinity of Hennepin, there has been intermittent ferry service across the river. But this always has been unsatisfactory.

The bridge is the longest and most expensive span built by the state highway department over the Illinois river. Residents of Putnam, the smallest county in the state, and of Bureau county will share in the celebration.

10 on Burning Boat Leap in Straits and Are Saved

Mackinaw City, Mich., Aug. 19 [U. P.].—Ten persons, three of them children, on the speedboat Pilot II., plying between Mackinac Island and Mackinaw City, were forced to leap into the straits today when the boat caught fire near North Graham shoal. The passengers and crew members floated in the water until they were rescued by the state automobile ferry, City of Cheboygan, under command of Capt. Andy Coleman, who stopped the steamer and ordered lifeboats to the rescue.

CHICAGO SERENADES AMERICA (1)

By CALEB

IN the cerulean sky over Grant Park clear, late daylight still lingers. To the west—gigantic cutouts in gray, blue and lavender cardboard—loom the city's darkening skyscrapers. In the winds high overhead, gossamer brushmarks of summer cloud sprawl against a vivid sapphire backdrop—then lazily dissolve into wisps of coral, pearl and jade. An I. C. train scuttles by, scattering sharp echoes far and near.

Now, the serried expanse of seats spread over the wide grounds begins rapidly filling. Illumination bathes the interior of the band shell; and among the music-stands figures and instruments are quietly finding their places.

The Strauss tower booms eight, and another of Chicago's 1939 series of sixty-seven nightly open-air concerts is under way. Out over the vast conclave of faces palely visible in the gathering shadows float the first strains of a famous band or orchestra, the clarion voice or violin tones of some famous artist. Columbia, National and Mutual networks are already tuned-in; and over their wires these starlight harmonies will travel coast to coast, and be simultaneously re-broadcast by short wave to lands abroad.

Once again, Chicago is serenading America . . . while the whole wide world listens in over America's shoulder! And with pride it can be said of the "I Will" city that nowhere else in these United States is music being popularized on such a consummate scale of quantity with quality as has been made possible by the Chicago Park District and Chicago Federation of Musicians.

Glorious in their intrinsic musical fare alone, Grant Park's nightly harmony festivals are still more glorious in their incomparable scenic setting . . . North and west are the silent opaline explosions of light from the Buckingham Fountain. Dreamlike is the dazzle of the far-away Wrigley Building. Along the western skyline a jeweled parade of huge buildings marches—off to the north and east, lake and landscape are glimmering obscurities. And one is, above all, held spellbound by the orange splendor against engulfing darkness that identifies the band shell itself. These, truly, render the scene as entrancing to the eye as are the orchestra's windborne melodies to one's ear!

For all who listen, these Chicago serenades to America will remain among the summer's sweetest souvenirs.

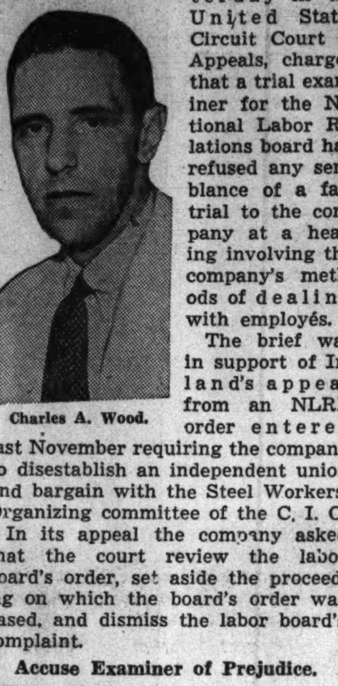
INLAND STEEL CO. IN FEDERAL SUIT ATTACKS NLRB

Charges Hearing Colored by Trial Examiner.

Attorneys for the Inland Steel company, in a 123 page brief filed yesterday in the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, charged that a trial examiner for the National Labor Relations board had refused any semblance of a fair trial to the company at a hearing involving the company's methods of dealing with employés.



Charles A. Wood.

The brief was in support of Inland's appeal from an NLRB order entered last November requiring the company to disestablish an independent union and bargain with the Steel Workers' Organizing committee of the C. I. O.

In its appeal the company asked that the court review the labor board's order, set aside the proceeding on which the board's order was based, and dismiss the labor board's complaint.

Accuse Examiner of Prejudice.

The examiner, Charles A. Wood, was accused of having decided the case in his own mind before the hearing began, and of deliberately coloring the trial record to support his preconceived decision. His attitude was termed "dictatorial, sneering and contemptuous."

Wood also caused the forcible ejection of a company shorthand reporter who was transcribing testimony, the brief said. This the Inland counsel contended, constituted an assault.

"The examiner continually examined witnesses favorable to Inland in a prejudicial, unfair, coercive and hostile manner," the brief continued. "The inevitable result was that not only the witnesses in question but subsequent witnesses were intimidated."

Charge Constitution Violated.

The company contended that through Wood's partisan and biased attitude it had been deprived of a full hearing in violation of the due process clause of the constitution.

The brief holds there is no evidence in the record to support the board's finding that the company had any part in the formation of the independent union, known as the Steel Workers' Independent Union, Inc.

"No one can read the record without inevitably concluding that the examiner had decided the case before the hearings began and skillfully used the proceedings to convict Inland," the brief declared. "He entered the hearing room convinced of Inland's guilt and with the fixed determination as a partisan on the board's side to produce a record to support his preconceived opinion.

"Throughout the months of testimony he never deviated from his fixed plan to keep out of the record all evidence favorable to Inland and include everything in the way of testimony, gossip, and insinuation that was unfavorable to Inland."

Charge Evidence Colored.

Wood, it is charged, constantly interrupted counsel or witnesses and compelled further arguments or statements to be "off the record." Then he would often go back "on the record" and summarize such testimony, either burying evidence or giving it the color he desired, according to the Inland attorneys.

The brief contended that the SWOC is a mere organizing committee, not a labor organization, and hence cannot become a representative of the employés for collective bargaining purposes.

The original complaint was filed by the SWOC in 1937 after labor disputes in the company's Indiana Harbor and Chicago Heights plants. The company appealed from the NLRB ruling. Last June 21 the United States Circuit Court of Appeals held that the board need not answer a list of twenty-two formal questions filed by Inland and taking exception to board procedure.

Testimony at the hearings before Examiner Wood covered 5,175 printed pages in nine bulky volumes. The hearings occupied several months.

The brief was filed by four of the company's counsel, Ernest S. Ballard, Herbert A. Friedlich, Frederic Burnham, and Ralph E. Bowers. The labor board now will be given an opportunity to file an answer. The case is expected to be heard at the fall term of court.

Milk Flows Freely in Strike

Prince Bernhard Saves 4 of Family from Drowning

SOESTDIJK, Netherlands, Aug 19 [U.P.].—Prince Bernhard, husband of Crown Princess Juliana, yesterday saved the lives of a father and his three children after his speedboat collided with and sank their motorboat, it was disclosed today. Bernhard pulled all four aboard and took them to shore.

C. I. O. THROTTLES MILK SUPPLY IN NEW YORK STRIKE

One Death Marks Dumping of Dairy Trucks.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 19 (AP).—Led by an ex-sailor, a farmers' union—which three years ago had only eight members—today throttled the milk supply of 7,000,000 persons with the latest strike in New York's turbulent $2,000,000,000 dairy industry.

The striking union even shut off shipments to fifteen milk dealers who had signed contracts on the union's terms since the strike began. This, a union spokesman announced, was because milk delivered under these contracts was being used against the interests of union farmers.

For the first time in New York's dairy history, the C. I. O. is taking part in the strike. The C. I. O. offers financial aid to the strikers and asks 700,000 C. I. O. members in the state to boycott dealers who fail to meet the farmers' demands.

Assails C. I. O. Tactics.

Henry H. Rathbun, state vice president of the Dairyman's league, which has refused to back the strike, asserts the farmers' union is using "typical C. I. O. practices to scare farmers into keeping their milk at home."

Pickets tightened blockades around upstate plants today, further cutting the huge metropolitan market's dwindling supplies in their fight for higher prices. Mayor Fiorello La Guardia has called a Monday conference between rival factions.

Immediate acceptance to the conference bid came from the ex-sailor, Archie Wright, 47 year old chairman of the Dairy farmers' union, which called the milk strike in demanding a uniform base price increase to $2.35 per hundredweight [47 quarts].

Supply Cut Nearly Half.

Wright's union, which claims a membership of 15,000, started its boycott of metropolitan dealers Tuesday and with each succeeding day made heavier inroads on deliveries. Today less than 60 per cent of New York's normal daily intake of 4,400,000 quarts was delivered.

Widespread violence, the death of one picket, arrests, and wholesale milk dumping marked the first days of the strike until Gov. Herbert H. Lehman ordered all available state troopers to patrol the milkshed.

Numerous arrests for minor disturbances were reported today in the trouble zone, but Maj. John A. Warner, superintendent of state police, reported the situation under control.

SUPER-TENDER Frankfurts in the big size!

These new tender frankfurts, though different in size, are identical in quality, tenderness and flavor with the Swift's Premium Frankfurts being made and sold on the New York World's Fair Grounds. There they've created a genuine sensation . . . captured the appetites of millions!

Swift & Company discovers an almost magic way to make frankfurts tender through and through!

Undoubtedly these big, round, large-size frankfurts have always been your favorites. Like a thick steak or a double lamb chop, they're juicier—have a richer, more savory flavor. And now Swift has discovered a way to give these big juicy links a completely new kind of tenderness! The meat "melts" in your mouth. And the skin, tendered in freshly crushed, pure pineapple juice by a special Swift process (patent pending), is so delicate it seems part of the meat itself. This process tenders but does not flavor. The skin couldn't be any more tender and still seal the flavor and natural juices in the meat!

Made of fine meats only . . . big and juicy, full of flavor . . . they're a meal fit for a king!

With your first bite, you'll notice how different these new frankfurts are from the ordinary picnic kind. That's because in making them Swift uses nothing but fine cuts of meat . . . rare and delicate spices . . . and smokes them carefully under scientific controls, over real fires of fragrant hardwood.

Your first taste of Swift's Premium Tender Frankfurts will mark a red-letter day in your life. Enjoy it soon! But remember—be sure your dealer gives you Swift's Premium.

SENATOR FIGHTS LAND PURCHASES FOR ST. CHARLES

Hickman Urges Use of 1,200 Acres Now Owned.

Paris, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—Senator Wilber H. Hickman of Paris, one of the Horner Democratic leaders in Springfield, today said that the legislative committee considering a site for an addition to the St. Charles School for Boys should utilize land already owned by the state adjacent to the institution.

Senator Hickman.

Hickman opposed suggestions that land ten miles from the school be purchased at a cost of about $100,000. This sum would come out of the $250,000 appropriated by the legislature for the addition.

Fox river valley residents oppose a walled institution, despite the fact that fifty-six escapes have been engineered from the present unwalled school during 1939.

Refuses to Build Fence.

A. L. Bowen, state director of welfare, has refused to erect a fence about the place with $40,000 available for that purpose since May 22, when the appropriation bill was signed by Gov. Henry Horner.

"What the state needs," Hickman said, "is a committee courageous enough to overcome sob sisters among a certain group of welfare workers, and the political interests of Fox river representatives, by placing the welfare of Illinois first.

"The money appropriated should be used to construct a secure building that will prevent escapes. A wall should be built around this building and an iron fence around the rest of the St. Charles grounds. The fence should be electrified, thereby guaranteeing no further escapes.

1,200 Acres Available.

"The point should be emphasized that the state already holds title to 1,200 acres at St. Charles. There are no restrictions as to the use of the property in the deeds that conveyed the land.

"Building of water mains, electrification, etc., can be done more reasonably on the present site than on a new site. In addition to this economy, the purchase price of real estate can be saved."

The St. Charles commission, of which Hickman is a member, is presided over by Senator Thomas P. Gunning [R., Princeton]. It is scheduled to meet tomorrow in Dwight.

6 'HANDKERCHIEF MOB' SUSPECTS, MOTHER JAILED

Six young men who called themselves the "handkerchief mob" because they wore handkerchief masks, were held at the Warren avenue station last night in connection with burglaries in west side groceries. Also held was Mrs. Frances Herbert, mother of one of them, in whose home police said they found some stolen food.

Mrs. Frances Herbert.

The gang was arrested after Detectives Frank Brady and Patrick Deeley noticed Peter Phillips, 17 years old, 2855 Lake street, displaying $2 in pennies. He admitted he and three others had broken into a grocery at 3004 Madison street Thursday night and had taken the money and about $160 worth of food. They hid it in Mrs. Herbert's home at 2518 Adams street at her suggestion, he said.

The others in custody are Charles Singer, 17, of 2712 Van Buren street; Charles Parsons, 13, of 2233 May street; Frank Kutella, 16, of 2737 May street; Robert Cadelis, 16, of 2701 Jackson boulevard, and Mrs. Herbert's son, Frank, 15.

Good Time Gang of Seven Accused of 49 Robberies

DRIVE TO WRECK TOWEL CONCERN ALLEGED IN SUIT

$50,000 Asked from Trade Group, Union.

Charges of violence in the towel supply business were made yesterday in a $50,000 damage suit.

The suit was filed in Superior court by the Domestic Linen and Towel Supply company, 3024 South Parkway. Among the defendants are officers of the Chicago Linen Supply association, said by the attorney for the company to include 90 per cent of the concerns supplying laundered towels to business houses, and officers of the Laundry & Dyehouse Drivers' and Chauffeurs' union, local 712.

Traces History of Dispute.

Attorney George D. Sullivan, who filed the suit, asserted that Arthur Irwin owned 45 per cent of the stock of the Domestic company when he died in 1933. He left the stock to his widow, Mrs. Martha Irwin of Highland Park.

The suit says she asked the company to buy the stock from her. Then Morris I. Kaplan recently asked the company to buy Mrs. Irwin's stock, according to the suit. Kaplan is secretary of the linen supply association.

The suit charges that Kaplan conspired with the other defendants to seize control of the Domestic company. Kaplan threatened to drive Raymond Allison, president of the company, out of business unless Allison gave Mrs. Irwin $30,000 for her stock, the suit asserts.

Attempt at Possession Charged.

Last May, the suit says, possession of the company's plant was demanded by Morey Gordon and two other men. The suit asserts that it was necessary to call police to remove Gordon and the other men. Since then, Attorney Sullivan charged, the company has been forced to maintain armed guards. The suit identified Gordon as owner of the Individual Towel and Cabinet Service company, a competitor of the Domestic company and a member of Kaplan's association.

The Domestic company charges that the defendants have caused it a $50,000 business loss.

Defendants with Kaplan and Gordon are Jacob L. Aronson, treasurer of the supply association; eight members of the association's executive committee; and these officers of the drivers' and chauffeurs' union local; Joe Bush, president; George J. Bendel, secretary, and George Knott, business agent.

CONVICT SEIZES GUN, KILLS NURSE AND SHOOTS TWO

Portland, Ore., Aug. 19 [Special].—A wounded convict killed a nurse and wounded a physician and a guard today in an attempt to escape from a hospital where he was undergoing treatment for a gunshot wound inflicted Thursday night by police. The convict was captured after a policeman shot him through his neck.

The slain nurse was Mrs. Hattie Hooker. She was shot in her mouth by Hulen Presley, who escaped two weeks ago from the state prison in Walla Walla where he was serving a twenty year sentence for robbery.

Samuel Warrell, the wounded guard, said Mrs. Hooker called him into a ward to help her move Presley. Warrell said Presley grabbed his revolver from the holster and started shooting. After Mrs. Hooker fell, Presley shot Warrell and Dr. H. C. Manlove as he ran from the ward. Warrell got a revolver from another guard in the corridor and felled Presley with his first shot.

V. F. W. Renames Polley as Adjutant in Illinois

The Veterans of Foreign Wars yesterday announced the reappointment of F. E. Polley as adjutant of the department of Illinois. Karl A. Gillig is department commander.

Spend Their Loot

Seven young men who called themselves the Good Time gang were in custody at the detective bureau yesterday. Sergt. Phillip Breitzke said forty-nine complaints had been signed against the gang.

Police said the gang got $1,200 and $500 in jewelry since July 1 in a series of robberies and holdups in physicians' offices, filling stations, and liquor, jewelry, and fruit stores. Some of those held said their loot went for good clothes and good times with girls.

Three revolvers were found in an automobile used by the gang. Two of the prisoners have minor police records. They are David Weiser, 19 years old, 3040 Warren boulevard, put on probation a year ago for petty larceny; and Raymond Page, 22, of 315 South Sacramento avenue, sentenced to twenty days in the Bridewell in 1937 on a charge of attempting to commit a crime.

The others seized are Richard Johnson, 21, of 3040 Warren boulevard; Joseph Marzano, 18, of 920 South Western avenue; Leonard Field, 17, of 14 South Kedzie avenue; Julius Fleishman, 18, of 20 South Kedzie avenue, and George Lohan, 19, of 3122 Warren boulevard.

ESCAPED FELON BACK; REGAINS TRUSTY STATUS

Trusties were trusty when Alfred F. Dowd became warden of the Indiana prison in Michigan City. They were trusty about returning to the prison at night. They would, however, smuggle saws in to other prisoners.

Warden Dowd stopped that by building a dormitory outside the walls for trusties who worked on the prison farm. They no longer could get into the prison to pass out saws.

Perhaps that nettled Jesse Worth, 62 years old, a wife murderer from Terre Haute, officials suspect. Worth was missing when they counted noses at the dormitory Friday night. He ran away after being a model prisoner for fourteen years.

He returned yesterday. He hadn't found anything to eat while away from the dormitory, he said, and he'd been drenched by a rainstorm. The old prisoner was displeased with the outside world, and he didn't care who knew it. Prison officials said he still had a place in the trusties' dormitory.

HAZZARD IS HELD FOR HEARING IN SCALDING DEATH

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—James Hazzard, 30 years old, a night club figure, will face a hearing early next week in the death of his Cuban pal, Thomas Martinez, 32. Hazzard is being held without bail. Martinez died Wednesday night after being found in a tub of scalding water in the apartment of Mrs. Dorothy Russell Calvit at Kew Gardens, Queens.

James Hazzard.

It was erroneously reported that Hazzard was the son of Mrs. Calvit, daughter of Lillian Russell, famous actress of the gay 90s. Hazzard's attorney, Samuel Kornbluth, said there is no relationship. Kornbluth said Hazzard has been living at Mrs. Calvit's home for twelve or fifteen years and has been taking care of Mrs. Calvit, an elderly cripple.

Hazzard said he found Martinez in a stupor after a drinking bout, placed him in the tub and turned on the water. He said he believed he turned on the cold tap instead of the hot.

TOLD TO PAY FINE OR RESIGN FORCE; POLICEMAN QUITS

Policeman Thomas J. Conley of the Woodlawn station had the choice yesterday of paying a $200 fine for disorderly conduct or resigning from the police department. He said he would resign. Municipal Judge Joseph B. Hermes, hearing the disorderly conduct charge, said the resignation must be filed by Aug. 25 or the fine will apply.

Conley was arrested early Friday for creating a disturbance in a tavern at 325 Plymouth court. Joseph Helms, the owner, had refused to serve him because he was in uniform. Conley was suspended by Commissioner Allman soon after he had been taken into custody. He is 33 years old and lives at 3017 East 78th street. He has been a policeman for less than two years.

2 ARE CONVICTED OF CONSPIRACY IN PENN BOND CASE

County Democratic Chief One Defendant.

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 19 (AP).—Two of the three defendants were convicted in Dauphin county court today on charges of conspiracy to monopolize the bonding of state highway contracts.

James E. Kirk, Pittsburgh insurance man and Allegheny county Democratic chairman, and Victor S. Skok, his associate in the bonding business, were convicted of conspiring to extort and misuse the office of the secretary of highways during the Democratic administration of Gov. George H. Earle. The highways secretary at that time was the late Warren Van Dyke.

Third Defendant Freed.

A third defendant, H. H. Temple, former chief engineer of the highway department, was acquitted. He had been charged with the other defendants of conspiring to extort and levy blackmail against insurance agents and road contractors.

The charges grew from a grand jury investigation of accusations made during the heated 1938 Democratic primary in Pennsylvania. A dozen high Democrats in all were indicted.

One Convicted in June.

Roy E. Brownmiller, former secretary of highways, was convicted in June of preëlection pay roll padding in Luzerne county. He is seeking a new trial.

The jury of eleven Republicans and one Democrat reached its verdict after eight hours' deliberation.

Judge Fred S. Reese said the maximum imprisonment could not exceed two years or the fines $500 for each offense.

Freed on Bond in Alleged Grocery Mail Order Fraud

Ben Weinberg, 42 years old, seized by postal inpectors on charges of mail fraud, was released under $2,500 bond yesterday by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker. Weinberg was directed to appear in New York Sept. 15 for trial. The inspectors said Weinberg and Milton P. Lefkadifis, 59, ordered groceries on the letterheads of reputable firms, had the goods delivered and then sold them without paying the wholesalers. Lefkadifis, unable to raise $5,000 bond, has been returned to New York.

TESTS ESTABLISH SNAKE VENOM AS A PAIN RELIEVER

Has Several Advantages Over Strong Drugs.

Within the last decade, physicians have been obtaining results with the minute use of snake venom as a pain reliever. Dr. Irving S. Cutter, health editor of THE TRIBUNE, said yesterday that the preparation has been useful in from 70 to 80 per cent of all cases in which it has been employed.

In addition to reducing suffering, snake venom has proved helpful in epilepsy and in stopping hemorrhages. A number of cases have come to his attention, Dr. Cutter said, where the venom controled bad bleeding resulting from throat or tonsil operations on persons whose tendencies to bleed copiously had not been known.

Advantages Over Drugs.

Although it dulls pain as does morphine, experiments with venom do not show it to have the deteriorating effect of such strong drugs. On the other hand, patients have gained weight and strength.

Another virtue indicated by the experiments is that the relief obtained through venom lasts much longer than that of morphine, and with a far smaller dosage. Whereas some cases require large and frequent doses of morphine, a single shot of venom has been known to last almost a full day.

Venom experimentation began about the time of the civil war, Dr. Cutter said. Then physicians tried it on epilepsy cases, but with negative results. Extensive recent work has been done by Dr. David I. Macht of Baltimore, who has found tiny doses of sterile cobra venom solution superior to morphine in easing severe pain.

Deadens Pain Areas in Brain.

This result, Dr. Cutter pointed out, was obtained not through anesthetization of the site of the infection, but apparently because the venom renders insensitive "certain portions of the brain, called pain areas."

The dose recommended by Dr. Macht is the quantity which will cause the death of five white mice. This, declared the Baltimore physician, is quite harmless in the normal adult.

"It should be understood, of course," Dr. Cutter said, "that cobra venom is employed as a pain killer, not as a cure for any disease. As every physician knows, when the use of morphine is once begun a habit demanding its continuance is likely to follow. In other words, the dose may need to be increased gradually as time goes on. Not so with cobra poison, however.

"None of the physicians using it noted any untoward symptoms or any necessity for larger dosage. It is possible that this new compound can be substituted for opium in the treatment of drug addiction."

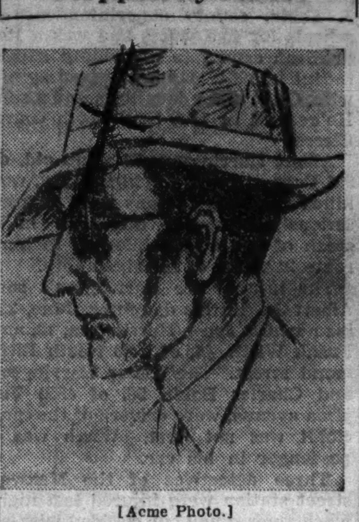
Two Killed When Plane Crashes in Michigan Fog

Kalamazoo, Mich., Aug. 19 (AP).—David Ames, 32 years old, and Harry Bulson, 31, both of Kalamazoo, were killed tonight when a four passenger plane crashed in a field twelve miles southwest of here. The wreckage caught fire. The plane, piloted by Ames, was returning from Eau Claire, Wis., where it had taken Mr. and Mrs. Marion Mains to visit a sick relative. State police said the plane was flying low in a fog and struck a knoll.

Soldier Dies as Plane Falls.

Grahamsville, N. Y., Aug. 20 [Sunday] (AP).—One man was killed and another critically injured last night when their airplane, carrying army markings, crashed on Denman mountain. The dead man was identified as John Brennan Smith, 19, Lowell, Mass. The injured man is Second Lieutenant Willard G. Ewing, Post field, Fort Sill, Okla.

Trapped by Sketch



[Acme Photo.]

Sketch drawn from memory by woman who witnessed Long Beach, Calif., holdup, and which caused Maurice Kessler of Chicago to be sought in crime.

[Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Photograph of Maurice Kessler, which, California police said, completed identification of him in connection with holdup.

Long Beach, Cal., Aug. 19 [Special.]—Because a woman had enough presence of mind to study the face of a bandit while he threatened her with a gun, and enough artistic ability to sketch it on a sheet of scratch paper immediately afterwards, Morris Kessler of Chicago is wanted by Los Angeles county authorities or charges of robbing a Long Beach bank of $6,600.

The bank, a branch of the Security-First National bank of Los Angeles, was held up by three men last July 21. The woman, whose identity has been withheld by police, faced one bandit's gun during the hold up but remembered his features well enough to sketch them.

She submitted the picture to the police who matched it with a photograph of Kessler in their identification files. Two other victims of the robbery then identified the photograph as a likeness of one of the three men who robbed the bank. A complaint was issued charging Kessler and two "John Does" with the crime. Kessler left by airplane for Cicero, Ill., last Aug. 9, according to police.

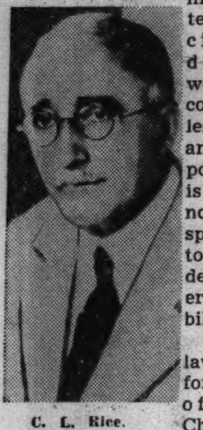
PLAN SUIT TO BAR RECKLESS DRIVER FROM STREETS

Invoke New State Law on Responsibility.

BY HAL FOUST.

C. L. Rice, vice president of the Western Electric company, directed his attorneys yesterday to file a civil suit for damages this week against a convicted reckless driver. The announced purpose of the suit is to invoke Illinois' financial responsibility law to suspend the defendant's driver's and automobile licenses.



C. L. Rice.

"Through this law," said Rice, former president of the Greater Chicago Safety council, "we hope to achieve in the civil courts that which seemingly we were unable to do in the criminal courts. The monetary consideration in this case is quite incidental and trivial to the main point at issue—the safety of the streets for pedestrians and motorists."

Law Curbs Recklessness.

Under the financial responsibility law passed in 1938 by the special session of the legislature, an unpaid judgment in a civil suit for damages calls for suspension of the defendant's driver and auto licenses until the judgment is paid and an insurance policy posted to protect the public against loss from any future act of negligence by the defendant.

The defendant to be named in Rice's suit is Gentle Thompson, colored, of 2021 Polk street. He escaped serving out a fine in the Bridewell because Justice of Peace Rudolph C. Weichbrodt didn't want the taxpayers of Oak Park to have to pay 60 cents a day board for the prisoner while he was in the Chicago owned Bridewell. On June 2, the judge imposed a $200 fine against Thompson and then remitted $150 on a showing that the defendant could not pay the larger amount.

To work out $150 of the fine would have required 100 days in Bridewell. The board bill against the village of Oak Park for 100 days would have been $60.

Tried to Save Village Money.

In remitting the fine the judge cited this $60 as his motive in explaining his act to the complaining witness, J. Findlater, a chauffuer for the Western Electric company.

Cars driven by Findlater and by Thompson collided head on in Washington boulevard near Ridgeland avenue, Oak Park, on May 29. According to witnesses, Thompson drove on the left side of the street. Testimony showed he had been drinking.

S. J. Stevens, attorney for the Western Electric company, said a civil suit for $175 damages will be filed against Thompson tomorrow or Tuesday.

Same Bandit Holds Up Cafe 2d Time in 2 Weeks

For the second time in two weeks a dark haired bandit, who used his necktie to hide his small pistol, held up De Met's tearoom at 5 West Randolph early today. He approached the cashier, Miss Thelma Shaffer, showed her the gun, said, "You know what I want," pocketed about $75, and left. The tearoom was filled, but none of the patrons was threatened. The same bandit got about $100 two weeks ago, Miss Eunice Wiltshire, night manager, said.

Then the east lane will be closed for three weeks during similar repairs.

SUES RADIO STAR AS FATHER OF UNBORN CHILD

Los Angeles, Cal., Aug. 19 (AP).—In a $50,000 breach of promise suit, Meredith B. Davis, blonde actress, asks the court to declare Clarence Grigsby Stroud, one of the radio and screen Stroud twins, the father of her unborn child.

Meredith B. Davis.
[A. P. Wirephoto.]

Miss Davis said Stroud proposed to her in Philadelphia in December, 1938, and she, "succumbing to the blandishments and protestations of love and believing his promises to marry," began living with him as his wife.

The association continued, she declared, in New York City, Miami, Fla.; Toronto, Canada.; Atlanta, Ga., and Los Angeles. But when she told him last March she was expecting the stork in December, Miss Davis charged, Stroud deserted her and she became ill and destitute.

Placing the actor's salary at $1,500 a week, she also asked that he pay $1,100 for her hospitalization and medical care, $2,500 attorney fees and support of the child.

FLEES HOSPITAL AFTER CRASH AND HIDES IN A TREE

A man who fled yesterday from St. Joseph's hospital in Belvidere, Boone county, after he had been slightly injured in an automobile crash, was captured by policemen last night. He had hidden for hours in a tree near a hobo camp outside Belvidere. Many searchers had passed under the tree during the day.

The fugitive, who was held, is Charles A. Schultz, 30 years old, 2022 North California avenue. He said he ran away because he had "money troubles." A pistol was found in the rented car which he wrecked. The police started a search for Schultz after he left the hospital in the belief that he might be John McGuire, convict who escaped from Joliet penitentiary Wednesday.

Mystery Marks Shooting in Suburban Picnic Grove

Joseph Bojorinas, 23 years old, 3260 West 108th street, was shot in the abdomen and critically wounded last night at Simon's grove, 117th street and Homan avenue, Worth township. Bojorinas and two of his friends said he was shot by Frank Simon, owner of the place. Simon and a companion denied this, saying Bojorinas had been wounded before they arrived. Bojorinas was taken to Little Company of Mary hospital and the others to the Blue Island state police station.

SODIUM AND NEON TO LIGHT VIADUCT ON LARAMIE AVE.

Vapor Lamps Called Safer and Brighter.

Chicago's first extensive installation of modern sodium vapor street lamps will be made on the new $670,000 Laramie avenue viaduct, Arthur Engh, engineer for the board of local improvements, said yesterday. Sodium lamps need only one-third as much power to equal the brilliancy of ordinary incandescent lamps. And, according to many trafic engineers, they give a more revealing light.

The Laramie avenue viaduct, now under construction, extends from Roosevelt road to Lexington street over the tracks of the Great Western railroad. With approaches it will be 1,874 feet long. Nineteen lamps are to be mounted on 25 foot steel fluted poles. They will be placed 110 feet apart on both sides of the 44 foot roadway. The cost will total about $20,000.

How Lamps Operate.

Various manufacturers produce sodium lamps of different designs. But in all cases the principle of operation is the same. One of the commonest types consists of a sealed glass tube, 16 inches long and 3 inches in diameter, containing neon gas and sodium.

When the sodium is not in use it solidifies. The neon gas, heated when the electric current is turned on, raises the temperature in the tube, causing the sodium to vaporize. Light is produced by passing a spark through the gaseous mixture between two wire terminals of tungsten and molybdenum. The spark gap is about 9 inches. The resistance of the gases to the passage of the current produces a golden glow.

The bulb is inserted horizontally in a slightly larger glass flask which serves as the socket. Reflecting surfaces in the lamp holder are of polished aluminum. Illumination is distributed evenly on the pavement, Engh said, providing clearer visibility and resulting in safer driving.

Lamp Has Its Critics.

Critics of the sodium lamp contend its effectiveness is due to the design of the reflector rather than to the lamp itself, that its maintenance cost is more than that of ordinary lamps, and that it detracts from the pleasures of motoring by throwing the yellow light over the surroundings.

The first sodium lamps in this country were installed five years ago. Since then their use has spread to forty-two states. They have been installed on short stretches of highway near Chicago and on the Ogden avenue viaduct.

A year ago sodium lamps were installed at three dangerous intersections in the city. Trafic accidents at these points dropped 58 per cent while the lamps were in use. Officials were not convinced the lamps were responsible, and later they were removed.

CHICAGO WOMAN DIES OF INJURIES INCURRED IN WRECK OF IOWA BUS

Dubuque, Ia., Aug. 19 [Special].—Miss Ollie Strickland, 57 years old, of Chicago, died in a hospital here this morning of injuries incurred last night when a bus bound for Waterloo plunged over an embankment and burned. Her sister, Miss Lavon Strickland, 58, also of Chicago, is near death in a Manchester, Ia., hospital.

An unidentified youth burned to death in the bus wreckage five miles west of Dyersville last night. Four others were injured. Miss Lavon Strickland's right leg was amputated this morning and she is suffering from fractures and burns. Martin Woodhouse, 49, an El Pason locomotive engineer, is near death in a Dubuque hospital from a broken back and fractured skull.

The bus was driven by Paul Henkels, who said a tire blew out on a curve, plunging the bus through a fence and down the embankment.

AUTO COLLISION INJURY FATAL TO HOSPITAL HEAD

August E. Paul, 54 years old, superintendent of Roseland Community hospital and former assistant county superintendent of schools, died early today in St. Luke's hospital from injuries incurred in a minor automobile collision on Aug. 6 at 68th street and Cicero avenue. At the time it was believed that he had not been seriously hurt, but on last Tuesday he began suffering severe pains in his neck. Dr. Eric Oldberg of St. Luke's hospital staff diagnosed his trouble as a brain hemorrhage. An operation was performed at Roseland hospital Friday and another at St. Luke's on Saturday, but both were futile.

The collision was between Paul's car and one driven by Erwin Berman, 3354 Polk street, whose wife was with him at the time. Neither of the Bermans was injured.

Paul was well known in hospital and educational circles. Before going to Roseland, for ten years he was superintendent of Englewood hospital. Before that he was assistant to Edward J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools for five years, and was a Republican candidate for county superindent in 1934. He is survived by his wife, Olga, three daughters and a son. He resided at 1346 South 60th court, Cicero.

Albert Harrington, 62 years old, of 921 Cooper street, Michigan City, was killed and four persons were injured seriously yesterday afternoon in a crash of two automobiles on Indiana route 212, east of Michigan City.

The injured are Harrington's son, Albert Jr., 19; his daughter, June, 22; his nephew, Jacob Harrington, 12, and Frank Wirth, 46, of 5639 North Richmond street. The senior Harrington and Charles Boldt, 56, of 4550 Virginia avenue, were drivers of the cars. Boldt was not hurt. Wirth was a passenger in his car.

Three detectives of the Maxwell street station were injured last night when their squad car collided with an automobile driven by Charles Moore, colored, 3100 Ellis avenue, at 14th place and Union avenue. The detectives are Emmett Laughlin, 37, of 5516 Monroe street; Dennis Kehoe, 41, of 2312 35th street, and Ambrose Dorsey, 34, of 711 West 68th street. Laughlin suffered a fractured skull.

Jack Sollami, 23, of South Park, an Elgin suburb, and William Boyer, 143 North Hale street, Wheaton, a motorman, were injured seriously last evening when a Chicago, Aurora, and Elgin train struck Sollami's truck on a gravel road near the Clintonville station, four miles south of Elgin. The two men were taken to a hospital in Elgin.

Up to 2 p. m. yesterday 513 persons had been killed by automobiles in Cook county since Jan. 1. Of these 399 were killed in Chicago, where 13,491 were injured in trafic accidents in the same period.

A Recent Medical Survey Shows That Almost 50% of Men and 40% of Women in This Age Group with Stomach Trouble Have Peptic Ulcer, Gall-bladder Disease or Cancer

These conditions cannot be determined by symptoms alone. A sensitive stomach with no disease present may re-act the same as where a very serious condition exists. For this reason it is highly important that every stomach disorder be traced to its source and corrective treatment started without delay. For all symptoms if allowed to persist may be followed by dangerous organic changes.

The X-ray studies pictured above show five different conditions responsible for stomach distress. Three indicate serious diseases, two indicate no disease, yet symptoms in all five were practically the same. Symptoms that should receive early medical attention are: dyspepsia or indigestion, belching sour material, nausea, vomiting and abdominal pains.

Do not try to cure your stomach trouble with patent medicines, or self imposed diet. While they may afford temporary relief they may also actually jeopardize your chances of recovery through delay in the diagnosis of some malignant disease. Proper treatment cannot be instituted until the exact cause is revealed. An X-ray examination of the stomach, gall-bladder and intestinal tract is necessary to obtain the earliest and most positive diagnosis of a stomach disorder. Modern medicine recognizes this fact, but patients often fail to receive such examination on account of their excessive cost elsewhere.

These adequate medical services are not expensive procedures at a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE. For the past six and one-half years X-ray examinations as well as other modern medical facilities have been made available to all income groups within their ability to pay. And what is more important, a UNITED MEDICAL SERVICE is a complete and fully responsible service. It was organized by Dr. Joseph G. Berkowitz, outstanding pioneer in providing low cost medical care to the people of Chicago for the past nineteen years. His medical associates are men of long experience and training with special knowledge in the different fields of medicine. If you are ill come to this well equipped responsible medical organization and let its well trained physicians determine the cause and prescribe proper treatment. Note the low fees for the many different services.

124th Artillery Leader Reports on Funds.

Rental of the 124th Field Artillery's armory at 5200 Cottage Grove avenue during 1938 brought $6,040 into the armory fund, Col. Charles C. Haffner Jr., commanding the regiment, said yesterday. This is in addition to income received by the regiment from its own shows.

The uses of the armory became the object of several investigations following the slaying there on Aug. 9 of Miss Elsa Doolewerdt, 23 years old. She was the sweetheart of Private Frank Japczynski, 47, a divorced man, who shot her to death in the armory and later killed himself outside.

Question of Propriety Raised.

Because the couple had spent some time together in the armory that evening, the question was raised of the propriety of allowing unchaperoned young women in the building after the general public is excluded.

"In accordance with our policy and under regulations as to closing hours which we believed to be adequate, the parents, wives, children, and friends of our seven hundred members have visited the armory to witness our drills and activities and to meet their menfolk without the slightest intimation of impropriety having been brought to my attention from any source," Col Haffner said.

"I would regret very much the necessity of denying them this privilege because of the misdeed of one deranged individual, for this privilege also has had its part in building up a high type of personnel. A statement of the circumstances incident to the presence of the woman in the armory and her death, as far as we are able to establish the facts, has been given the adjutant general."

Rented for Auto Racing.

For several years the armory has been rented on Sunday evenings each winter for midget auto racing, Col. Haffner added.

"In the fall the armory is rented on Saturday nights for four or five high school football games and one or two college games," his statement continued. "For several years it has been rented once each year to the charity basket committees of our two neighboring wards.

"For boxing I believe we have had only three or four tenants in several years. From rentals in the calendar year 1938, $6,040 was obtained. Expenditures for this period were made for repairs, improvements, equipment, and furniture to make more adequate the facilities of the armory; military supplies and miscellaneous training material, recruiting expenses, and athletic supplies and expenses, all upon requisition and audit.

Feels Troops Are Benefited.

"I believe the rentals of the armories throughout the state are a great benefit to the efficiency and well being of the troops."

Col. Haffner listed other income as follows: $559, net, from football games; $7,070 during the 1938-'39 general series of polo and military shows, and $2,035 from a special show last spring before camp. The latter sum was distributed among eleven batteries.

In the past there have been complaints against the use of armories in competition with tax paying businesses. The 124th Field Artillery armory was completed in 1931 at a cost of $1,500,000, borne by the taxpayers of Illinois. The land was donated by the park board. When the armory was opened it was announced that the proceeds of the polo and other shows would go to a fund being raised by the then Gov. Emmerson for unemployment purposes.

The Inquiring Reporter

The Question.

Do you favor a shorter summer vacation for school children.

Where Answered.

In the loop.

The Answers.

Miss Lucy Biegay, 2144 North Spaulding avenue, clerk—No. As a matter of fact, I think they could stand a little more vacation. Children should get all the benefits of summer that they can. An additional two weeks would be appreciated by most of them, I think. Too much sunshine and play can certainly do no harm.

Mrs. Bess Oberbillig, 3747 Diversey avenue, housewife—I think the present length of summer vacations could be reduced without resentment either by children or parents. I know that my daughter is always eager to get back to school and there are a lot of others like her. There'd be no danger, I think, in lopping off about two weeks.

George Wolfenden, 1032 East 75th street, truck driver—It's all right just as it is—not too long, not too short. Children need the summer months to build themselves up for the school year. They begin to get restless by about June and are eager to get out and relax. To cut the present vacation would be a pretty unpopular thing.

Mrs. Joseph Biro, 2858 North Kildare avenue, housewife—I don't think it would be wise to cut the vacation. Children work hard in school most of the year and they're entitled to all the vacation they can get. As soon as it starts to get warm they find it hard to keep their minds on their studies, anyway. If anything, I think they could stand an additional week or so.

John Rot, 77th street and Mansfield avenue, truck farmer—I have six children, three of school age, but I think that it would be better if the vacations were cut shorter. Most children get tired of playing around by the time late August comes around. Two months—July and August—should be enough vacation.

A GENTLE PRIEST BIDS 3,000 COME HOME FOR PEACE

He Finds the Country Air Good After 40 Years.

Nine miles south and west of Kankakee the spire of the little white Church of the Sacred Heart raises the benediction of its cross above lush acres of green and golden grain; above the roof tops of the half dozen small homes that constitute the hamlet of Goodrich.

That way this morning 3,000 persons will be headed to attend the seventeenth homecoming festival of the country parish. Hundreds from Chicago, seventy miles distant, will be in the throng.

This year an additional tug on nostalgic ties is drawing old neighbors and friends back to Goodrich. For it was just forty years ago that Father Joseph Meyer celebrated the first mass of his pastorate there.

He's Part of Countryside.

Today at 74, Father Joseph, gray, benign, scholarly, a gentle old priest in a frayed coat, is as much a part of the rural scene as the fine old poplars that shade the road to the rectory.

Small wonder the confused, the weary and the burdened find their way back to the garden where, at the twilight hour, Father Joseph walks between the flower beds and the beehives, his dogs, Spitz and Spitzy, at his heels. It is a soothing spot.

Father Joseph was born in Somonauk, De Kalb county. But when he was still a small boy, his parents, Alsatian immigrants, returned to their homeland. There, after fourteen years of study and travel, he was ordained in 1892. Father Joseph returned to Chicago and for five years was curate at St. Boniface church.

Languages Key to Usefulness.

His knowledge of French and German, he recounts with quiet humor, proved his undoing. The Goodrich farming district was settled by French-Canadian and German immigrant farmers, and they were pleading for a priest who could speak to them in their native tongues.

Archbishop Feehan called Father Joseph in and explained their needs. The scholarly young priest showed some reluctance.

"Ah, but Father, the country air will do you good," was the venerable prelate's reply.

He left it to the years to reveal to the young priest the broader truth implied.

"I know now what was in his mind," Father Joseph says. "It is so simple. All God's air is good."

THE LIBERALS.

Mr. Roosevelt in his message to the young Democrats in their national convention at Pittsburgh said that if the Democratic party nominated a Tory Tweedledum he personally would find it impossible to have any active part in such an unfortunate suicide of the old Democratic party. He would take a walk if the convention nominated conservative or lip service candidates on a straddlebug platform. Mr. Roosevelt said he didn't anticipate that any such event would take place because he thought the party would follow liberal leadership and maintain the policy of moving forward with a liberal program.

What and who are these liberal guys who must control the Democratic party if it is to retain the support of Mr. Roosevelt? Senator Claude Pepper of Florida was the keynoter of the young Democrats' convention, so presumably he is a liberal, and he probably would offer the Florida ship canal as proof of it. Although the greatest of liberals, Mr. Roosevelt, tried to give it to him, he failed to get it because sensible senators led by Vandenberg of Michigan objected to spending some 500 million dollars on a salt water ditch the steamship companies didn't want and most of the fruit growers opposed.

Mr. Pepper is not as liberal as he would like to be, but that is merely because they kept him from liberalizing with other people's money. When we look over the names of persons who are or who have been associated with Mr. Roosevelt in liberal political activities we find it difficult to herd the black sheep from the white woolly ones.

Mr. Raymond Moley may have been a liberal once when he was telling Mr. Roosevelt what his policies were and writing the White House speeches and state papers so the chief could understand them, but Mr. Moley cannot be a liberal now because he says he doesn't think Mr. Roosevelt has always known exactly what he was about. Mr. Moley readily concedes that when the New Deal was any good he was the brains of it, but he is no longer with it and therefore he is no longer a liberal.

When the New Deal was a flourishing young thing and was going to put the country back in high speed in about a year and a half, Gen. Hugh Johnson and Donald Richberg were our leading liberals. Gen. Johnson was the liberal boss of American industry and Mr. Richberg was the great liberal coördinator, second in command to Mr. Roosevelt himself. Mr. Richberg is now a representative of the American oil companies in negotiations with our state department and the Mexican government, and is probably as Tory as Wall street. Gen. Johnson is a thumping critic of New Deal absurdities and faults. He is another enemy of society.

Dr. Rexford Tugwell for a time was the chief idea man of the revolution and one of its most distinguished liberals. He was liberal not only in ideas but with such money as he could get for charming little resettlement enterprises which look cute on the landscape. No one could ever discover what good they did the country. They merely caused the people to wonder why a few persons should get benefits the rest couldn't have. Mr. Tugwell left the government to go into the sugar business briefly, and since then has been mainly inarticulate. He may still be a liberal.

Harry Hopkins has been taken off the big spending job of the WPA. He was put in the department of commerce, where he at once committed the indiscretion of saying that business could cheer up because the era of reform was over and it could be hoped that the era of recovery had begun. That was no way for a liberal to talk. Mr. Roosevelt at once squelched his new secretary of commerce, whose career as appeaser was over almost before it was started. Mr. Hopkins no longer is in the public funds to be liberal, and we may suppose that he is now rated as a Tory.

Most of the liberals who started the New Deal gayly on its way, headed for the more abundant life and greener pastures, are now either busy making hay for themselves or are shouting opprobrious comments at the revolution. Mr. Roosevelt regards many of them as apostates and has stricken them off the list. But he has retained the affections and loyalties of other liberals. Senator Pepper is one of them. He still hopes that a third term will get him his ship canal millions and he will be liberal as long as he thinks he has a chance.

[illegible]es of New York was a liberal until Dewey convicted him as a crook. Senator Joseph Guffey of Pennsylvania is still a liberal. It is true that Pennsylvania is full of investigators trying to discover all the various forms of New Deal liberality, for which another name is scandal. Senator Key Pittman probably will rate as a liberal as long as Mr. Roosevelt pays the price Mr. Pittman wants for silver, but all the liberal silver senators will gang up with any political bunch that will help them sustain the silver market by law.

Senator Burton Wheeler was a liberal until he refused to stand for the court packing bill, whereupon he became a Tory. Senator George of Georgia was one of the grandest liberals of them all until he also refused to support the court bill. Then Mr. Roosevelt endeavored to cast him out. Sam Rayburn was a liberal until he said he was for Jack Garner. That made him a Tweedledummer. Alben Barkley is still a forward looking liberal, the beneficiary of treasury donations, of which Mr. Roosevelt reminds the voters of Kentucky. It pays to be liberal. McNutt and Minton of Indiana are liberals.

The stalwarts who stick by Mr. Roosevelt with promises of fealty to the death, the great liberals who tell him that his life does not belong to him but to his people who intend to draft him for the third term, are machine Democratic politicians who have obtained more money out of the federal treasury than they had ever dreamed would be possible before Mr. Roosevelt opened the sluices. The liberals are the gogetters who are responsible for the debt and deficit, who have organized the high pressure groups of money getters, and who will stick to Mr. Roosevelt as long as they think there is a dollar to be had.

These liberals have filled their states with scandals, the true proportions of which will not be known until a change of administration permits the full disclosures. They have flourished as politicians never flourished before. When they lose the New Deal they will lose their meal ticket. They are yelling for their chief to continue in office and protect their emoluments, and also to keep them out of trouble.

The contrast between their character and their acts and the character and acts of the men Mr. Roosevelt reads out of the party is so striking that every observer can see what scamps the liberals are and just what their game is. The great hoax of the New Deal is the designation of these men as superior public moralists, liberal advocates of the people's rights, and sponsors of a finer order of society.

Other New Deal liberals are the collectivist radicals who try to put up a moral front for their shady associates.

EARL BALDWIN'S DEMOCRACY.

Earl Baldwin of Bewdley—Stanley Baldwin, the former prime minister of Great Britain—made his first speech to an American audience on Wednesday at a dinner session of the Congress on Education for Democracy. The real purposes of this congress, under the auspices of Teachers' college, Columbia university, have been suspected on several counts. The program purported to present a symposium on a troubled subject.

Distinguished speakers were to discuss the state of health of democracy in countries where it is regarded as the greatest blessing, and in international relations where it is supposed to be threatened. The left wing tendency of many of the speakers led to the thought that more democracy as designed by brain trusters was the idea for the United States and that the support of imperialistic democracy in world relations was another objective of the congress.

Many of the American left wingers find it possible to reconcile two contrary ideas—one that the ordinary man in the United States has been underprivileged because of the political injustice of his old democratic system, and the other that the imperialistic status quo in all other countries is the best political arrangement that could be made and must be defended all over the world lest democracy collapse.

That Stanley Baldwin had the exigencies of the British empire and the destiny of the British people in mind when he made his first speech to Americans, over the air as well as at the dinner, cannot be doubted. He couldn't be expected to talk without having in the back of his mind the uncertain near future of the many lands over which his flag now waves.

He was prime minister in a period which he says was of such rapid evolution that it seemed to outrun the best efforts of governments to make required economic and political changes. However, he is too sage a statesman, and too tactful a visitor, to offer any direct appeal to American sentiment for immediate aid to the British, even on the score of democracy Americans and Britons are supposed to possess in common. He could leave that to trans-Atlantic Americans, providing them merely with the general thought that what America prizes here is equally prized in the land from which American democracy had its root growth. America thus is joined to England, not to India, Hongkong, Togoland, the Sudan, Tanganyika, Somaliland, the Cameroons, Trans-Jordan, Gibraltar, and the Mediterranean Islands.

The sympathetic understanding and coöperation which Earl Baldwin invited was that of the American who freely elects his representatives and breathes free air with the Englishman who at home does the same thing. Despite the distinguished visitor's consideration for many of the large truths, in the maintenance of which Americans and Englishmen agree, it must be emphasized for Americans, before they are led to decisions, that the democracy discussed is not, because it is democracy, threatened in Great Britain. The British would have to defend that only against themselves if a power arose among them seeking to destroy it. The questions which imperil peace are not found in the home habits of the democracies; they are found in inferior lands where that democracy does not apply. They are found where democracy is an overlord holding possessions and ruling peoples. They are found in the possessions of these democracies where people are not free and where they do not govern themselves.

The peril arises where there is no Magna Carta, where there has been no successful Declaration of Independence, where the privileges and rights of Englishmen and Americans do not exist, and where the liberty which is worth the sacrifice of life to maintain is not extended. These lands and these peoples have been obtained by force and the logic of possession and retention may require that they be defended and kept by force.

Upon that issue it must be apparent that the United States has not a common cause with Great Britain and France. Nothing else is needed to prove it than our withdrawal from the Philippines. We may be led away from the recognition of this fact, but it would be against the sounder judgment of the American people and to their great injury. Democracy does not fight imperialistic wars.

BOOSTS TAXES; FRENCH LIKE HIM

[Correspondence of the Associated Press.]

PARIS.—Finance Minister Paul Reynaud, a tough little mountaineer with a hard business head, announces he has extracted 24,927,000,000 francs [about $660,000,000] from French taxpayers in the first six months of 1939.

That's just about $136,000,000 more than in the like period of 1938. Under normal French political rules that would mean M. Reynaud would be just that much more unpopular than he was last year.

Reynaud, however, has reversed the political rule in France. He has turned the office of finance minister from the post of "cabinet goat" into a job that has made him second only to Premier Edouard Daladier in popularity.

French business men call the government the Daladier-Reynaud combine. A leading foreign economist resident in France commented, "It pays to pay taxes in France," and added:

"Although taxes are excessively high, not in years has France had so much for her money in able administration."

Production indices rose from 83 last October to 97 in May. Exports were 32 per cent above exports for May, 1938, in value. Ten times more workmen were doing overtime work in May, 1939, than in November of last year. In June, normally a dull month, there were 14,000 less unemployed than in November when the new overtime work schedules began.

The man behind these figures is the 5 foot 5 inch Reynaud from Barcelonette in the Alpine foothills. His bright, sparkling eyes and general alertness make him look nearer 40 than his actual 61 years.

Most of France's conservative business men would be surprised if they knew of the colorful career that lies behind Paul Reynaud's staid business man's dress.

He was arrested in Japan for photographing fortifications. ["That should be no disgrace," he said, "for the Japanese are a super-suspicious people."]

He traveled around the world three times. ["I'd like to do it three times more if I had the time."]

He was French liaison officer with the famed Czecho-Slovak legion that crossed Siberia at the world war's end. ["I didn't worry about balanced budgets then."]

He has traveled extensively many times in England, Spain, Germany, and America. He speaks English and Spanish almost as well as he speaks French. ["It's nice to know how to do business in three languages."]

Reynaud's father went to Mexico to make his fortune and did so. He returned to France and settled down in Barcelonette, where Paul Reynaud learned what France's famed Marshal Hubert Lyautey called "clear headed mountain thinking."

Young Reynaud, as one of the lawyers who aspired to the post of secretary to the conference of lawyers, began his oration in a competition for the post on the subject of the radical statesman, Waldeck Rousseau. His elders, horrified, informed him that he could not be heard on that subject because it smacked of politics.

"All right," Reynaud said, "I'll tell you about the execution of Charles I. of England."

He did and his speech was so good that he not only won the competition but the admiration of a girl who heard him, daughter of Henri Robert, leader of the French bar. She became his wife.

After a brilliant career in the army during the war he was elected deputy from the provinces in 1919 and later, in 1924, became the deputy for the financial district of Paris which he has represented ever since.

He became minister of finance in the second Andre Tardieu cabinet in 1930, minister of colonies in two Pierre Laval cabinets from 1931 to 1932, and minister of justice in the Tardieu cabinet of 1932.

Then Reynaud became the victim of his convictions, a political martyr for his ideas. First of all, he was of the small minority which backed Edouard Herriot's insistence that the French debt to America must be paid. That was unpopular enough.

Secondly, when the pound sterling dropped in 1931 Reynaud began insisting that the franc, too, must be devalued. For years, although he managed to keep his seat in parliament, he stood almost alone among the deputies, laughed at and scorned for this devaluation idea.

By 1936 a few deputies had turned to follow him and by the end of that year the whole chamber agreed with him. Then when the government of Socialist Premier Leon Blum finally devalued the franc Paul Reynaud announced flatly that "It is good that it has finally come, but it comes too late."

When Daladier took power with his ideas of strengthening France at home and abroad with the sole war cry, "Defense of the nation," he persuaded Reynaud to join him as finance minister.

Reynaud, who is a rightist, although he still steers clear of party bonds, won the immediate admiration of government and business by carving down the cost of government, raising government income toward meeting all but the armament expenses, and generally putting government on a business basis.

'HOT MONEY' IN ARGENTINA

BY HAROLD TATAM.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES.—Argentina again is receiving a steady stream of so-called "hot money," although it remains to be seen how much of it is really of the "hot" variety and how much of it will find permanent investment in the country.

A few years ago financial circles raised an outcry against the arrival of "hot money." Eventually they discovered that many of the much maligned "hot money merchants" were actual capitalists. Frightened over conditions in Europe, these capitalists sought safer investment for their money in business here.

On the former occasion the heavy temporary purchases of gilt edged bonds caused the bonds to soar and also enabled several municipal issues to convert their interest rates of 6 and 7 per cent to 5 per cent.

Something on the same line is taking place at the present time. Bonds are soaring and most of the government issues and the national mortgage bonds which enjoy a government guarantee are being quoted over par. The daily turnover is also very heavy.

However, the free market exchange rate has been little affected by this influx of money.

Old established industrialists who, behind a high tarif wall, have been doing well for a long time past, are not altogether pleased at the prospect of their ranks being swelled by European competitors.

As no re-export of "hot money" can occur without the government taking a rake-off through its exchange control office, the situation is viewed complacently in official quarters.

WHAT HAPPENS IN APOPLEXY.

We use the words "stroke" or "apoplexy" to indicate hemorrhage into the brain—a dramatic episode as sudden sometimes as though the victim had been assaulted viciously. The condition appears in middle age or later and is associated with high blood pressure, brittle arteries, and possibly kidney disease. The one who presents a steadily mounting level and whose vessels are not as rubbery as they once were need not be surprised if rupture of a capillary is experienced.

Unfortunately, we have not as yet been able to identify the sole factor responsible for arteriosclerosis. The chances are that it is a food ailment with a weak link in the chain of digestion. In consequence, chemicals are formed which injure the delicate lining cells of the blood channels, rendering them more fragile. Those who overeat and exercise too little comprise the majority of sufferers. In addition to the hardening process, many tiny arterial branches, subjected to a greater load than normal, will develop minute aneurysms or outpocketings of their walls. Because of this stretching, the areas are thinner than they should be and hence are more likely to burst.

Let us suppose that from sudden exertion or other cause which increases the pound within the conduits, one of these areas gives way. The outpouring of blood may be so profuse that compression of the brain substance will be incompatible with life. If the leakage is slow, symptoms will increase gradually for twenty-four hours or longer and the outcome will depend upon the extent of the bleeding as well as the region of the brain involved.

As a rule, the first indication is unconsciousness. This is due to shock and to the fact that a foreign body—the blood clot—is impinging upon the nervous tissue. If paralysis ensues without this symptom, we may assume that a plug has shut off nourishment to some portion. A quick examination will disclose usually that the muscles are flabby on one side of the body and the eyes are turned away from the paralyzed part. Occasionally the limbs will exhibit twitchings. With others there will be a complete loss of speech, and drowsiness may deepen until the patient cannot be roused.

Minor and minute episodes generally start with a sense of numbness in the fingers or hand, followed by some weakness. If this passes away within a short while the condition is of no special moment, but if it persists we must admit to ourselves that fractional oozing, at least, has probably taken place. While repetition of manifestations of this sort should be viewed with concern, a single episode may not be serious. In fact, there are thousands of persons who have been thus afflicted but are now able to carry on their usual activities. It all depends upon the size of the lesion.

Let us assume that a stroke has occurred. If the force of the circulation remains too high, bleeding may be resorted to in an effort to prevent further damage. It is no uncommon practice to withdraw 15 to 20 ounces just as we would divert water from a stream at flood stage. It is highly important that the patient be kept quiet, with as little movement as possible. If he can be allowed to remain where he is for an hour or two, life may be saved. The head should be raised moderately, warmth applied to the extremities, and an enema of magnesium sulphate administered.

If consciousness returns within twenty-four hours, recovery may be anticipated, although a second attack may alter the outlook. If some paralysis remains, massage is our chief reliance. This should be employed daily for several months and every precaution taken to avoid excitement, worry, and apprehension.

Care must be observed not to confuse apoplexy with hemorrhage just beneath the membrane which lines the skull. Occasionally—because of the strain of coughing or intense muscular effort—a small vein in this vicinity may tear through. Subsequently there comes an intense headache with pain in the back of the neck which extends down to the legs. The senses are rarely disturbed and within a few days absorption takes place and the individual is quite himself.

IT'S PROBABLY ARTHRITIS.

L. D. writes: Upon rising in the morning, I feel as though the lower back would break in two. Might this be a sign of kidney trouble or constipation?

REPLY.

Neither. Probably arthritis. A careful checkup is advised.

NOT IF THEY FUNCTION.

J. G. writes: Is it dangerous for a woman with a dropped kidney to become pregnant?

REPLY.

Not if both organs are functioning properly. The position of a kidney may not interfere with its power to secrete urine.

DEPENDS ON CAUSE.

M. A. H. writes: Will the drinking of milk or citrus fruits help bleeding gums?

REPLY.

If the disorder is due to a mild type of scurvy, citrus fruits will be curative. Milk will merely add to your nutrition.

NOT MUCH.

T. B. T. writes: Do the health-giving rays of the sun pass through clothing?

REPLY.

If the clothing is thin and porous—to a slight extent. Any substance—even a piece of glass between the skin and the sun—serves as a filter.

WHY TAKE CHANCES?

R. H. writes: Is it all right for one who had a fractured skull about two years ago to take up boxing?

REPLY.

There is some danger. Why take a chance? Boxers are not gentle.

AN INFECTION.

E. M. writes: What do pus cells in the urine indicate?

REPLY.

Some infection along the urinary tract—within the kidney or the bladder.

WHAT ABOUT OTHER RENTERS?

Chicago, Aug. 15.—I resent your unfair attitude toward federal housing projects in Chicago as exemplified in your editorial, "Pretty Soft for the Housing Projects." You show definitly that you are not interested in having the government come to the aid of the citizens in securing a decent place to live. That the constitution was adopted for the purpose, among other things, of promoting the general welfare of the people of this country, seems to have been forgotten by you. And furthermore, the citizens of the country are going to insist more and more that their government shall be active and not merely passive.

You said the service charges paid by the housing authority to the city of Chicago last year amounted to $39,731 while the taxes would have been $494,000 if the property was assessed like other apartments and houses in Chicago. I assume those figures are correct. But you would be fair if you would tell how much money was paid in taxes on the same properties the year before the housing projects were erected. Taking this into consideration, I feel that the city has gained instead of lost by the erection of the projects.

You say the beneficiaries of the projects are not people of lowest income brackets. You state that would-be tenants must be able to pay $275 annual rental. This is less than $6 per week for a family, and when an American family has an income sufficient only to pay that sum for rent it should not be envied of the aid given it by its government.

FINDS SNITE JR. AN EXAMPLE.

Hammond, Ind., Aug. 15.—I have been greatly interested in the fact that Fred Snite Jr., although fortunate in having the financial and personal aid of his parents to help him in his fight against paralysis, has remained a blessing to his parents, his wife, and his many friends, and has created an example worthy of imitation by every discouraged, afflicted, or seemingly helpless person, and especially the youth of our beloved country. I admire his recent act in marrying the girl who has been loyal all these years—the wife who will share whatever the future might hold for this fine man.

I thank God I am able to walk into the fieldhouse and on the football field every time the trailer holding Fred Snite Jr. is driven to one end of the field, and only hope that some day I may have the pleasure of seeing him in the stands the same as you and I.

A FOLLOWER OF ATHLETICS.

LIGHTS ON THE LOWER LEVEL.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Would it be possible in the near future to install better lighting for the benefit of the pedestrians along the lower level of Wacker drive, especially adjacent to the Merchandise Mart?

In the fall and winter seasons when darkness approaches before the rush hour, and homebound workers are hurrying for L trains and surface line cars, the lack of light now experienced is indeed dangerous.

How about more illumination before next winter rolls around?

GRACE E. FLEMMING.

NOISY, LATE "TAVERNS."

Chicago, Aug. 16.—I live in the 3700 block of Sawyer avenue, and directly behind me on Kedzie avenue is a tavern. Since the new ordinance permitting these places to operate later they are making a greater nuisance of themselves, especially on Sunday mornings.

Cannot something be done at least to quiet these places down? Last Sunday morning at 2:30 I called the police out of desperation after lying awake for over two hours. I was told by the desk sergeant that there was nothing to be done about it.

WANTS SKEEZIX "KEPT CLEAN."

Chicago, July 14.—Gasoline Alley thus far has been truly a comic strip. I for one sincerely trust it is not destined to degenerate into a crime strip, as there is some indication now that such is to be the fate of Skeezix. In my opinion Gasoline Alley is the only serial picture fit for home use or use anywhere. There must be at least one artist who can depict something other than depravity. It is somewhat of a mystery where all the pictorial dramas of meanness originate, whether through a liaison with the underworld or whether the artists' minds are depraved enough to imagine them.

An editorial on the subject of "good conduct inculcated by pictorial dramas of brutality and crime" might be of more interest than editorial writers suspect, provided one was written in proper accord with civic decency.

At any rate let our beloved Skeezix go on his way without encountering a retinue of scalawags, policemen, handcuffs, jail cells and double-crossings with all the attendant disgrace and humiliation. Gasoline Alley has been clean and decent to date. Let it remain so. We have too many thug dramas now. Yours for clean entertainment,

NOTES COURTESY WEEK.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The week of Aug. 27 to Sept. 2 is the second annual Courtesy week. Why not make headlines of this subject and leave out murders and bloodshed for this short period?

After all—courtesy, friendliness, kindness and good neighborliness among its people are what go to make a better city. These subjects should reach the headlines of every paper in Chicago; they should be preached from the pulpit and be one of the main subjects in a child's education.

Courtesy means a kindly, considerate attitude toward every one. It is an expression of good fellowship, a symbol of fine breeding. It springs naturally from the kindly heart. It is the manner of the man or woman gently bred.

W. G. ECHOLS.

STENO. CHISELERS.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Do you, while traveling, impose upon your friends' stenographers for your work? Do you say to your friends: "I have a short note. Could I borrow your stenographer a moment" and then proceed to tie up her time for an hour's dictation plus another hour for transcribing? Your friend, of course, smilingly consents with "Sure, go ahead, she hasn't anything to do, anyway."

If you do these things, then you are a steno. chiseler! Stenographers have work to do; otherwise they wouldn't be hired. Your work represents just so much excess and she will probably have to stay overtime in order to get out her regular allotment. There are stenographers especially trained and equipped to handle travelers' dictation. Why not use them?

EXECUTOR OF ESTATE.

Chicago, Aug. 10 [Legal Friend of the People].—My grandfather died leaving my three uncles executors, without bond, of his will. My grandfather set aside $15,000 to invest in interest bearing securities [but they invested it in a business building], and to keep it invested during the remainder of my mother's life so as to give her interest and income. After my mother's death this said fund is to be divided equally between my two brothers and myself. During this time my mother has received $24,000 interest and now my uncles wish to clear up the estate by paying us $1,200 each, as they say that is all that is left. The building they claim can only be sold for about $4,000 during these times.

1. Can we hold them responsible for the full amount of $15,000, as they are wealthy?
2. If so, what action would be advisable?
3. Would I have to settle for the $1,200 when we were to get $5,000 each?
4. Would we have to go to probate after it was probated more than ten years ago?
5. Would we have to pay inheritance tax?

J. B.

1. If there has been a loss due to their failure to obey the wording of the will the chances of holding them would seem good enough to warant employing an attorney.
2. Employ an attorney.
3. See 1 and 2.
4. The question is whether the probate has been completed.
5. It seems probable that an inheritance tax was charged in the original proceedings.

CONSERVATOR ONE WAY.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A woman has been committed to a mental institution, and through an estate has received her share. The check is for a small amount. Who has authority to take charge of such matters? She has a husband and daughter of legal age.

N. C.

Technically the proper procedure would be to have a conservator appointed to handle her assets. If the amount of the check is so small that it would be negligible, you might persuade the drawer of the check to substitute a new one payable to her husband.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

JOINT BANK ACCOUNT.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—If a bank account is in two people's names, reading thusly: Mrs. S. or Miss S., and Mrs. S. dies, [1] does Miss S.'s name become invalid and the account turned over to the estate or heirs?

2. If the heirs do not have the will filed or probated immediately do they receive a notice from the court within a month after the death of the deceased to file same and is there a charge for the notice?

E. B.

1. The bare facts that you state would not be enough to create a joint tenancy and hence the survivor principal would not operate, but we suggest that you talk to the officers of the bank to ascertain if additional facts are not involved.

2. On the bare facts that you state we see no reason why any one would have a motive for initiating such action, but the statute requires that the will shall be at least filed.

CHICAGO BRIDE DIES IN NEW YORK HOTEL PLUNGE

Ends Her Life After First Honeymoon Quarrel.

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—Mrs. Ruth Banker Morris, 31 years old, a Chicago nurse who was married here a week ago, plunged to her death today from the ninteenth floor of the Hotel Taft, 15 minutes after registering there. Her body was found on a two story extension in front of the hotel. Police said she ended her life after her first honeymoon quarrel.

Mrs. Morris, for five years an industrial nurse employed by the Continental Can company in Chicago, came to New York last Saturday and was married to Sam W. Morris, editor of a motion picture trade daily and formerly a Chicago and Detroit newspaper man. With her was her niece, Miss Polly Sheppard, 1939 Lincoln avenue, Chicago, who was maid of honor in the ceremony at the Little Church Around the Corner. Others at the ceremony were Morris's sisters, Miss Molly and Miss Helen Morris of Baltimore.

Rent an Apartment.

The newlyweds lived for three days at the Piccadilly hotel here, then for two days at 64 Greenwich street, when they took an apartment at 68 West 10th street to set up housekeeping. Miss Sheppard returned to Chicago late yesterday. The sisters had returned to Baltimore.

Late this afternoon, Mrs. Morris came to the Hotel Taft without luggage and registered, saying her husband would arrive later.

In a few minutes another guest of the hotel phoned the desk that a body had gone by his window. Mrs. Morris's body was found on the ledge.

Police Quiz Husband.

Morris was questioned by detectives and he said he and his bride had their first quarrel this morning. He said it was a simple "husband and wife tiff," but his bride rushed out of the apartment in anger. He believed, he said, that she would return in a short time. He did not know where she had gone until he received notice of her death, he told police.

Police said there was no question that the case was suicide: footprints were found on the windowsill of her room.

Miss Sheppard, reached in Chicago, said she could not understand Mrs. Morris' act, that she had seemed happy after the wedding. Mrs. Morris was expected back in Chicago on Sept. 5 to teach her duties to her successor at the can company's plant.

Mary Pickford Tells Plans for Returning to Movies

Mary Pickford is going to return to the movies, she said yesterday as she stopped at Chicago airport on her way from the east to Kansas City, Mo. There, she said, she will meet officials of United Artists corporation to discuss future pictures. She said her first production is to be a revival of the mystery show, "The Bat."

ROB AIRPORT HANGAR OF $300.

VANDALS WRECK SUMMER HOME; BOMB ANOTHER

Belleville, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—Vandals early today destroyed the interior of a summer home and bombed another partly finished house in suburban Fairview. Two months ago another partly completed house was bombed.

Fairview, a new subdivision, lies between the jurisdictions of East St. Louis and O'Fallon building trades unions. The houses damaged today were built by union labor from the O'Fallon jurisdiction where the wage scale is lower than it is in East St. Louis.

The St. Clair county sheriff's office was without clews to the vandals and theorized that the destruction was the result of disputes between the two labor factions.

SHIP SINKS IN STORM OFF ALASKA; 3 LOSE LIVES; FIVE ARE SAVED

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 19 (AP).—The coast guard cutter Cyane reported today Capt. George Lee and two others were lost in the sinking of the cannery tender, O. M. Arnold. The vessel sank yesterday in Chatham strait north of Ketchikan, Alaska, after foundering in a storm. Five of the crew were rescued. The Cayne, which picked up the five survivors after they had been found by a troller, wirelessed headquarters here bodies of the three missing men were floating on the water in life preservers. Besides Capt. Lee the victims were Andrew Lee of Angoon, Alaska, father of the captain, and Ernest Cruse of Juneau.

FOX LAKE FLYERS ON NONSTOP TRY LAND IN 9 HOURS

William Solberg and Homer Seavey, flyers seeking a new nonstop record, were forced down at 9:55 a. m. yesterday at the Lake Region airport, Fox Lake, nine hours and four minutes after they took off.

They were carrying twenty-nine extra gallons of gasoline in a spare tank. They were unable to transfer the fuel from this tank into the regular tank by means of a flexible rubber tube, as they had planned. They had intended to use the extra gasoline first, then refuel by hauling up cans of fuel from a speed boat on Fox lake.

Their ship is a Piper Cub with a 55 hore power motor. The nonstop record for light planes is 343 hours 46 minutes, set by Humphrey and Hunter Moody of Springfield.

THREE BLOCKS ARE BOUGHT BY BUILDING FIRM

Neighboring Owners Will Pass on Plans.

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

Fifty-four brick houses of five, six, and seven rooms, are contemplated by Lombard Terrace Homes, Inc., in a new addition to that concern's 130 acre development in the northwest corner of Lombard.

The corporation recently purchased three blocks adjoining Lombard Terrace, from Charles H. Cress & Co. The land bought has been replatted into fifty-four lots, none of which is less than 65 by 161 feet and most of them are larger.

According to H. M. Zemon, president of Lombard Terrace Homes, Inc., which has offices at 201 North Wells street, plans already have been made for four brick homes. All of them have been sold. Robert H. Salisbury of Wheaton is architect.

32 New Homes This Year.

With the exception of two model houses, all of the forty-seven residences in Lombard Terrace have been built to order. Thirty-two of these homes have been erected since the first of this year.

Most of the residences already built are of frame construction. In the new area just purchased only brick houses will be built. It also will be restricted to houses costing $5,000 and more.

In order to insure satisfied neighbors as well as satisfied home owners, all plans for new homes will be submitted to nearby property owners for approval. A committee representing the residents in North View, a subdivision of Charles H. Cress & Co., adjoining Lombard Terrace on the east, which is restricted to $7,500 houses, will pass on all plans before construction is begun.

Cost $6,500 Each.

The four brick homes, which are to be built at once, will cost $6,500 each. All are being financed with Federal Housing administration 4½ per cent insured mortgages made through the Percy Wilson Mortgage and Finance corporation.

Lombard Terrace is bounded on the north by North avenue and on the west by state highway No. 53, a new north and south route. Its southern boundary is Pleasant lane and its eastern line is Ridge avenue, which is about three blocks west of Lombard's Main street.

Roads are now being graded in the new area just purchased with completion expected before winter. As the entire subdivision is within the corporate limits of Lombard it has city water, sewers, and police and fire protection.

Monthly Payments Are Less.

Most of the houses so far erected in Lombard Terrace are in the $6,000 price range, although a few have been sold as low as $4,550, including the lot.

The new 4½ per cent FHA mortgages have brought down monthly payments slightly, so that now a 5½ room house selling at $4,975, including the lot, can be purchased on a basis of $30.31 per month, including principal, interest, insurance, and taxes, it was asserted.

A survey just made of the subdivision showed that most of the families came from the heavily congested areas in the north and northwest sections of Chicago. Eighty per cent of the buyers commute to the loop daily.

Home Building Activity in Du Page County Suburb

This is a view looking east on Sunset avenue, between Edson and Ridge avenues, in Lombard Terrace, Lombard. This is a block south of North avenue and about three blocks west of Main street in the Du Page county suburb. Thirty-two homes have been built to order by Lombard Terrace Homes, Inc., from plans by Robert H. Salisbury, architect. A new area southeast of this street has just been acquired and will be restricted to brick homes. Two of these residences are open to the public.

TEN THOUSAND INSPECT 10 NEW HOMES; 4 SOLD

Approximately ten thousand persons last Sunday walked through the ten houses in the Lincolnwood section of Niles Center erected by three north shore competitive building firms, according to trafic police who directed the crowds.

Since Sunday there has been an average of 1,500 persons daily visiting the houses. About 75 per cent have gone through them at night, when the houses are floodlighted. The three firms which built them are C. A. Hemphill & Associates, William G. Ruggles Associates, Inc., and W. C. Tackett, Inc.

It was reported yesterday that Tackett had sold three of his exhibit houses and has contracted for three more to be built to order. Hemphill also sold one of the ten houses—a unit that had been completely furnished.

Metal Firm Buys North Michigan Avenue Building

One of the first modern buildings to be erected on North Michigan avenue, between Randolph street and the river, the seven story Story & Clark building at No. 173-175, was sold yesterday. The Royal Metal Manufacturing company, located at 1140 South Michigan avenue for the last twelve years, bought the property from Mrs. Ada Story Ripley for $60,000, according to the revenue stamps on the deed. Sidney Aaronson of the Central Realty corporation was broker. William C. Iwert was attorney in the transaction.

Building at 173-175 N. Michigan avenue.

The Royal Metal Manufacturing company, founded in Chicago in 1897, is the oldest and one of the leading manufacturers of chromium plated and other metal furniture, it is said. It has factories in Michigan City, Ind., New York City, Los Angeles, and Toronto, with show rooms in many other cities.

Plan Metal Mart

The company will remodel the main and one other floor into show rooms. In addition it will use two other floors for general offices. The remaining three floors will be rented. It is tentatively planned to lease space to firms in allied lines, particularly in the institutional field in which the Royal concern largely operates. There now is no concentrated location or mart in Chicago in this particular field.

The Royal company expects to occupy its new quarters toward the end of the year, according to Irving Salomon, president.

Building Erected in 1925.

The building purchased was erected in 1925 by Frolich, McCabe & Chadwick, a real estate firm, from plans by Jens J. Jensen. The front elevation is Gothic. It cost a reported $100,000 and occupies a lot 30 by 69 feet.

The seller, Mrs. Ripley, has held the property since the liquidation of the Story & Clark Piano company, the former owner and occupant of the building.

The building now has a miscellaneous tenancy. Albert Pollak, furrier, occupies the first floor.

REBUILD HYDE PARK GARAGE INTO MODERN RECREATION CENTER

The former garage building at 5120-28 Lake Park avenue is being remodeled into an air conditioned recreation unit by a new organization, Hyde Park Recreations, Inc., which leased the building from the French estate. The principal owners and officers of the corporation are Harry Israel and Howard Levy. They are spending a reported $65,000 in rebuilding the old structure from plans by Pioso and Peterson.

Twenty bowling alleys will be located on the second floor. The main floor has been subleased to Bowling Inn, Inc., owned by Herbert J. Nickelson and Jerome W. Baer. A restaurant will be opened when the bowling alleys are finished, about Sept. 1. The building will be known as the Hyde Park Recreation center.

Alster and Laskey were attorneys for Bowling Inn, Inc. Tenney, Harding, Sherman and Rogers represented the French estate, and Aronson and Aronson Hyde Park Recreations, Inc.

Five Houses Are Sold in Wilmette Development

Irvin A. Blietz reported approximately one thousand visitors last Sunday to his Connecticut village development in Wilmette, adjoining Kenilworth. Five residences of the twelve nearing completion have been sold, he said.

MOOSE LEASE NEW QUARTERS FOR LOCAL LODGE

The Greater Chicago lodge, No. 3 of the Loyal Order of Moose recently leased for five years 11,000 square feet on the second floor at 130 North Wells street.

According to Bert W. Johnson, secretary, as soon as extensive alterations are completed, costing $25,000, the lodge will move its central headquarters there from its present location at 32 West Randolph street.

"The new quarters are expected to be ready for occupancy about Oct. 1." Johnson said. "The space is being arranged for completely equipped lodge and social rooms for the convenience of the 15,000 Chicago members and the other thousands who come to Chicago annually on their way to visit Mooseheart, 42 miles west of Chicago."

PLAN COURSE IN USE OF ELECTRIC HOME EQUIPMENT

Housewife tenants in the new Marine drive apartments, now being completed for September occupancy at 5060 Marine drive, are to be given a course in home economics.

According to Howard P. Hurst of Howard P. Hurst & Co., rental agents for the new project, the 202 suites will be equipped with electric kitchens. The building's six laundries are to have electric washing machines, hot plates, driers, and ironers. In order to be able to handle this electric equipment intelligently the course of instruction is planned, Hurst said.

Pays $205,000, All Cash, for West Side Building

The L. Fish Furniture company yesterday paid $205,000, all cash, for the four story building at 4042 West Madison street, occupying a 50 by 175 foot site. The seller was Spiegel, Inc. The buyer has been occupying the property since last October with a furniture store.

WEST MADISON STREET LEASE.

One of City's Oldest Pawn Shops to Be Air Conditioned

One of the oldest pawnshops in Chicago—founded in 1888 and still in its original location at 739 North Clark street—is to be enlarged, remodeled, and air conditioned at a reported cost of $25,000. The firm is Levinson's Loans, Inc. It was established by the grandfather of the present owner.

South Side Store and Flat Building Sold for $80,000

The four story store and flat building at 127-39 East Garfield boulevard was sold yesterday to the 127 East Garfield corporation for $80,000, according to Barnet L. Rosset, president of the Metropolitan Trust company, reorganization trustee for the bondholders' committee.

Already we've helped many people to the ownership of fine farms. And their satisfaction in these farms is shown by the number of their friends they've encouraged to share in this opportunity! Why wait longer to get the facts about the farm you've dreamed of owning?

Every farm listed as an Opportunity Farm must have adequate, sound, weather-tight buildings, well-painted; improved soil, with good drainage, and expertly planned crop rotation. Every Opportunity Farm is a going concern.

SECRET REPORT BARES WEAKNESS OF SOVIET ARMY

Baltic Attache's Views Are Given to Tribune.

BY DONALD DAY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RIGA, Latvia, Aug. 19.—Negotiations in Moscow between the British and French military missions and the leaders of the soviet war commissariat have brought little comfort to the governments of Latvia, Estonia, and Finland. These nations are taking hurried and energetic precautions to resist any attempt by the soviet government to interfere in their internal or foreign policies.

It was at first hoped by the statesmen of these Baltic countries that the French and British military experts could not be deceived by bolshevik military leaders as to the efficacy of the Red army, air force, and navy.

But from information obtained in Moscow, Paris, and London they believe Britain and France are not interested so much in Moscow's military forces as they are in obtaining the psychological effects of an alliance with Russia against Germany.

Tells of Soviet Army.

One of these Baltic countries has given THE TRIBUNE a special report from its military attaché in Moscow concerning the soviet military experts who have been delegated to negotiate with the British and French. The report says in part:

"Only two years ago the soviet government had at its service many capable and even talented military chiefs.

"It is sufficient to name only the most outstanding of these leaders. Marshal Michael Nikolaevitch Tukhachevski, one of the five marshals who reorganized the Red army and was foreseen as commander in chief for any war which might develop on the western front; Gen. I. P. Uborevitch, who specialized on problems on the northwestern front; Gen. I. E. Yakir, who specialized on the southwestern front; Marshal Vassily C. Bluecher, commander in chief of the far eastern front; Marshal Alexander I. Yegorov, chief of the general staff.

All Executed.

"All of these men were officers in the czar's army with the exception of Bluecher, who was a noncommissioned officer. They were all shot.

"As a result of the purges of 1937 and 1938 the Red army lost 90 per cent of its generals. Among those executed were all commanders of military districts and fleets, all leaders in the general staf, all chiefs of army departments and seven of Commander in Chief Voroshilov's substitutes. [Marshal K. E. Voroshilov is commissar for defense.]

"In their places were appointed new men. Captains and colonels were created generals, ensigns were made admirals.

"For the negotiations in Moscow the politburo has appointed the best of the surviving ranking officers of the Red army.

"The official head of the delegation is Marshal Voroshilov, who distinguished himself during the civil wars in Russia by leading small bands of partisans. His military education is superficial.

"Voroshilov is supposed to have graduated from the military academy after it had been purged and reorganized by the GPU [then called the Cheka, secret police].

Ex-Colonel Real Leader.

"The real leader of the delegation is a former colonel of the czar's general staff who now leads the Red general staff, Gen. B. M. Shaposhnikov. Of all the former czarist officers who served in the bolshevik fighting forces he is the lone survivor. He is reputed to be a man of large capabilities for work but entirely without initiative.

"The national commissar of the fleet, Admiral N. G. Kuznetzov, is also said to be a capable officer but without proper training and experience.

"The fourth member of the Soviet delegation is Brig. Gen. A. D. Loktionov, aviation specialist, former soldier of the czar's army who also fought in the civil wars. Then he was a cavalry officer, but in 1934 learned how to fly and entered the air corps.

"The fifth member is a youthful army corps commander named Smorodinov. He belongs to the younger generation of soviet officers and distinguished himself in the Spanish civil war where he rose to the command of a Russian flying detachment.

Topics to be Discussed.

"The conversations between the military missions in Moscow, according to the British military attaché, will include:

1. An exchange of information about the armed forces of the prospective allies.

2. Detailed plans to be put into force in case certain emergencies arise.

3. What possible assistance can England, France, and Russia afford one another in case of war.

4. What assistance can Russia give in the form of supplies and materials to the Anglo-French allies in eastern Europe [Poland and Rumania].

5. What plan of operations will be placed into effect by Britain and France if they become involved in a war with Germany.

"What seems of special significance is that the politburo has not included a single political commissar in the delegation. These men rank higher than the commanding officers.

GPU Not Included.

"It is further significant that bolshevism's two additional little known armies are not represented in the talks. The GPU army, also known as the department of interior, numbers no less than 400,000 professional soldiers enlisted for life.

"This is the real army of the communist party which supports its authority in Russia. It is used to quell uprisings among the peasants, strikes among the workers and mutinies in the Red army and navy. It is the most important armed force which exists in Russia today. It is the only armed force within Russia which is entrusted with ammunition.

"The second little known army is the militarised guards of the factories, railroads, mines and other departments of the government under constant military guard.

"It is quite impossible to speculate on the outcome of the Moscow negotiations, but it is not excluded that after the soviet government has obtained all possible information from the visitors it will again attempt to use this to come to an agreement with Germany.

"In any case it is clear that Moscow is demanding as recompense for an alliance that she be ceded, to begin with the hegemony, and later the occupation of Estonia and Latvia. Finland also is threatened for soviet authorities further demand she should sign a military agreement granting Moscow the right to have a base on the Aaland islands."

Soviet Military Leaders Purged

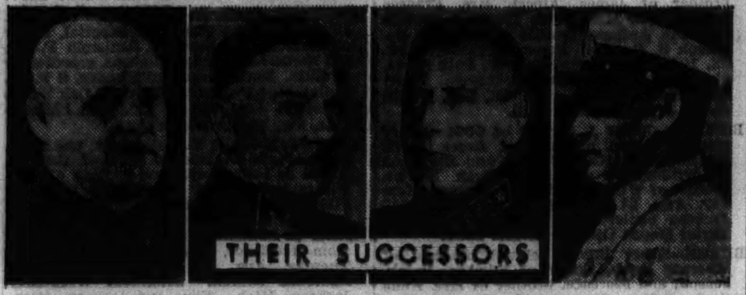
Russian military leaders who have been shot in Stalin's purge of his enemies. Left to right: Marshal Michael Nikolaevitch Tukhachevski, who had been foreseen as commander in chief of Red forces in the event of war; Gen. I. E. Yakir, who specialised on Russia's southwestern front; Marshal Vasily Bluecher, commander of far eastern troops, and Marshal Alexander I. Yegorov, chief of the general staff.



New men who have succeeded the purged leaders of the Red army and navy. Left to right: Brig. Gen. A. D. Loktionov, aviation specialist who was a lieutenant before the purge; Marshal K. E. Voroshilov, commissar for defense; Gen. B. M. Shaposhnikov, a former colonel in the czarist armies, and Admiral N. G. Kuznetzov, national commissar of the fleet.

Federal Court to Hear Fannie Brice Film Suit

Fannie Brice's $750,000 suit against the Twentieth Century-Fox Film corporation was transferred to federal court yesterday by Judge Charles A. Williams of Superior court. The company petitioned for the change. Miss Brice, the stage comedienne, is suing the company, several actors, and eight theater concerns for allegedly dramatizing the story of her life without her consent in the picture, "Rose of Washington Square."

15,000 Eagles Will Stage Convention Parade Today

Fifteen thousand members of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, holding their forty-first annual convention in Chicago, will parade today down Michigan avenue, headed by drill teams, bands and bugle corps. The line of march will extend from Wacker drive to Roosevelt road, and the parade will be reviewed from a stand at Congress street in Grant park.

RED STAFF TALKS HIT SNAG; FRENCH, BRITISH CONFER

MOSCOW, Aug. 19 (AP).—British and French military delegations met tonight at the British embassy to survey obstacles to agreement after soviet disclosure that the army staff talks—like the political conferences on a tri-power mutual assistance pact—had run into difficulties. The nature of the differences was closely guarded.

Some observers attached significance to the fact that Moscow newspapers which published a communique that the "real" discord had no relation to events in the far east, printed in the same editions a London daily worker article to the effect that British reactionaries were trying to arrange a five power conference "without the U. S. S. R." to seek a compromise with Adolf Hitler of Germany.

The communique denied as "complete fantasies" Polish reports that differences had arisen over an alleged soviet demand for British and French military assistance in event of war in the far east.

The body of a man about 50 years old, dressed in work clothes, was found in the lake at the foot of 80th street yesterday.

KILLS 2 CHINESE POLICE, WOUNDS SIX IN SHANGHAI

British Policeman Fires When Shot in Back.

SHANGHAI, Aug. 19 (AP).—A British policeman armed with a machine-gun tonight killed two members of a Japan-controled Chinese police squad and wounded six others after he dropped from a bullet in his back in a fight on the International Settlement border.

Police said the officer, who was alone at the time, was not seriously wounded. He was W. L. Kinloch of Scotland, a sergeant of the settlement police. He was sent to Shanghai in 1938 and once was a member of the British Scots Guards regiment.

According to settlement police, Kinloch was searching a pedestrian when he was shot in the back. It was then that he opened fire with the machine-gun.

After the incident, both the settlement and Japanese-controled police concentrated formidable armed forces along the settlement border.

Fear End of Tientsin Talks.

TOKIO, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Japanese-British conference on the Tientsin dispute entered another critical stage with renewed predictions of its complete disruption tonight following Britain's rejection of demands that economic questions be included in the discussions.

Observers believed the British action, announced yesterday in London, followed American and French assurances that they were prepared to insist on their interest in economic questions affecting China.

In view of the positive stand taken now by both sides, observers were unable to foresee a resumption of the talks without considerable loss of face by one of the powers.

Apologize for Slapping.

PEKING, Aug. 19 (AP).—Japanese Consul General Takeki Horiuchi today tendered a formal apology to Frank P. Lockhart, counselor of the American embassy, for the slapping by a Japanese sentry of an American woman, Mrs. F. M. Richard.

Mrs. Richard was slapped as she was about to enter the British concession at Tientsin.

PHILLIPS HOLMES CLEARS HIS NAME IN FRENCH COURT

PARIS, Aug. 19 (AP).—Phillips Holmes, screen actor originally from Grand Rapids, Mich., today wiped the French court records clear of a fifteen day prison sentence standing against him for a prank five years ago.

In December, 1934, Holmes was dining with a friend here. Both refused to pay the bill. The proprietor marched his two laughing clients to a police station where they were searched as a matter of routine. Holmes had a long pocket knife and was booked for carrying concealed weapons. The two finally paid their bill and departed.

Holmes forgot the whole affair and left for Hollywood shortly afterward, but the French machinery of justice dragged the concealed weapon case to court and three months later it was brought to trial. Holmes was sentenced in absentia to fifteen days in jail. On his present visit the police summoned him for a formal retrial. The judge fined him 12 francs [about 30 cents] and closed the case.

FAMOUS COOK RETIRES.

Byron, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—Mrs. Kittie Marie Hart Brayton, 75 years old, veteran Ogle county hotel keeper and restauranteur, has retired after serving homecooked food to the public here for more than thirty-eight years. She is noted for her pies, for which she prepared pumpkins and mincemeat herself.

HALT WAR GAMES TO GIVE SOLDIERS NEEDED RESPITE

52,000 Return to Camps for Week-End Rest.

BY CAPT. M. M. CORPENING.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

With the 1st Army in the Field, Near Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 19.—The rattle of small arms and the boom of field guns was stilled shortly after dawn this morning when troops of the 1st army completed thirty-six hours of brigade maneuvers.

The problem completed this morning ended the first week's activity for the 52,000 troops engaged and all returned to their camps for a week-end of rest and recreation. Mass religious services will be conducted by three clergymen tomorrow. Lieut. Gen. Hugh A. Drum, commander of the First Army, will speak.

In the problems just ended, the 43d division's 85th brigade from Connecticut opposed its 86th brigade from Vermont and Maine; the 51st and 52d brigades of the 26th division from Massachusetts opposed one another as did the 53d and 93d brigades of New York's 27th division and the 57th and 87th brigades of the 44th division from New York and New Jersey.

Mechanized Units in Action.

Farther west, near Saranac, the 1st, 2d, and 18th infantry brigades, 1st division, and 7th cavalry brigades [mechanized] of the regular army engaged in their problems.

Incidents both amusing and not so funny occurred throughout the fighting period. A colonel and his entire command post were captured, a lieutenant carrying a vital map was taken prisoner, a scouting party of Park avenue boys from New York was captured by a bunch of gas house boys from Brooklyn, one company commander sent his forces into battle carrying full pack, including overcoats, despite the August heat; and an overenthusiastic lieutenant struggled through a knee-deep swamp with his men only to find that he was ahead of schedule and the march did not count.

Troops of the regular army carried out their night problems with dispatch, but the National Guard unit sometimes fumbled. This, Gen. Drum said, proved the need for annual army maneuvers so men could be taught how to fight and defend themselves at night.

Lose Touch With Command.

Several times during the night, commanders lost all contact with their troops and were without any knowledge of their movements or disposition. Long marches yesterday had tired the guardsmen, unaccustomed to army life in the field, so badly they barely were able to move. Dawn attacks, scheduled for this morning, were cut short mercifully, in deference to the physical condition of the men.

In the 43d division problem, the 86th brigade made contact with the 85th near Beekmantown yesterday afternoon. Covering forces of the 85th were driven in and during the night the Maine and Vermont troops maneuvered into position which at dawn permitted them to force retirement of the Connecticut forces to the west.

The 52d brigade of the 25th division, consisting of the 104th and 181st infantry regiments, contacted the 51st brigade, 101st and 182d regiments, two miles west of Plattsburg city limits. Scouting parties were kept active throughout the night to see that neither side obtained an advantage.

Two With Same Mission.

The 53d brigade, from New York City and upstate, had the same mission as the 93d from Brooklyn. Each was assigned to take and hold the Ausable river crossing near Keeseville.

Advance guards met yesterday afternoon near Peru. It was during the intensive patroling last night when the Brooklyn gas house boys captured the Park avenuers and seized their clothing in a search for hidden documents. The clothing was returned this morning after the 53d made a successful enveloping attack against the north flank of the 93d.

The New Jersey 57th brigade of the 44th division was assigned to defend the defiles near Peaseleeville and occupied high ground east of Schuyler Falls. The New York 87th brigade attacked in a flank movement from the north and had forced a left wing withdrawal when the problem ended.

Wide Area Covered.

The 1st division maneuver was impressive because of the amazing amount of ground covered during the night through strange country with heavy undergrowth. Starting from Goodrich Mill the troops advanced northward to within two miles of Peaseleeville, capturing on the way the surprised colonel and his staff.

Troops will operate in corps maneuvers Monday and Tuesday and the entire army will be put together Wednesday for a full sized field problem.

Thirty teletype machines, identical with those used in newspaper offices and police stations, are being used by the 1st Field army to transmit military maps and orders. Until this year transmission of maps by wire was only an army experiment. Now the system has been made practical and requires no more skill than the operation of a typewriter.

S. DAVIS WILSON, 57, PHILADELPHIA EX-MAYOR, DIES

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 19 [Special].—S. Davis Wilson, retired mayor of Philadelphia, died today of a stroke following a long illness marked by high blood pressure. He was 57 years old. At his bedside were his wife, his daughter and his three sons. Wilson had been bedfast for weeks and eight days ago gave up his office.

Wilson was a central figure in a Democratic party split which swept the party out of office last fall and put the city and state under Republican control.

Throughout his political career, Wilson frequently switched from one party to another. Before 1918 he was a Democratic supporter of Woodrow Wilson. Then he became a Republican and received a city job.

Unable to Vote for Self.

Wilson's next party switch came in 1932 when he was elected city controler on the Democratic ticket. When he won the Republican nomination for mayor in 1935, he could not vote for himself because he still was a registered Democrat. His last party switch was last year when he ran against George H. Earle, then governor, for the Democratic nomination for United States senator and was defeated.

In the democratic primary fight last year Wilson accused Earle of collecting graft on contracts for public works. Earle was indicted but never tried.

Indictment Quashed.

Earle's faction retaliated against Wilson with a grand jury investigation of graft, gambling and vice in Philadelphia. Wilson was indicted with eighteen others, but the indictment against Wilson was quashed last November.

Investigation of Wilson's conduct in office by the grand jury revealed that he had borrowed more than $50,000 from corporations and individuals whom he was in a position to favor.

Since Wilson's retirement from office last week, George Connell, president of the council, has been acting mayor. Wilson's death creates a vacancy in the office of mayor which will be filled by an election in the council, which will meet immediately after the funeral services on Tuesday.

ARMY PREPARES WAR MATERIALS FOR EMERGENCY

Supply and Reserves Are Watched Constantly.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—In the complex mechanism of defense, necessitated by new and more powerful weapons, the problem of getting raw material reserves has become increasingly important.

In the early days of war man needed only to pick up a sword and shield and head for the enemy. Today the many scientific inventions and technological advances have made the gathering of three essentials of warfare—fighters, armorers and materials—an extremely complex business.

Munitions today include a wide variety of complicated mechanisms requiring highly skilled personnel utilizing special equipment for quantity production. Almost all the materials known to man are used to some degree in the manufacture of military and naval equipment.

Begin Material Storage.

For this reason the general staff of the army has conducted studies, prepared plans and started a program to store reserves of essential military equipment in time of peace against possibility of war.

The plans include not only the storing of weapons and munitions, dies and jigs for making arms, but also building up of stores of essential raw materials which may be cut off or made difficult to obtain by war.

For its purposes the war department has divided war materials into three classes—strategic, critical and essential.

Strategic are those materials for the supply of which the United States must depend in whole or in part on sources outside continental United States. The list includes aluminum, antimony, chromium, coconut shell, char, manganese, manila fiber, mica, nickel, optical glass, quartz crystal, quicksilver, quinine, rubber, silk, tin, tungsten, wool.

Critical materials are those difficult to obtain in war time, but are not so serious a problem as of strategic materials. They are: Asbestos, cadmium, coffee, cork, cryolite, flaxseed, flourspar, graphite, hides, iodine, kapok, nux vomica, phenol, picric acid, platinum, scientific glass, tanning materials, titanium, toluol, vanadium.

Essentials Easy to Get.

Essential materials are those for which no procurement problem is anticipated, but over which constant surveillance must be exercised to see that shortages do not develop. These are: arsenic, abrasives, acetic acid, acetone, alcohol [ethyl], camphor, castor oil, chlorine, copper, copra, cotton linters, helium, hemp, jute, iron and steel, lead, magnesium, menthanol, molybdenum, nitrogren compounds, palm oil, paper and pulp, petroleum, phosphates, potash, refractories, shellac, sisal, sugar, sulphuric acid, sulphur and pyrites, uranium, webbing and duck, wheat, zinc, zirconium.

The list changes as various items shift from class to class for various reasons. The first list prepared by this country was made immediately after the war. Since that time it has been revised yearly and a study of the lists reflects development of new weapons, new sources of supply and new manufacturing technique.

OAK PARK GROUP FORMED TO HELP G. O. P. NOMINEES

A group of Oak Park citizens announced yesterday formation of a man's movement to preserve constitutional government and individual liberyt. Calling themselves the American Concept Committee of Oak Park, the group said it proposed to work for and solicit funds in behalf of Republican nominees for federal offices.

Beard, a canner, is chairman of the committee and of the trustees. Attorney Clarence Willard is vice chairman and Joseph Fraser is secretary treasurer.

La Salle street, counsel for the committee, are being sold for 25 cents and contributions of one dollar or more are also solicited. These funds will be given either to the Republican national committee or to aid G. O. P. candidates for federal offices.

The "concept" asserts belief in constitutional government "with the minimum of governmental intervention." Hammerberg said the committee plans to interest other communities in the establishment of similar groups.

BEETLE SCOURGE SPREADS; PARTS OF 15 STATES HIT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 [Special].—The Japanese beetle scourge is spreading throughout the United States despite efforts to control it, and now afflicts areas in fifteen states, department of agriculture officials said today. The infested area extends north to Maine, west to Ohio and south to Virginia.

A Japanese beetle.

Although some methods are partially effective in controling these beetles, there is no known method of extermination, officials said.

The beetles spread each year a distance of ten or 12 miles beyond the area infested during the preceding year. The beetle feeds on fruits, foliage, and grasses.

An area of continuous infestation now exists in New Jersey, eastern Pennsylvania, northwest Maryland and Delaware, it was said, and it has spread to the metropolitan area of New York and parts of adjoining Long Island and Westchester county.

The best known agency for control of infestation is a parasite of the wasp family which is brought from Japan.

JOB JEFFERSON STARTED IN 1787 JUST COMPLETED

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP).—Ambassador William C. Bullitt has finished a job given to Thomas Jefferson, an early envoy to France.

In 1787 congress ordered Jefferson to have made in France dies for medals commemorating the exploits of John Paul Jones, revolutionary war naval hero. The medals were to be struck there and, with the dies, shipped to the United States. The medals were made, but—due to confusion arising out of the French revolution and Jefferson's transfer back to Washington to become secretary of state—the dies were overlooked.

Today, Bullitt advised this government that he now had the dies in his possession. They had been stored in the museum of the French mint. The dies will be added to the collection of memorials at the John Paul Jones tomb in the Annapolis Naval academy.

RED CROSS SENDS FOOD TO 5,000 IN ALABAMA FLOOD

Selma, Ala., Aug. 19 [U. P.].—The Red Cross tonight sent food and supplies to families forced to evacuate homes in flooded lowlands along the Alabama river.

Streams that swept out of their banks in the central and southern portions of the state, causing the worst crop disaster since the floods of 1916, compelled more than 5,000 persons to abandon their homes. Most of the refugees are Negro sharecroppers and farm tenant families.

C. W. Winn, head of the Red Cross unit here, said the Alabama probably will begin falling tonight. The Cahaba, which flows into the Alabama nine miles south of here, is receding.

National Guardsmen and coast guards assisted in rescue and rehabilitation work. Thirty boats were loaned to refugees to round up their live stock.

PEORIA'S LEGION VISITORS SWAMP HOTELS, HOMES

Peoria Ill., Aug. 19 (AP).—Captured by a peaceful army of the American Legion today, Peoria was pondering the question of where its thousands of visitors were going to sleep tonight.

There wasn't a single hotel room available for any price. All the private homes that would accommodate visitors were full and still they came. The housing committee has been working for weeks merely on written requests for rooms.

Convention officials estimated 50,000 visitors would be in the city before the parade starts Monday afternoon. A torch light parade by the Forty and Eight, fun making organization of the Legion, started official activities of the twenty-first annual state convention tonight. This was followed by a "wreck" or initiation ceremonies of the group.

OLDER, SOBERER AMERICAN LEGION MEETS SEPT. 25

225,000 Expected for Chicago Convention.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.

More than 225,000 veterans will march in the spectacular parade on Sept. 26 which will be the high point of American Legion week in Chicago.

But the minds of many of those veterans will not be on that march, but on another and grimmer march just twenty-one years ago that day. And, in their minds, they will be marching with comrades left behind on that long gone march.

For it was on Sept. 26, 1918, that 1,200,000 Americans moved forward in the great Meuse-Argonne offensive which became the deciding battle of the world war.

Set to Break Record.

The four day Legion convention will open on Monday, Sept. 25. It is expected to be the greatest in the history of the Legion, surpassing even the Chicago convention of 1933 and the New York meeting of 1937.

Scores of special trains will bring legionnaires by the thousands to the city. Other thousands will come in their own automobiles and in planes and buses. Eastern groups have chartered lake boats. All forms of transportation will be overtaxed as the vast army moves on Chicago from all forty-eight states and from many foreign countries.

Hotels and night clubs are completing preparations for the four days in which the hordes of legionnaires will gather in the city to hunt the elusive "Elmer," imaginary Legion mascot for many years.

Seek to Keep Out Politics.

A huge massmeeting in the Coliseum will open the convention. National Commander Stephen Chadwick of Seattle, Wash., will deliver the keynote address, and Mayor Kelly will welcome the Legion thousands to the city.

Legion officials have made every effort to keep politics out of the convention although several high political figures will take part in the Legion program. At the massmeeting Secretary of War Harry H. Woodring will address the veterans. Gov. Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts and Mayor Joseph K. Carson Jr. of Portland, Ore., also will speak.

President Roosevelt has been invited to address the convention. Executives of the convention say they will not attempt to limit the President's remarks, in the event that his advisors should persuade him to use the Legion convention as a sounding board for his rumored third term aspirations in 1940.

McNutt to be a Delegate.

Paul V. McNutt, former high commissioner to the Philippine Islands who recently was appointed head of the Federal Security administration by President Roosevelt, will be a leader of the Indiana delegation at the convention. McNutt, national commander of the Legion in 1929, was reported to have received the federal security job as a plum for abandoning his own hopes for the presidency in 1940.

Other political figures will include Gov. Prentice Cooper of Tennessee, Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, Senator Bennett Champ Clark of Missouri, and Louis A. Johnson, assistant secretary of war.

The Legion parade will come on the second day of the convention. The marchers will form in front of Tribune tower, move south on Michigan avenue to Balbo drive, east to Leif Eriksen drive, then south again to Soldiers' field. Convention officials estimate that the march, which will begin at 9 o'clock in the morning, will continue far into the night. The parade at the 1937 New York convention lasted nineteen hours.

Foreign units of the Legion will lead the parade. They will be from Mexico, Hawaii, France, Porto Rico, Panama, Alaska, Canada, Italy, and the Philippines. Then, marching sixteen abreast, will come the units of each of the states.

The last two days of the convention will be given over to business. On Sept. 28, the last day, the legionnaires will elect their national officers for 1940.

The Boys Calm Down.

Officers of the Legion predict that the veterans who descend on Chicago next month will be a soberer, more mature group than those hilarious veterans who took over the city in 1933.

"The average legionnaire is 46 years old this year, and he has become a much more mature person than those veterans who attended the 1933 convention," said Commander Chadwick.

Chadwick said that total membership of the Legion on Aug. 8 had reached 1,005,022. This was the second time in the organization's history that its members totaled more than a million. The American Legion was organized in Paris in 1919. By 1920 it had 845,186 members.

The membership total steadily declined until 1925, when there remained only 609,407 members. Then the pendulum swung the other way, and by 1931 the membership had climbed to 1,053,909. Last year the members totaled 974,854.

Chadwick's prediction regarding the seriousness of the coming convention, however, probably will not apply to the fun loving members of the Forty and Eight, the inter-Legion organization which annually holds its promenade nationale in conjunction with the convention.

This year the society will parade on the evening of Sept. 25.

While the convention is on the American Legion auxiliary, the organization for veterans' wives, and the Sons of the American Legion also will hold their annual meetings and elect national officers.

Plenty of Power

OSTIA, Italy, Aug. 19 [Special].—Residents and tourists in this resort city were surprised recently when they saw a sort of double tandem bicycle in the streets. The contraption was merely two single bikes hooked alongside a tandem, with an extra seat added for the driver. Thus ten legs provide plenty of power to move the vehicle along at a nice clip.

HORNER DEFENDS VETO STAND ON TIME LIMITATION

Contends He Has 10 Days to Review Bills.

Gov. Horner took issue yesterday with the contention of Speaker Hugh Cross of the Illinois house of representatives who questioned the governor's power to veto bills after a lapse of ten days following adjournment of a legislative session.

The governor and the speaker differ over the interpretation of a constitutional provision giving the chief executive ten days—Sundays and holidays excepted—after passage, in which to sign, veto, or permit measures to become law without his signature.

Cross has contended that the ten day period began on July 1, the day the session adjourned, and ended July 12. Under this construction the governor's veto of the $40 maximum old age pension bill, the state employés' pension act, and others which were killed subsequently to July 12 would be illegal and the measures automatically enacted into law without signature.

Differ on Interpretation.

The governor, however, supported by an opinion from Attorney General John E. Cassidy, took the position that the ten days began when the bills reached his desk. And because of the fact that about 300 bills were passed the last week in June which had to be enrolled and engrossed before being sent to the executive mansion a number did not reach him until after July 12.

Cross insisted that the pension bill, which was vetoed early this month, actually became a law on July 12. The governor, who killed the measure on misinformation that a federal measure to pay half the increase would not pass congress, has said that he would call a special session in the fall to repass it. Cross insisted the session would not be necessary.

Mr. Horner replied that the Illinois Supreme court would sustain his veto, despite the fact it came after July 12.

Governor Explains Stand.

"If the ten-day period," his statement read, "commences with sine die adjournment of the general assembly, the general assembly can easily destroy the power vested in the governor to veto measures by merely failing to present them to him until after ten days after its adjournment.

"This delay can be accomplished by an officer of the general assembly or an employe. This is well illustrated by the facts of the last session.

"The sine die adjournment came on June 30 [actually 3:37 a. m. on July 1] and a ten-day period [excluding Sundays] would end July 12. According to my records, 161 bills were presented to me after that date.

"In other words, they were law, if the speaker is right, even before they were given to me for consideration. Naturally the question arises, if they were already law, why were they ever presented to me?

Says View Is Common Sense.

"With all due respect to the opinion of the speaker, logic and common sense lead us to the inevitable conclusion that the constitution means what it said, that no bill should become law without presentation to and consideration by the governor. I predict the Supreme court will rightly protect the constitutional prerogatives of the governor on the enactment of legislation."

In addition to the possibility that the high court will be asked to consider the veto of the old age pension bill, Attorney Michael F. Ryan of the Civil Service Protective association has threatened to take similar action on the state employés' pension bill.

Urbana, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—The question of who is the fastest woodchopper in Illinois will be decided at the fourth annual farm sports festival, to be held at the University of Illinois on Sept. 1 and 2.

James E. Davis, extension forester of the college of agriculture, today said there are no restrictions on the weight, type or make of axes to be used. In the preliminary contests, each contestant will make one cut through an eight inch hickory log. The three fastest choppers in the preliminary contest will enter a final contest to decide first, second and third place winners. In the finals each contestant will cut through a 10-inch hickory log.

Flush Them Out
For 35 Cents

Go to your druggist today and get this safe, swift and harmless diuretic and stimulant — ask for Gold Medal Haarlem Oil Capsules and start at once to flush kidneys of waste matter saturated with acids and poisons.

That's a quick and effective way to help bring about more healthy kidney activity and relieve that bladder irritation with its scanty passage with smarting and burning as well as restless nights.

Remember the kidneys often need flushing as well as the bowels and some symptoms of kidney weakness may be: getting up often during the night—puffy eyes—backache—shifting pains.

But be sure and get GOLD MEDAL Haarlem Oil Capsules—the original and genuine—right from Haarlem in Holland—the price is small (35 cents), the good results will fulfill your expectations.

THE NEW 1940 PACKARD IS HERE!

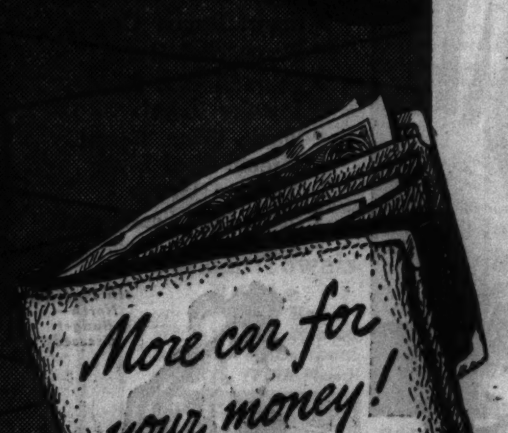
—with stunning new lines
—at lowest prices in Packard history



Look at it! The handsomest Packard ever designed, with its new lines, its speed-streamed body, its narrower radiator, its longer bonnet.

Drive it! With greater power per pound of car weight, this new Packard is chain lightning at traffic lights, a whirlwind of power on the highway, and a mountain-climbing wonder.

Check its thriftiness! This new Packard's economy—with gas, oil and servicing—is enough to make smaller and lighter cars go green with jealousy. It's easy on the budget any way you figure it.

Never have such riding comfort, such expensive-car luxury, been put into a car priced so low. For with its 4-year expansion plan completed, with millions invested in new machinery, with factory costs cut in hundreds of ways—Packard offers you, not just a new Packard, but a masterpiece at a price!

See it at your Packard dealer's today. 4 times out of 5, the car turned in exceeds the down payment, still further reducing the monthly payments.

Three hours' competition yesterday in Dyche stadium by the All-Stars produced seven touchdowns and a double victory for the Blue teams as the collegians passed their mid-term examinations preparatory to facing the New York Giants, Aug. 30, in Soldiers' field.

The varsity, led by Billy Patterson of Baylor, Bob MacLeod of Dartmouth, and Howie Weiss of Wisconsin, with Minnesota's George Faust at quarter back, whipped the Reds in the opening game, 9 to 6. Then, in the last game, with Columbia's Sid Luckman and Davey O'Brien of Texas Christian working with Bullet Bill Osmanski, Holy Cross full back, the Blues ran over the second Red eleven, 22 to 13.

Rain Advances Scrimmage.

Yesterday's scrimmage was held at 10 o'clock. It was advanced primarily because at that time it seemed that rain might mar the practice in the afternoon, and Head Coach Elmer Layden, remembering last year's scrimmage in the rain, refused to risk the chance. The players did not quit the gridiron until 1:15 and thus received an unanticipated afternoon of leisure.

The jinx which has dogged nearly all those who have been assigned to right end caught up with Frank Balasz of Iowa. Balasz, normally a full back, had only been shifted to right end two days ago. Yesterday, playing for the Reds in the first game he suffered a dislocated shoulder. It was placed in a cast which cannot be removed for two weeks, and thus he will not be able to play against New York. Pug Manders of Drake, also a converted full back, replaced Balasz.

Bell Suffers Sprained Ankle.

Later in this game Horace Bell, Minnesota guard, sprained his ankle, but the injury is not expected to keep him on the sidelines for more than two or three days. More serious was the injury Barrett Booth, Louisiana State quarter back, received in the second game. Booth intercepted a pass and as he was tackled an opponent landed on his foot. An X-ray was taken in the afternoon and it was reported a bone was broken. This probably will prevent Booth from playing Aug. 30.

The unexpected change in time for the scrimmage surprised the players who had keyed themselves for the later starting hour. The first game also lacked the thrills which the second contained. MacLeod's twenty yard run on a reverse play around left end produced the Blues' first quarter touchdown after Patterson had passed to Faust to put the ball in scoring position. Don Seigel of Michigan blocked Faust's place kick for the point.

Faust Makes Place Kick.

In the second quarter another pass by Patterson netted the varsity thirty-five yards and then, after the Reds had held, Faust dropped back and place kicked from the 15 yard line to give his team a 9 to 0 lead.

Pros Will Continue Drills Away from Own Camp.

BY GEORGE STRICKLER.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Superior, Wis., Aug. 19.—New York's preparation for the Chicago All-Star game reaches its peak tomorrow when two groups of Giants meet in an intra-squad game in nearby Duluth, the training site of the Chicago Cardinals. The Cardinals reciprocate on Sept. 1 by completing the exhibition schedule with an intra-squad game in Superior. The games are sponsored by the chambers of commerce of the two cities.

Tomorrow's game is billed as a contest between the Wisconsins, the white group of Giants captained by Tuffy Leemans, a native of Superior, and the Minnesotas, the red squad led by Ed Widseth of McIntosh, Minn., and the University of Minnesota. Several thousand tickets already have been sold, despite the fact that Johnny Mostil's Grand Forks team plays a double-header against Duluth and the sensational Joe Schmitz, a St. Louis Cardinal chattel who is hitting .465 in the Northern league, will be a counter attraction.

Two drills today concluded the Giants first full week of work. In the last seven days observers have arrived at several conclusions regarding the Giants and their assignment in the All-Star game on Aug. 30.

Giants in Fine Condition.

It already is an indisputable fact that they will enter the game with as finely conditioned team as any sent forth to represent the National Football league in the annual clash with the cream of the graduating collegians.

Their early preparation has been thorough, energetic and well organized. Coach Steve Owen does not believe in long drills or long sessions on any one phase of training. He is an old fashioned fellow, however, and no amount of modern theory will shake him from the belief that practice makes perfect. About the time he surmises that the champions are tiring of a blocking drill, he switches to passes and comes back to blocking. As a player, Owen learned that nothing was to be gained from chalk talks drawn out so long that players begin to yawn and fidget. The Giants have had only two brief lectures since arriving in camp.

Gives Squad 50 Plays.

Approximately fifty plays have been given to the squad and Owen does not expect to add any more for the All-Star game. Most of the fifty are new, however, and still need considerable rehearsing. Revising the Giants' offense seemed imperative to Owen because of the wealth of scouting data available to All-Star coaches.

At this stage of the Giants' drill, only one criticism appears justified. There has been a scarcity of attention to the All-Star game. The Giants go about their business, eagerly and briskly, getting into shape for a football season. Other professional teams seemed more concerned with the immediate task at hand. From all appearances the Giants regard the Chicago All-Star assignment as just another game. Experience has proved that this is a dangerous policy.

No Serious Injuries.

New York's finest very likely will discover they have never been in a football game like the All-Star contest. To discover it too late will be disastrous.

The Giants have been fortunate in the matter of injuries. None of the three guards, Johnny Dell Isola, Tom Roberts and Ken Lunday, who now form the casualty squad, is injured severely enough to prevent playing on Aug. 30. Although injuries are scarce the squad has been able to preserve its perfect four year rec-

FOR WANT OF A NAIL—

The shoe was lost. For want of that shoe Poor Richard's horse and rider had an unfortunate time of it. Borrowing Benjamin Franklin's maxim that a little neglect may breed a great mischief, may we point out that football fans who forget to order tickets for the All-Star game in Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 30 will deprive themselves of seeing the greatest sports spectacle of the year.

You still can be among the cheering thousands who will watch the College All-Americans battle the New York Giants, champions of professional football. Just call at the Tribune's Public Service offices, either in the lobby of Tribune Tower or 1 South Dearborn street, for tickets. You also may order by mail. YARDS ARE WANTED—SO OSMANSKI MAKES 'EM HARD WAY

Bill Osmanski, full back from Holy Cross, carries ball through line for a sizeable gain for the Blues in second of two games played yesterday at Northwestern by the College All-Americans in preparation for their contest with the New York Giants in Soldiers' field Aug. 30. Ed Bock, Iowa State guard, helps Osmanski advance ball by blocking out Jerry Dowd of Reds, star center last year for St. Mary's of California. The Blue teams of All-Stars scored a double victory yesterday, taking the first game, 9 to 6, and winning the second, 22 to 13. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

SMART TRICK AND LIGHTSPUR SCORE UPSETS IN 2 HOMEWOOD HANDICAPS

BY HOWARD BARRY.

John Marsch's Lightspur and Morris Vehon's Smart Trick won the two stake events on yesterday's program at Washington Park, upsetting the calculations of the crowd of 20,000 in the $3,920 Olympia Fields handicap and the $5,600 Beverly handicap, respectively.

Smart Trick's victory at 4 to 1 odds was scored at the expense of the 4 to 5 favorite, Flying Lill, which was conceding the winner sixteen pounds. Flying Lill, tuning up for her $5,000 match race with Unerring, found her impost of 120 pounds too much to carry for a mile and seventy yards through mud at the pace required to beat Smart Trick, which was toting only 104. The favorite finished second, six lengths behind the winner, while Torch Stick was taking third place.

Sherron Ann Runs Second.

Lightspur, which has come up to his best form during the present meeting, upset the powerful Woolford Farm entry of Joe Schenck and Sherron Ann, and the Dixiana pair, Allegro and Star Boarder, which were first and second choices in the betting. Racing at 3 to 1 odds, Lightspur came home two and a half lengths ahead of Sherron Ann, which was a length and a half in front of another Vehon horse, Opera Star.

A field of seven good sprinters lined up for the six furlong Olympia Fields handicap. Jockey Jimmy Ashcroft took Lightspur out fast from the starting gate and Willie Garner brought Allegro up to run with him. Sherron Ann attempted to keep pace but was taken in hand when she failed to catch the leaders before reaching the turn. Meanwhile, Joe Schenck was having trouble with the muddy going and was getting nowhere.

Lightspur Pays $8.

On the turn, Lightspur conquered Allegro and drew out to a lead of three lengths. Continuing well in the stretch he increased his advantage to four at the eighth pole. Sherron Ann, which had come wide around the last turn, launched a strong challenge that carried her past Allegro in midstretch. But she didn't have enough speed to catch the leader. In the last furlong Opera Star, which had been far back in the earlier stages, came up to beat the weary Allegro out of third place by a head.

Lightspur ran the six furlongs in 1:13 4-5. In the mutuels he paid off at $8, $4.20 and $3.

The withdrawal of Unerring prevented the Beverly from becoming a preview of the $5,000 winner take all match race which she and Flying Lill are to put on August 31. Other scratches cut the field to five.

Jimmy Ashcroft, coming right back after his winning effort on Lightspur, was aboard Smart Trick. He restrained his mount off the early pace, which was set by Sumatra III., with Flying Lill in close attendance. As they galloped down the back stretch Rude Awakening went up to challenge the two leaders, but Smart Trick remained in fourth position.

Mutuel Play Is $474,339.

On the turn, Rude Awakening gave up. Smart Trick moved past her rivals and took the lead. She was never in danger thereafter. Flying Lill conquered Sumatra III. soon after the stretch run began. Torch Stick came from far back to take third.

Smart Trick ran the mile and seventy yards in 1:44 4-5. Her mutuel prices were $10.40, $3.60, and $2.80.

In the patrons' handicapping contest 32,897 ballots were cast in an effort to win the $5,000 prize by picking the most winners. Results will be announced today, following the tabulation of the selections. The mutuel handle was $474,339.

M'SPADEN'S 282 WINS TITLE IN CANADIAN OPEN

SAINT JOHN, N. B., Aug. 19 (AP).—Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Winchester, Mass., won the Canadian open championship and $1,000 first money today, although his game finally yielded to par.

After racing through the first two rounds over the Riverside course in 67—69, McSpaden needed a pair of 73's, each three strokes over par, for his final rounds today. His 282 total for seventy-two holes gave him a five stroke margin over Ralph Guldahl of Madison, N. J., two time United States open champion. Vic Ghezzi lost the $600 second prize to Guldahl by only one stroke as he came in with a 71 for 288 and a $400 cut in the purse.

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond, Va., veteran, slipped into fourth place with 289. He earned $300, $100 less than Stan Horne of Montreal, who finished two strokes further back, but received an extra $200 as leading Canadian pro.

American Net Final Becomes All-Australian

Brookline, Mass., Aug. 19 [Special].—Australia's Davis cup players were in complete command of the men's national doubles tournament at the Longwood Cricket club today, and for the first time in the fifty-eight years' history of the tournament there will be an all-foreign final tomorrow.

Robert L. Riggs of Chicago and Elwood Cooke of Portland, Ore., Wimbledon champions, met with the same fate that did Gene Mako and Jack Tidball and Frank Parker and Donald McNeill in their efforts to stop the Australians.

Luck Goes Against Them.

Adrian Quist and John Bromwich disposed of Riggs and Cooke, 6-1, 6-4, 6-0, in the semi-finals, limiting them to the same number of games that fell to Mako and Tidball in the quarter-finals, though Riggs and Cooke, offering much more resistance, had the Australians on their heels for a while in the brilliantly fought second set.

The Wimbledon champions led at 3-1 in this set, in which they wrested away the attacking position with their lobs and dipping drives, and closed in to volley and smash with effect. Only a stroke of bad luck cost them the chance to square the score at 5-all. At 4-5 and 40-30 on Cooke's service, Riggs stepped across the net to smother a short return. His volley caught the tape, hung there, and then fell back as the gallery groaned.

American Pair Wilts.

When they lost the game and the set, the Americans wilted, and Quist and Bromwich, operating with their faultless precision of the first set,

LEE'S FIFTEENTH VICTORY MAKES IT 11 STRAIGHT DEFEATS FOR PIRATES

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa. Aug. 19.—The poor Pirates, who swooned themselves out of first place late last season, got kicked around some more today. This time they got the boot from the champion Cubs, who did some hitting behind Bill Lee and flattened Pie Traynor's baseball accordion into its eleventh straight defeat and the eighteenth in the last twenty-two games. The score of 5 to 0 was compiled before a nice, quiet crowd of 3,126.

The statuesque Lee, while acquiring his fifteenth decision of the year, was impressive as he held his foes to six hits but wasn't inclined to be boastful of his achievement. Modest Bill refused to accept praise after he had learned that his shutout was the third experienced by the Pirates in their last four engagements, that they have made only thirty hits in their last five battles and that their cleanup hitter, old Chuck Klein, has batted a mere .116 in his last eleven working days.

Galan Hits Two-Run Homer.

The Cubs, who incidentally created three previous numbers for the Pirates' current losing string, enjoyed their first flash of power from Augie Galan, who with one stroke did enough damage to put Lee on the profitable side of the ledger. Galan stepped up in the third inning with a mate on base, stroked his season's sixth homer over the wall and established a lead which subsequently grew because of the tactics of other Chicagoans.

For instance, Gabby Hartnett doubled after Bill Nicholson had doubled in the fifth. Gabby doubled again in the seventh as part of a four hit attack which completed the scoring and also knocked Starter Jim Tobin into oblivion.

Cubs Futile—At First.

The Cubs devoted the first two innings to leaving men on the bases. Galan walked and Leiber singled with two out in the first but Nicholson neglected to flag a third strike as it floated past. G. Russell led off in the second with a single and with one out Hartnett walked but Lee fouled out and Hack rolled to Fletcher. The only threat by the Pirates during this time was provided by singles with which Bell and P. Waner opened the first inning. Lee stopped the next three batters.

The third, which Galan made profitable for himself as well as his mates, opened with Herman singling to short center. Galan looked over one strike and then spanked the ball into the right field pavilion for a two-run lead. Leiber doubled to left, but his fellow workers gave no assistance.

MIKE KREEVICH'S SINGLE IN 7TH BEATS INDIANS

Eleventh Victory for Thornton Lee.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox beat the Cleveland Indians again yesterday to run their winning streak to six straight. The third placers fashioned a 6 to 5 victory with a spree of slugging after they had played dead in the first four innings. It was their fourth straight by a one run margin and the second victory for Thornton Lee in the winning streak which started last Sunday when the tall lefty shut out the Indians in Cleveland.

The Indians, who ousted the Sox from third place in Cleveland a week ago yesterday, sagged three and one-half games behind Jimmy Dykes' sprightly fellows, when they dropped yesterday's encounter.

Thornton Is Good At Times.

Lee, in registering his eleventh victory to become the Sox's leading pitcher, did not scintillate at all times, though he held the Indians hitless and runless in the first, second, fourth, fifth and eighth innings. He had two very bad innings—the third, in which the Indians took a 2 to 0 lead on a single by Johnny Allen, a triple by Bruce Campbell and a single by Ben Chapman, and the sixth, in which they gained a 5 to 3 advantage on a double by Jeff Heath, a single by Roy Mack, a homer by Rollie lead on a single by Johnny Allen, a Hemsley and a single by Lou Boudreau.

The Sox scored their first three runs on four hits off Allen in the fifth inning, added two runs and knocked out Allen in the sixth, in which they also made four hits, and made Al Milnar the losing pitcher with one run on one hit in the seventh inning.

Indians Score First.

The first hitting, as well as the first scoring, was effected in the Cleveland third. Considering the character of the session, the Sox were lucky only two runs got home. Allen opened with a single to center, advanced on Boudreau's sacrifice, and trotted home on Campbell's triple to right center. Campbell scored on Chapman's single to right. Trosky drew his second pass and then Hayes tried to start a double play before fielding Heath's grounder. The result was an error and the bases were loaded. Keltner fouled to McNair and Mack struck out.

A Double Steal Fails.

The Sox didn't get a man on base until one was out in the fourth. At that juncture Hayes singled to right and reached second on Campbell's fumble. Kreevich flied to Chapman and Walker was safe on Boudreau's error. Kuhel and Walker tried to put on a double steal, but Kuhel was speared at the plate.

Having made a hit off Allen in the first four innings the Sox decided the idea might be enlarged. In the fifth they stepped up the hit idea to score three runs, and take the lead. Appling opened with a single, and after Rosenthal had flied to Chapman, went to third on McNair's single to right. Appling scored on Tresh's sacrifice fly to Campbell, and, when Bruce made a wide throw to the plate, McNair reached second. Lee doubled to right, scoring McNair with the tying run and Lee came home on Hayes' double to put the Sox ahead.

Lee Has Some Trouble.

Maybe Lee got a little winded running out his double in the fifth. Anyhow, there was a let down in his pitching in the sixth. Heath, who has folded this season as a hitter, opened with a double. Keltner flied to

REDS, CARDINALS TIED AT 3-3 WHEN RAIN ENDS GAME

Battle Through 9 Innings, Then Call It Off.

Cincinnati, O., Aug. 19 (AP).—The Cincinnati Reds battled the St. Louis Cardinals for nine innings to a 3 to 3 tie today, rain ending the game. The 16,728 fans saw Johnny Mize, league leading slugger, who had a perfect day at the plate, double in J. Martin, who had singled, for a run in the first inning. Morton Cooper fanned the first three Reds up. Terry Moore hit the first ball pitched by Paul Derringer in the second for his eighth home run, giving the Cardinals a two run advantage.

After Derringer hit a popup which Cooper converted into an unassisted double play in the third Werber and Joost walked and Goodman doubled both home to tie the score. With one on base, Mize tripled over Goodman's head in the fifth, and the Cardinals again had the lead. A walk, a sacrifice, and Werber's single put the game into a tie again in the seventh. Goodman, first man up in the eighth, tripled, and Warneke came in to pitch. Lombardi and Berger walked to fill the bases. The strategy worked, for Craft lined into a double play. The Reds collected only four hits, but Cooper, who struck out six, issued as many walks. The teams will play a double-header tomorrow. The tie left the Reds five and one-half games in front of the Cardinals.

The Cardinals announced tonight that Pitcher Nate Andrews, purchased from the Columbus, O., club of the American association, would join them here tomorrow. The 26 year old right-hander has won seventeen and lost nine games this year with Columbus, a Cardinal farm.

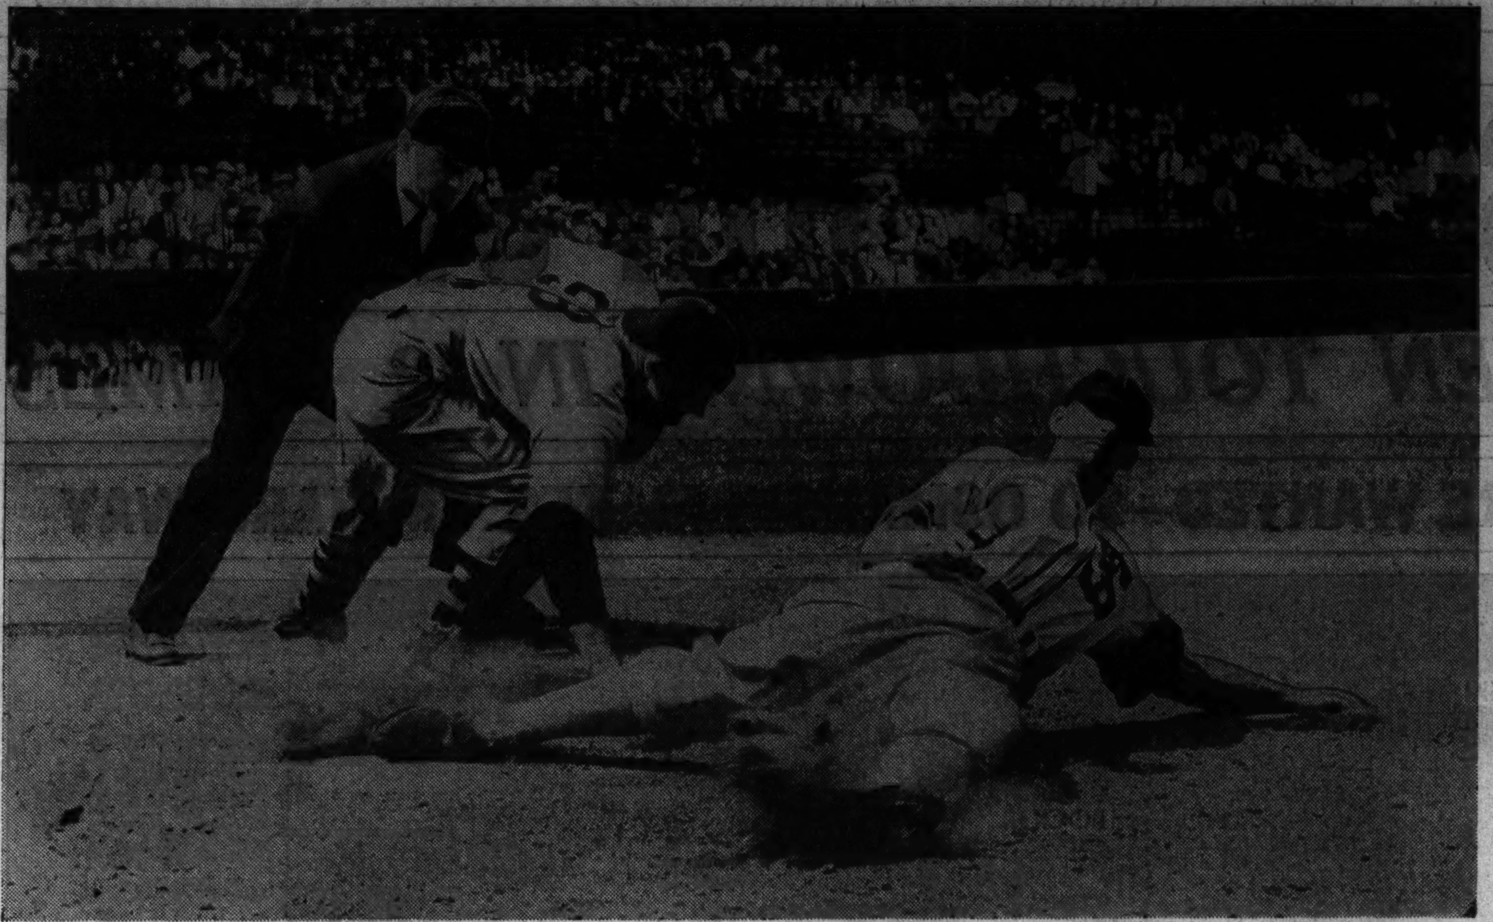
IT ALL GOES TO MAKE SIX STRAIGHT FOR THOSE WHITE SOX



Joe Kuhel, White Sox first baseman, is out at the plate on an attempted double steal in the fourth inning of yesterday's game with the Indians in Comiskey park. The catcher is Rollie Hemsley. Red Ormsby is the umpire. The Sox won, 6 to 5, for their sixth straight victory.

White Sox Beat Indians, 6-5; 6th Straight

Walker but Mack singled to center, scoring Heath. Hemsley knocked his second homer of the season, scoring behind Mack to make the score 5 to 3 in favor of the Indians. Hayes threw out Allen, and then Boudreau singled to center for the fourth hit of the inning. The side was out when Boudreau failed in an attempt to steal second.

The Sox tied the score in the sixth. Kreevich pushed off with a single to right and went to third on Walker's single. Walker got ants in his pants and ran to second on Appling's sacrifice fly. Though Gee was doubled off first, Kreevich had no difficulty in scoring. Rosenthal tripled to right and, after Milnar had replaced Allen, scored the tying run on McNair's first double. Tresh was given an intentional pass and was forced by Lee.

Campbell Flattens Tresh.

The Indians made a bid to resume the lead in the seventh, but a great throw by Rosenthal and Tresh's resistance to some rough play by Campbell halted the threat. Campbell opened with a single and took second on Chapman's fly to Rosenthal. Trosky knocked a long single to Rosenthal. Rosenthal made a wonderful throw to beat Campbell at the plate easily. Instead of sliding, Campbell crashed into Tresh, injuring Mike's right shoulder, but Mike held the ball and Campbell was out. Then Tresh retired and Norm Schlueter took his place.

Hayes scored the winning run in the seventh on a walk, Kuhel's sacrifice, and Kreevich's second single.

Millers Sell Pofahl, Shortstop, to Senators

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 19 (AP).—Jimmy Pofahl, youthful shortstop with Minneapolis of the American association, was sold today to the Washington Senators. The price was an unannounced cash consideration and three players. Pofahl, who is 22 years old, will report to Washington at the close of the association season.

Young Rigney Goes Out for 8th Straight Today

John D. Rigney, who has won ten games this season, seven of them in a row, will pitch for the White Sox in the final with the Indians in Comiskey park this afternoon. Mel Harder, who has won five straight for the Indians, will try to make it a half dozen.

The Sox will rest tomorrow and till sundown Tuesday. They will play a night game with the Yankees Tuesday and Wednesday the Yankees will bid farewell to Comiskey park for 1939 in a double-header.

Th Comiskey park ground crew did a nice job tidying up yesterday morning after Friday night's game. There wasn't a discarded straw hat or a tattered newspaper in sight.

The umpiring has been exceptionally good in the games since the Sox returned from their travels.

Willman Seeks to Keep Midget Lead Tonight

Tony Willman, rated as one of the best pilots in the central states, will defend his point lead for the Jay Horn trophy tonight at the Riverview Speedway, Western avenue and Addison street, where a program of eight midget auto races will be run.

Tony Willman.

Tony, through his victories in two forty lap feature events, accumulated enough points to take a short lead over Wally Zale. Bob Muhlke, Evanston driver, is in third place.

Harry MacQuinn, last year's champion midget pilot who was injured at Racine five months ago, will make his first Chicago appearance since his injury when he competes in a match race tonight. He will drive against the pilot who turns in the fastest time trials.

Tonight's races will be the fourth of a series for the Horn trophy, which will be given Sept. 10 to the pilot who has the most points.

Post time for the first race will be 8:30 o'clock. Time trials will start an hour earlier.

OHIO PILOT WINS 100 MILE RACE AT STATE FAIR

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 19. (AP)—Johnny Crone of Cincinnati, O., won the 100 mile feature of the Illinois State fair auto race program today, after the American Automobile association revoked its sanction of the event and three leading drivers withdrew.

Crone toured the one mile dirt track at an average speed of about 81 miles an hour. His time for the 100 miles was 1 hour 14 minutes.

Ted H. Doescher of Chicago, chief steward and A. A. A. representative, announced withdrawal of the association's sanction only a few hours before the feature race. He said the action was taken because race officials had accepted entries from many drivers who were not A. A. A. registered.

Tony Willman of Milwaukee, Wis., last year's race winner, withdrew his car following the A. A. A. ruling, and two others, Mark Light of Lebanon, Pa., and Lou Durant of Los Angeles, also retired.

Joe Chitwood of Pawhuska, Okla., claimed a new one mile dirt track record of 37.752 seconds in the time trials.

Cubs Win, 5-0; Pirates Lose 11th Straight

Nicholson was thrown out by Young. G. Russell scratched a single to Vaughan in deep short, Leiber remaining at third. Mattick bounced to Young and a double play put a quick finish to the inning.

Leave Three More On.

The Cubs got so tough with Tobin in the fourth that they filled the bases, but failed to cross the plate. After Hartnett had lofted to Bell in center, Lee singled past Tobin's expansive shoes and went to third on Hack's single to right. Herman tapped to Tobin and by this time Lee was weary of standing in one spot, so he legged it homeward in leisurely fashion and was nipped as he approached the plate. Galan then walked, filling the bases, and was forced on Leiber's poke to Vaughan.

Hartnett got himself into the ranks of the Tobin hecklers in the fifth and the results showed in the run column. Nicholson led off with a healthy two base slap against the right field barrier and stayed on second while G. Russell and Mattick were being retired. Then Hartnett pumped a two base drive to right and Nicholson scored.

Cubs Finally Chase Tobin.

Two were out in the seventh before the Cubs began to fix up marching orders for Tobin. Mattick dropped a single in short right. Hartnett drove a low liner into right and it took an unexpected hop over P. Waner's head for a double, Mattick scoring. Lee caromed a sound wallop off Handley's glove for a single, Hartnett going to third. Hack singled to right and Hartnett sauntered home. This was where Tobin accepted relief. It came from Heintzelman, who walked Herman and then coaxed a grounder to Vaughan from Galan's bat.

After those two hits in the first inning Lee's troubles were few and far between. In the third, after two were out, P. Waner and Vaughan singled. Klein ended this with a pop-foul handled by Hartnett. Fletcher became a base runner by virtue of a pass to open the fourth but a double play and a strike out cleaned up the incident. The next Pirate base runner didn't make his appearance until after Lee had dispatched two pinch hitters in the eighth. Bell then singled past Mattick, expiring when Nicholson capture P. Waner's fly. All that came in the ninth was a single to right by Fletcher.

Cubs Play Two; Whitehill and Passeau to Pitch

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Pittsburgh, Pa., Aug. 19.—Claude Passeau and Earl Whitehill will work for the Cubs' cause tomorrow in the synthetic double-header against the Pirates. Bob Klinger and Max Butcher have been nominated on the local pitching ticket.

Red Corriden, the Cubs' traffic officer in the third base coaching box, was off duty. He was in Indianapolis for dental attention. Coach Roy Johnson filled in for Corriden and Charley Root performed in Johnson's customary spot at first base.

The Pirates have been having tough luck. Some of the boys have whooping cough. Their first and second string catchers are out of action. Jim Tobin, who started today, had been incapacitated for three weeks. Cy Blanton, their best pitcher, has worked only one and one-third innings since he injured his arm in a game at Chicago April 23. He's about ready to return to work.

Diz Dean got to bragging about his running skill before the game today and Jim Gleeson announced he'd beat him at any distance. Diz took a seven yard handicap and in an eighty-five yard dash won the decision.

Mills Will Play Clowns in Two Games Today

Two of the strongest baseball teams now touring the country, the Ethiopian Clowns and the New Orleans Crescents, will be visiting semi-pro attractions this afternoon.

The Ethiopian Clowns will play the Mills in a double-header in Mills stadium, Lake street and Kilpatrick avenue, and the New Orleans Crescents will oppose the Spencer Coals in two games at Spencer field, 4200 North Central avenue.

Present Shadow Game.

The Clowns will present a shadow game in the second contest. The shadow game is a game in which an imaginary ball is batted and thrown around and the fielders appear to make sensational stops. The team holds victories over the American Giants, Homestead Grays and a number of Negro National league teams.

Gregory Lippold will pitch the first game for the Mills. Lippold will be seeking his eleventh victory. The Clowns will start Dave Impo. Impo recently struck out thirty-four batters in sixteen innings in a tournament in Denver, Colo. Lefty Hautekamer will work the second game for the Mills and George Macan will start for the Clowns.

Stevens Opens for Coals.

Bill [Lefty] Stevens will pitch the first game for the Coals against the New Orleans Crescents. Stevens will be seeking his tenth victory. William Hearn or Mike Yarros will start the second game.

Harry Kimberlin Sent to Los Angeles by Browns

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 19 (AP).—Pitcher Harry Kimberlin, who had been sent to San Antonio of the Texas league but had refused to report there, was optioned today by the St. Louis Browns to Los Angeles of the Pacific Coast league.

RED SOX WIN, 8-6, FROM SENATORS, THEN LOSE, 2 TO 1

Williams' Four Run Homer Clinches First Game.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP).—The Washington Senators ended a season long jinx today by beating the Boston Red Sox, 2 to 1, in the second game of a double bill for Washington's first victory at home over the New Englanders. Ted Williams' home run with the bases full in the ninth inning gave Boston the first game, 8 to 6. The split left the Red Sox still seven and a half games behind the New York Yankees, who were rained out. Ken Chase did a masterful pitching job for the Senators in the second game. He yielded a run in the first inning on a single by Jimmy Doerr and Jim Foxx's double, and thereafter gave up only two singles. Foxx made his 31st homer with none on in the fourth inning of the first game.

EIGHT THIRTY IS TRAVERS WINNER; JOHNSTOWN OUT

Belair Star Is Scratched Because of Mud.

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 19 [Special.]—Eight Thirty and Now What won stake events today before a season's record crowd of 22,000 as Saratoga's muddy track again took its toll. In the seventieth Travers, oldest race run in this country, Johnstown was scratched because of the slow footing, leaving George Widener's crack colt to score a hollow victory at 1 to 3. The triumph was worth $16,575 of the gross purse of $21,075.

In the $10,100 Spinaway, Perida, the favorite, broke her leg and was destroyed. The accident occurred soon after the start of the six furlong sprint and near the spot where the fleet filly Hauca met her end in the same race last year. Other two year olds have come to grief at approximately the same spot, notably Thingumbob, another casualty of 1938.

Now What All the Way.

Now What, which carries Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt's silks, was away flying, and never was overtaken. At the finish, where she was timed in 1:13 1-5, Now What was a half length before Piquet, which led Jeanne D'Arc by a length and a half. The victory was worth $8,850.

Behind Eight Thirty by four lengths at the finish of the Travers mile and a quarter was Millsdale stable's Sun Lover. The only other starter was Sir Marlboro, 15 to 1 outsider. From the overnight field of five Hash was a late withdrawal, several hours after the night's rain made Johnstown's withdrawal a certainty.

George Widener received the Man o' War bowl from Samuel D. Riddle after the finish and said that Eight Thirty would go "back to the farm." His remark does not necessarily mean Eight Thirty is to be retired, merely that she is to be rested while future plans are made.

Fails to Clear Situation.

The Travers was supposed to throw more light on the tangled three year old situation which has Johnstown, Challedon and Eight Thirty as the candidates for top honors. Sun Lover, which had won some following earlier in the season, did nothing today to enhance his position.

"It was easy for Eight Thirty. He's a good horse. I never was worried about getting past Sir Marlboro nor was I worried about Sun Lover overtaking me."

BALA ORMONT WINS

Pawtucket, R. I., Aug. 19 (AP).—Bala Ormont, Kentucky bred daughter of Ormont, climaxed her 3 year old campaign with a victory in the $7,500 added New England Oaks here today. The Friedberg and Axton filly scored by a neck over the Wheatley stable's Hostility at the finish of the mile and one-sixteenth. The time was 1:45 2-5.

A length back of these two was Ogden Phipps' Despondent, coupled with Hostility, as well as with the Belair stud's Wise Lady in the betting, all three being trained by George Tappen. The Santa Anita Derby winner, Ciencia, from the King ranch, ran fourth. She was coupled with Otra, this entry being favored at 23 to 10.

Went to post at 2:23½. At post 1½ minutes. Start good for all but Odd Blue from Bahr gate. Won easily, place driving.

LEARNER, away fast and having speed, drew out gradually while making the early pace under a snug hold, increased her advantage under urging after reaching the final quarter, where she raced very wide and won in hand. JADVA, raced wide after the first three-eighths, responded in the last three-sixteenths and finished in resolute fashion. LIFELIKE, well up from the start and kept on the inside early, returned to the inside after racing around SADIE F. in the stretch and held on fairly well, but could not withstand JADVA.

INVITING, allowed to swerve early, raced wide when alternating with HAPPY ROAD in the pacemaking, drew away when called upon, swerved out slightly in the last eighth and weakened, but managed to last. NESSUS, reserved off the pace under steady restraint, moved up gradually when placed to pressure and was wearing down the winner. JIM CORN was under mild urging, could not improve his position under stronger pressure when approaching the stretch, but overtook tired horses while holding on well through the last quarter. KING CARL was on the inside to the stretch, did not keep up after coming out for the drive, but rallied near the end. SHOT PUT began slowly. DECOURCY was outrun. MYPONNE showed nothing and swerved in the stretch. [illegible]

They Seem Pleased to Meet Again

Lou Ambers (left) and Henry Armstrong, who meet Tuesday night in a lightweight title bout in Yankee stadium, appear pleased at the prospect of another meeting. Armstrong took Ambers' title away from him last year in a sizzling battle. Prospects are for another of the same sort Tuesday night. If Ambers wins he is to get a shot at Armstrong's welter title Nov. 1. [Associated Press Wirephoto.]

Armstrong Is 5-8 to Defeat Ambers Again

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—The labor Promoter Mike Jacobs has expended in attempting to ballyhoo Lou Ambers into the position of serious contender for Henry Armstrong's lightweight title appeared to have been wasted today as ringwise betters made Henry 5 to 8 favorite in their fifteen round title bout in Yankee stadium Tuesday night.

Recent stories of Armstrong's fragile hands and his inability to make weight were exploded today by reports from the champion's camp in Pompton Lakes, N. J., where he showed all his usual power and skill in a final workout. The weight question was answered by the announcement that his scheduled drill was reduced from five to eight rounds because he already is at 134½ pounds, a half pound below the class limit.

Sparring Partners Suffer.

Working three fast rounds against Lew Feldman and one each with Bobby Ruffin and Chester Rido, Armstrong demonstrated that his punches were sharp and accurate as ever, which is good enough.

Ambers, nearing the close of his camp period in Carmel, N. Y., slugged savagely in four rounds of sparring, and announced when it was over that he is confident he can reverse the decision given in his first meeting with Armstrong last Aug. 17, when he lost the championship. That bout, held in Madison Square Garden, attracted a gate of $102,000, and Jacobs is predicting that Tuesday's show will play to 30,000 fans, who will pay $150,000.

Sign for Another Meeting.

Ambers and Armstrong already have signed to meet again on November for the welterweight crown, also the property of Armstrong, if Henry is beaten Tuesday. Ambers has said he will retire from the ring and marry if he loses.

Ringside seats are selling for $16.50, and fans who saw the first meeting claim it should be worth it.

Both fighters will remain in camp until time to motor to the city for weighing-in ceremonies before the athletic commission Tuesday noon.

Lincoln Park Post Team Wins Legion Rifle Match

Canon City, Colo., Aug. 19.—Scoring 985 points out of a possible 2,000, the rifle team of the Lincoln Park post 461 of Chicago won the 1939 American Legion McQuigg match from a field of twenty entries. Victory brought the Chicago team custody for one year of the McQuigg trophy and gold medals for the team members. This match was fired during the last week of June on the home ranges of the competing teams. All the scores had to be cleared through National Marksmanship Director James W. Woolrey here.

Massini Club Will Hold Six Hour Bike Race Today

A six hour bicycle team race will feature the program presented this afternoon at 2 o'clock on the Humboldt park bicycle bowl by the Mazzini club. Fifteen teams made up of two men each are entered. The final hour of the race will consist of a sprint for points to help determine the winner. The meet is sanctioned by the Central A. A. U.

GIRLS MEET TONIGHT.

The Chicago Down Draft girls and the Cleveland Rosenblums will meet tonight in Normal park, 61st street and Racine avenue.

2 BOUTS STAND OUT ON WEEK'S FIGHT PROGRAM

Two bouts will dominate this week's boxing program.

Eddie Lander, west side featherweight contender, will risk his position in a return contest of ten rounds against Frankie [Kid] Covelli in Marigold Gardens tomorrow.

In the other event Tony Musto, Blue Island heavyweight, will open a comeback in a ten rounder against Eddie Simms, Cleveland trial horse, in White City Friday.

Lander has not been defeated in a year. He has had eleven encounters in that time, winning nine decisions. He was held to a draw in a previous match with Covelli Feb. 13. Eddie also fought to a draw with Johnny Brown on Jan. 23. His victims include Nick Camarata, Henry Hook, Henry Huerta, Frankie Kainrath, Kenny Bell, Patrick O'Brien, Johnny Boyd, Sonny Batson, and Andy Canal.

Covelli a Dangerous Foe.

These achievements have given Lander national recognition. Covelli is a dangerous foe, however, which means Eddie must be in form if he expects to win. Frankie won a disputed decision over Brown in White City July 26 to score his 78th victory in 122 fights.

George Nyberg, Port Arthur, Ont., welterweight, will be searching for his twenty-second triumph in a row in a four rounder against Ralph Gizzy of Pittsburgh. Nick Castiglione, Italo-American Youth organization lightweight, is paired with Johnny Balmer of Peoria in a five round feature. Other bouts bring together Frank Green and Jack [Tiger] Wright, and Jimmy Santori and Joey Ojida. They are booked for four rounds.

Musto Loses to Barlund.

In his last appearance Musto was defeated by Gunnar Barlund of Finland in Chicago Stadium, June 8. The setback cost Muston his No. 10 rating. Simms whipped Buddy Scott of Dallas June 19 and then lost a split decision to Henry Wacker July 5.

Amateur shows will be held in Northwest stadium, Rainbo Fronton, and Savoy arena Tuesday; Ringside arena Wednesday, and Madison Athletic club and Northwest stadium Friday. Boxers from the Polish Roman Catholic union will meet a Savoy Athletic club team in a series of contests in the Savoy. John Yocius, Polish boxer, will meet Anthony Jones, Savoy, in a five rounder. Jimmy and Buster Crow, fighting brothers of Danville, Ill., appear in two matches of five rounds heading the Ringside card.

A recent defeat at the hands of Jimmy Perrin has cost Sixto Escobar a proposed match with Frankie Covelli in St. Philip stadium. . . . Joe Louis has ordered six pairs of white woolen trunks, size 35½, to be used while training for his heavyweight title defense against Bob Pastor in Detroit, Sept. 20. . . . Hymie Dabbs, west side lightweight prospect, has returned to training chores after a long layoff. F. M.

P.].—The Cincinnati Reds, seeking pitcher reinforcements for the stretch drive in the National league pennant race, today obtained Milburn Shoffner, 33-year-old southpaw, from the Boston Bees on waivers. IT'S THE LARGE ONES ANGLERS WANT TO HOOK!

Survey Shows Artificial Lures Are Most Fun.

BY BOB BECKER.

Would fishermen rather catch one or two big ones of whopper proportions rather than a limit of small or medium sized fish?

Does the rank and file of fishermen believe that it's always more fun to catch game fish on artificial lures than with live bait? A recent survey among anglers has developed surprising information on these questions. We have thought that most fishermen prefer a limit catch irrespective of the size of the fish caught to coming home with just one or two big ones. But the survey shows that the boys would rather get the whoppers even though they may be few and far between.

Provide Most Fun.

The second interesting point brought out by the survey is this: It's the plug, the fly, spinners, and spoon caster that apparently provide the most fun and, as a rule, the most consistent success in hooking into the real big ones.

The third point stressed in the survey is this: Many fishermen continue to stick to live bait because they are not familiar with the use of artificials, or they haven't given artificial lures a thorough trial. There are times and there are lakes which may call for the use of various kinds of live bait in order to get a string of fish. But the fisherman will notice no matter where he goes that the fellow who has the most fun, gets the largest number of fish to strike, and apparently experiences the most thrills in fishing, is the one who considers fishing a game calling for different tactics and different lures from day to day.

Trolls Small Plug Deep.

We were on a bass lake several weeks ago. We saw three boats anchored on a weed bed. Everybody was fishing deep [with bait] for small mouths. The few fish being caught were small, many of them undersized. The fellow who really connected with some fine bass wasn't parked anywhere. He knew the rock and weed bars and he trolled a small plug way down deep. One of his bass weighed more than three pounds. There was no doubt in our mind that the fellow using artificials was having the most fun and he certainly was catching the largest bass.

There doubtless are many fishermen relying on nothing but live bait on every trip because they don't know how to use artificial bait casting or fly rod lures, or else they do not know which lures to put into action in certain locations. The Tribune handbook on fishing, "Which Lures and Where," has many practical tips for these fishermen.

His Speed and Drive Rock Bigger Foes.

It's not hard to single out Ralph Heikkinen of Michigan when the All-Stars assemble for their daily practice sessions in Dyche stadium. He's the little guy in the line.

Ralph Heikkinen.

Actually the tow-headed 180 pound guard is almost dwarfed as he lines up with the hulking giants who comprise the remainder of the All-Stars' starting line which will face the New York Giants in Soldiers' field the night of Aug. 30.

But his size, or lack of it, isn't worrying the All-Star coaching staff. They know that he was the speediest blocking guard in the Big Ten last year, a terror on the deep reverse. His amazing speed and drive rocked bigger men during the last two years, factors which made him a unanimous choice as guard of the year in 1938.

Rise Not an Easy One.

A native of Michigan's upper peninsula and a graduate of Bessemer high school, Heikkinen's rise to All-American honors at Michigan was not an easy one.

In fact, Heik went unnoticed in his sophomore year, not seeing enough action to win his letter. In the spring of 1937, Hunk Anderson, one of the greatest line coaches in the business, took over the Wolverine linemen and immediately singled out Heikkinen as a good prospect for running guard.

Nominated for Award.

He was a star performer from the outset of the 1937 season, capping his performance by being elected by his teammates to receive the CHICAGO TRIBUNE award as most valuable player on the squad. He was the first Michigan player to be so recognized in his junior year.

A new coaching régime took over at Michigan last year and Heikkinen continued on to even greater honors. Clarence Munn, the old Minnesota guard, took over the line duties and developed Heikkinen into an even greater guard than he had been the year before.

He attributes his success to the teachings of Anderson and Munn, to Anderson, who discovered him, and to Munn, who developed him into All-American caliber. While his powerful charge, speed and blocking distinguish him on the field, his greatest asset, according to his coaches, was his headwork.

Called Smartest Guard.

Munn said at the close of last season that "Heikkinen is by all odds the smartest guard I have ever seen." His sense of timing always placed him at the right spot, both on offense and defense.

He names as his greatest thrill in athletics, "defeating Ohio State, 18 to 0, last year, after taking it on the chin for three years." In that game Heikkinen's assignment was blocking the center. It is a matter of record that the Buckeyes used up three centers in an effort to stop the one man riot in the Michigan line.

His final year was climaxed by almost unanimous recognition as All-American guard, selection on the Shrine East team and reëlection by his teammates as the most valuable player on the squad. After the All-Star game he will return to Ann Arbor, where a job awaits him as assistant line coach. He will also take up the study of law this fall.

EXPECT RECORD IN MOTORCYCLE RACES AT FAIR

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 19 [Special].—A new world's record in the twenty-five mile national championship motorcycle race which will climax the Illinois state fair sports program here tomorrow is the prediction of Manager James E. Kidd.

Woodsie Castonguay, who established a new world's mark in the event last year, will be back to defend his honors. Last year heavy rains within 12 hours of the race did considerable damage to the record chances of several of the riders, but Castonguay sped to the new mark of 19:02.113 to better the former time of 20:13.20.

Lester Hillbish, who finished close behind Castonguay, also has notified Kidd that he expects to clip the old record. Hillbish reports several improvements have been made his machine faster and that he will repeat his victory of 1937 when he won the title.

Kenny Ingle, world's five mile champion, will also be among the 137 riders who will compete in the third annual fair motorcycle races. The Hammond, Ind., boy set the new mark on a dirt track recently.

Three thousand dollars in prizes will be awarded to winners in the 12 events on the fair program. A total of $1,230 will be distributed among the ten contestants in the 25 mile feature.

The ten racers who make the fastest time in the time trials will be eligible for the 25 mile national race.

The 137 entrants represent 41 different states.

Flaherty went through the All-Star assignment last year when the Redskins, 1937 champions, were the National Football league representatives in the game. The Redskins lost, 28 to 16, on two intercepted passes, after they had come from behind to take the lead in the second half.

College Players Keyed.

Because of the National Football league and professional football, Flaherty hopes Owen can see the picture as accurately, at close range, as he, Flaherty, can at the distance of a year's reflection. In commenting on the Giants' chances, Flaherty said:

"Until a coach or a player has gone through the All-Star game, he has no idea of what a terrific contest it is. In my years of playing and coaching, I have never seen a team keyed as those college All-Stars were last year.

"The collegians have every advantage except experience. They are younger, have greater man power, nothing to lose, and the Chicago fans are always with them."

Flaherty sees the All-Stars' psychological advantage as the chief menace to the National Football league's representative this year, the Giants. Weeks of balloting throughout the nation, association with other All-Americans and the pre-game pageantry all combine to lift the All-Stars to emotional heights, Flaherty thinks.

Flaherty points out that the Giants may be difficult to convince that this game will be different from any similar assignment.

All-Stars Have Passers.

It is not likely that the Giants' defense will be greatly taxed by running plays, Flaherty, himself a former Giant end star, believes. College coaches have just about been convinced in the five previous Chicago All-Star games that the collegians cannot run against the tremendous National league lines. Therefore they concentrate on passes.

The Giants' task is complicated by the fact that the All-Stars this year have the greatest array of passers in the history of the series, Flaherty asserts. They had Sammy Baugh in 1937 and Cecil Isbell in 1938, both of whom passed the collegians to victory. This year they have Davey O'Brien, Sid Luckman, Billy Patterson and John Pingel.

Cobb Predicts 400 M. P. H. Speed for Car in Future

Bonneville, Utah, Aug. 19 (AP).—A speed of 400 miles per hour in an automobile was predicted today by John Cobb of England. He expressed his belief it could be accomplished with the ultra-streamlined machine he brought here for assaults on the world's record, or one of similar design.

However, he emphasized his main purpose at present is to crack the existing record of 357.5 m. p. h. set on the thirteen mile salt bed track last September by Capt. George E. T. Eyston, a fellow countryman.

"Of course, in a couple of years' time with the more powerful motors and refinements Mr. Railton [Reid Railton, English designer of Cobb's car] will probably be able to perfect, and improved tires it will be perfectly feasible to make a car go 400 miles an hour," Cobb declared.

"My car is perfectly capable of being improved up to the requirements and there is no fundamental reason why it should not be made to travel that fast.

His Railton Red Lion speedster is only four feet three inches high, enclosing all mechanism as well as the wheels beneath its turtle shaped cover.

"It is half the horse power [2,600] and half the weight [approximately 7,000 pounds] of Eyston's machine," said Cobb.

OPEN PLAY FOR WALTHER LEAGUE TITLES TODAY

Twenty-five sectional Walther league softball champions will start play today for the fast and slow pitching softball championships in which eighty-five sectional teams have been competing for berths. The fast pitching division games are carded at Ryan's woods, 87th street and Western avenue, and the slow pitching section in Grant park at 7th street. Grace, River Forest, will defend the 1938 fast section championship while Bethel will be a favorite to retain the slow division honors. Hope of the Southwest zone will defend the junior fast pitching championship.

Richards Started It.

Kink Richards, the veteran quarter back, began the string three years ago when as a volunteer instructor on his first visit to a golf course he moved in behind a teammate to make a careful study of his swing. Richards received a long gash over the eye where the teammate caught him with the club head on the back swing. The next year Tod [Sinbat] Goodwin, a regular end, and a third string end did a little impromptu wrestling in their room. One end suffered a knee injury that put him out of football. It was Goodwin, the regular. Hank Soar and Leemans formed a corporation for retrieving lost golf balls last season and on their first prowl over a New York course they ran into a mess of poison ivy. Soar thought it was wild roses.

The fourth, and Owen hopes, last chapter to this series of incidents was added yesterday when 16 Giants took advantage of the recess in the afternoon to go fishing. In attempting to cut a line, Dale Burnett, veteran half back, sliced a six inch gash in his right leg. He was hustled off to Ironwood, five miles away, where a surgeon took a stitch in the wound. Burnett worked out this morning, but was none too frisky.

Barring further injuries, the Giants need only to perfect their team work and build up a little hatred or some good old college rah rah to be ready for the All-Stars. They have nine more days in which to whip themselves into the proper mental attitude before leaving for Chicago and for that reason no great concern is felt over their present complacency.

Eight Teams Play in Cricket League Today

Only eight of the ten clubs in the Illinois Cricket association will see action this afternoon as one game. Lake Forest vs. Winnetka, has been postponed. Chicago, the league leader and still undefeated, faces Hyde Park at 48th street and the outer drive and will be seeking its twelfth straight victory. Other games are:

Lake Shore vs. Milwaukee at Milwaukee [two games].

C. Y. O. Softball Teams to Decide Titles Today

Catholic Youth organization softball champions will be decided this afternoon in St. Philip's stadium, Kedzie avenue and Van Buren street. Three games—girls', junior, and senior—will be played. The first game starts at 1:30 o'clock.

Americans Set Relay Record in French Meet

PARIS, France, Aug. 19 (AP).—Four barnstorming American track stars ran the 3,200 meters relay in seven minutes, 35 and two-tenths seconds today, a new world record. Ralph Schwarzkopf of Michigan, Roy Cochran of Indiana, Blaine Rideout of West Texas Teachers and Charles Beetham of Ohio State cut six-tenths of a second off the old record of 7:35.8, hung up Aug. 15, 1936, at London by the American team of Charles Hornbostel, Robert Young, Harry Williamson and John Woodruff.

In the first day of the two-day international meet the United States team won every event in which it was entered. The 400 meter relay team, made up of Joe Batiste of Tucson, Bill Watson of Michigan, Erwin Miller of Southern California, and Clyde Jeffrey of Stanford, turned in a time of 41.2 seconds.

Jeffrey won the special 200 yards "Prix du Stade" while Batiste took the 110 meters hurdles. George Varoff of Oregon won the pole vault, Watson the shot put and Batiste the running broadjump.

ALL-STARS GET 7 TOUCHDOWNS IN TWO GAMES

Blues Defeat Reds Twice; Balasz, Booth Hurt.

son fumbled when tackled inside his own 10 yard line and Alex Schoenbaum, burly Ohio State tackle, recovered for the Reds. Johnny Pingel, Reds' left half back then shot a scoring pass to John Wysocki of Villanova, in the corner of the end zone. Bill Hofer's try for the point was wide.

By the time the other teams took the field, players evidenced more enthusiasm and drive. This was reflected in the offense. Osmanski, who has tremendous straightaway power, was amply backed up by the excellent passing of O'Brien and Luckman. The Columbia star yesterday gave a demonstration of accuracy which only has been equalled by Sammy Baugh and Cecil Isbell in other All-Star camps.

Blues Slow to Start.

The Blues were slow to start and trailed, 7 to 2, early in the game, but later punched over three touchdowns to put the decision out of reach of the Reds. The lineup follows:

BLUES [22].		REDS [13].
Coughlan	L. E.	Brown
Hale	L. T.	Mihal
Hovland	L. G.	Tyrrell
Aldrich	C.	Dowd
Bock	R. G.	Calvelli
Voigts	R. T.	Haak
Young	R. E.	Lenc
Booth	Q. B.	Sherman
O'Brien	L. H.	Brunner
Bottari	R. H.	Hall
Osmanski	F. B.	Ippolito

Touchdowns—Hall, Osmanski [2], Young, Ippolito.

Points after touchdowns—Mihal, Luckman [2].

Safety—Dowd.

Substitutions—Blues, Longhi for Aldrich; Heikkinen for Bock; Twedell for Hovland; Janke for Hale; Van Ranst for Voigts; Seidel for Booth; Smilanich for Bottari; Panish for Smilanich; Luckman for O'Brien.

Reds—McDonald for Dowd, McGoldrick for Calvelli, Humphrey for Tyrrell, Siegel for Hack, Haak for Mihal, Daddio for Brown, Fay for Brunner, Kischer for Fay, Jefferson for Hall.

Just as there is no doubt that Luckman is a fine forward passer, there is no opportunity after yesterday's game, to question Vic Bottari's ability to play right half. His blocking was a large factor in Osmanski's ground gaining. Then, too, Waddy Young, Oklahoma end, lived up to the amazing reports of his pass catching ability.

Lose Ball on 16 Yard Line.

Despite Bottari's 40 yard run early in the first period, the Blues could not continue, losing the ball on the Reds' 16 yard line. The second attack, which linked together three first downs, never got nearer the Reds' goal than two yards, Earl Brown breaking up the fourth down run by O'Brien and throwing the Texas Christian star for a loss of six yards when the blocker missed the assignment completely. This, however, led to the Blues' first score, a safety, when the Reds' center, Jerry Dowd, passed the ball out of Warren Brunner's reach and it rolled past the end line.

In the second quarter the Reds took the lead, Parker Hall of Mississippi scoring after a run of forty-two yards when he intercepted O'Brien's pass intended for Osmanski. Joe Mihal kicked the extra point.

Reds Stall Blues' Attack.

Aroused by this mishap, the Blues swept down the field with Bottari going thirty-one yards on a reverse to the Reds' 12 yard line. Four plays gained only nine yards, however, and the Reds took over. Hall kicked out of bounds on his own 27 yard line and from this point the Blues scored in nine plays. Osmanski plunged over from the 2 yard line and Luckman place kicked the point.

Numerous subsitutions were made at this point on both teams. Ralph Heikkinen, Michigan guard, provided the next scoring opportunity for the Blues when he recovered a fumble on the Reds' 28 yard line. On the second play Luckman passed to Young down center. The Oklahoman made a spectacular catch and continued ten yards to the goal, evading two tacklers. The extra point made the score 16 to 7.

Another Pass Starts Parade.

Another pass from Luckman to Young for fifteen yards started the final parade of the Blues. It put the ball on the Reds' 33 yard line. On third down Luckman swept right end for a first down on the 21 and then Sid crashed through right tackle and lateralled to Osmanski, who ran on for the score. Luckman's placement kick hit the upright and bounded back.

Everett Kischer of Iowa State, at left half for the Reds, passed to Sollie Sherman of Chicago for forty-five yards near the close of the game and then Tony Ippolito, Purdue back, and Bernie Jefferson of Northwestern hammered on toward the goal, Ippolito smashing inside tackle for eleven yards on one plunge. On fourth down on the Blues' 1 yard line, Kischer passed to Ippolito in the end zone for the touchdown. Paul Humphrey's place kick for the point was blocked.

The All-Stars will work out this morning at 10 o'clock for their only practice of the day.

TOURNAMENT ON THURSDAY TO PAY TRIBUTE TO HAGEN

8 Teams to Play in Four Day Round Robin.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

On the twenty-first of August, 1914, a fresh-faced kid of 22 came off the last green of the Midlothian Country club of Chicago with his first national open golf championship. He had registered as Walter C. Hagen, a Rochester, N. Y., professional. He had also initiated a new era in professional golf by the manner in which he had conducted himself during the tournament.

On next Thursday afternoon, at the same Midlothian club, the same Hagen will be out on the first tee, the guest of honor in one of the most unusual golf events ever held, thanks to Midlothian members headed by Joe Creevy and Jack Carroll. The occasion will be the marking of Hagen's twenty-fifth anniversary as a national champion.

It's a Different Tourney.

For the next four days, continuing through Sunday, Hagen and fifteen other professionals will battle through a golf tournament such as Chicagoans never have seen. True, our town has seen national opens, national amateurs and national P. G. A.'s. The opens, by the very nature of their fields, have made it difficult for the average spectator to follow if he would see every star in action. This has been equally true of the match play events until they reached the final stages.

The pattern of this Hagen anniversary show, however, guarantees galleries the greatest opportunity they have had to see sixteen of the big names of golf without dashing hither and yon in order to get a peek at a favorite.

Round Robin Event.

The tournament is a round robin, carry-over match play event, involving eight two man teams. Each team will play the other seven once during the four day play. This makes a total of twenty-eight matches, or 126 holes to be played by each twosome.

Each team will have a chance to win right up to Sunday afternoon's final round. For example, Hagen and his partner, Gene Sarazen, play Horton Smith and Paul Runyan in the first round Thursday afternoon. They finish the eighteen holes three down to Smith and Runyan. In Friday morning's second round, Walter and Gene may defeat Henry Picard and John Revolta, five up. Therefore, Hagen and Sarazen are two up on the tournament as a whole. The team with the most "up holes" Sunday wins the tournament. Each man plays his own ball, with low ball winning. If, on the first hole, Hagen has a three, while Sarazen, Smith and Runyan take fours, Hagen and Sarazen are one up.

Galleryites who arrive early enough Thursday will witness what Midlothian's committee calls a $1,000 golf lesson. With Smith at a microphone explaining each shot, all of the contestants will give demonstrations. This feature will begin at 12:30 p. m. and continue until 2 p. m., fifteen minutes before the first match goes out.

Each foursome match will be sent out fifteen minutes apart. This will permit spectators to follow a match of their choice, and if they should decide to pursue another, they will know exactly where to find it. Five miles of ropes and 1,300 stakes will be used to regulate the galleries, so that not only will every one have a chance to see, but also the players will have plenty of room. Midlothian caddies, Andy Frain ushers and state and county police will handle the marshaling.

A number of standards will be carried with each match, indicating which team is up and which is down, so that galleries will be informed of the progress of each team all through the matches.

HUISACHES POLO TEAM WILL MEET RISING SUN RANCH

The Huisaches polo team of Houston, Tex., will ride against Rising Sun Ranch at 4 o'clock this afternoon in the stadium field of the Oak Brook Polo club, York road and 22d street.

Three of the starting players for the Huisaches were members of the team which won the intercircuit title in Cleveland in 1936 and at Oak Brook in 1937. They are Bob Farish, captain; Billy Dritt, and W. S. Farish Jr. The fourth regular is Harry [Dutch] Evinger.

Rising Sun Ranch will call upon six players, shifting them as to personnel and positions. The starting lineup will not be determined until just before the contest, but indications point to Harry Owen Jr., Paul Butler, Bobby Nichoalds, and Capt. Roy D. Keehn Jr., as the combination.

GREENBERG WINS IN PARK TENNIS; RAIN HALTS PLAY

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—Rain today caused suspension of play in the seventeenth annual national public parks tennis tournament after one men's and one women's semi-final had been completed at Randalls Island. Referee Joseph W. Thurston then called the competition off for the day.

Behind schedule already, the tourney now is so far behind that some of the players may be called upon to go into action three times tomorrow in order to finish in the afternoon. Today's victors were Seymour Greenberg of Chicago and Mrs. Marjorie Blair of Santa Ana, Cal., both advancing to the singles final in their respective divisions. Greenberg defeated David Perchonock of Philadelphia, Pa., 6-3, 6-2, 6-2, while Mrs. Blair won from Mrs. Alice McDonald of Chicago, 6-1, 6-2.

ARIZONA TEAM PLAYS.

The occasion will mark the 25th anniversary of his winning his first national open golf championship. Hagen and fifteen other noted professionals pictured here will compete in a four day round robin, carry-over match play event involving eight two man teams. Twenty-eight matches, or 126 holes will be played by each twosome. The team with the most "up holes" Sunday wins the tournament. Each man plays his own ball, with low ball winning.

Barnes Wins New Jersey State Open with 292

Nutley, N. J., Aug. 19 [Special].—Long Jim Barnes, 52 year old veteran, today added the New Jersey state title to his golf collection when he finished the 72 hole test over the Yountakah Country club course with a score of 292. Second to the slender Essex county professional was Johnny Kinder with 295.

CAMPBELL GOES 141 M. P. H.; NEW WATER RECORD

CONISTON, Eng., Aug. 19 (AP).—Sir Malcolm Campbell drove Bluebird II. over the placid waters of Lake Coniston to a world motorboat speed record today, an achievement which brought man to the threshold of a new era in water speed.

The huge silver sled averaged 141.74 miles per hour on two trips over the measured mile, shattering Sir Malcolm's own record by 10.81 miles per hour. The engine was a 7 year old Rolls Royce product. The boat covered the southward run over the mile in 25.2 seconds and hit a top speed of 142.85 m. p. h. or 124.06 knots. Campbell swung her through a smooth semi-circle and back she came, this time in 25.6 seconds and 140.62 m. p. h. or 122.12 knots.

Makes Terrific Noise.

Mechanics who had worked all night changing the position of the intake for the water cooler had led her out to the start just after 7 a. m. An hour later Campbell swaggered through the crowd and was rowed out. He got in, a tiny white figure against the dull silver of the boat, and a moment later the motor thundered to life.

Far down the lake on the press boat you could hear Bluebird before you could see her. Then as her song smashed the stillness of the lake John Ruskin loved, she came out of the mist and hugged the water; her nose catching the watery sunlight, a while fan of foam spreading out behind.

She went by in a moment, roared past the buoy that marked the end of the mile, circled, and started homeward. Again she sliced past, Campbell's arms sawing the wheel as her hull took the slap of her own weight.

His Son Cries the News.

Five minutes later Sir Malcolm's son, Donald, came down the course in a motor boat to yell to newspapermen, "Dad's done it. He's broken the record."

Campbell, very tired, came aboard later. He had, he thought, proven the adaptability of the three sled hull design to high speed boats.

"I could have had a lot more speed out of her, I'm sure," said Sir Malcolm, "But the engine was heating rapidly and I didn't like the idea of an explosion. Messy, you know."

Enthusiastic Over Design.

Capt. Peter du Cane, the British admiralty designer, added that he thought the hull design applicable to flying boats and seaplanes and said the test had proven without a doubt the greater safety of the design.

Bluebird II. will be taken to Dagenham Monday and Turnbull and Du Cane will record the results of their trial.

"Next year we may try her again with the other motor which is capable of 200 horse power more," said Sir Malcolm. "For the time we have enough to assimilate what we've learned this week."

PLAY CONSOLATIONS.

The Happy Jacks, Bill Rands, and Doc Gosickis will fight it out today and tomorrow for the consolation championship of the Windy City softball league in St. Philip's stadium, Kedzie avenue and Van Buren streets.

Canadians Win Yacht Race by Close Margin

Canadian yachtsmen defeated Chicago's three crews in yesterday's final races of the first international Tumlaren team championship series and won the title, 66 to 61½ points.

All three Canadian crews finished ahead of the American yachtsmen in the fifth race, sailed over a triangular course yesterday morning. J. W. Braidwood, skipper of the Royal Canadian Yacht club's team; J. A. Robertson, and W. B. Rennie sailed the winning Tumlaren class sloop. Skipper W. L. Ballentine and his crew, J. Murray McLeod and Edward Mundy, representing the National Yacht club, manned the second Tumlaren to finish. L. H. Muir, skipper; A. J. Rae, and L. R. Muir, crew, of the Queen City Yacht club, finished third. The seven and one-half mile course was sailed in rough water under a 10-15 mile north northeast wind.

The final race, which the American crews won on points, but lost to a Canadian crew which finished first, was sailed in a 20 mile north northeast wind. Skipper Braidwood's winning time was the best of the six race series, 59 minutes and 31 seconds for the seven mile windward-leeward course. Skipper Richard T. Whitney's American crew was second in 1:02:34.

The Tumlaren team championship trophy was awarded by Henry B. Babson of the Chicago Yacht club, who introduced the Tumlarens to Chicago yachtsmen in 1935. The series is expected to become an annual event. Robert A. Haynie, race committee chairman, said last night that if the series is continued three Chicago crews will be sent to Lake Ontario to race the Toronto yachtsmen next year. Summaries:

FIFTH RACE—Won by Canadian crew No. 2, J. W. Braidwood, skipper; Canadian crew No. 3, W. L. Ballentine, skipper, second; Canadian crew No. 1, L. H. Muir, skipper, third; American crew No. 3, Richard T. Whitney, skipper, fourth; American crew No. 2, Gordon T. Brummel, skipper, fifth; American crew No. 1, George Dalseg, skipper, sixth. Time, 1:04:31.

SIXTH RACE—Won by Canadian crew No. 2; American crew No. 3, second; American crew No. 1, third; Canadian crew No. 3, fourth; American crew No. 2, fifth; Canadian crew No. 1, sixth. Time, 59:31.

Tomorrow afternoon Quist and Bromwich will go on the court in the final against the No. 2 Australian team, Capt. Harry Hopman and Jack Crawford, who eliminated Parker and McNeill on Friday. The title thus will go to Australia for the first time since Norman Brookes and Gerald Patterson won in 1919.

Wightman Teams Meet.

In the women's final, the No. 1 Wightman cup teams of England and the United States will be oponents. Miss Kay Stammers and Mrs. Freda James Hammersley advanced today with an easy victory over Miss Helen Jacobs and Miss Dorothy Workman of California. Playing almost errorless tennis, outhitting their opponents both off the ground and at the net and using the lob extremely well, the British girls won at 6-1, 6-2. Alice Marble and Mrs. Sarah Fayban, Wimbledon and American champions, advanced to the final yesterday.

Two finals were played today. R. B. and Gardnar Mulloy of Coral Gables, Fla., defeated A. C. Nielsen Sr. and Jr. of Winnetka, Ill., in the father-and-son championship, 6-4, 6-1, and in the women's veteran's final Miss Eleanora Sears of Boston and Mme. Sylvia Henrotin of France came back after losing a love set to vanquist the defending champions, Mrs. Betty Corbiere and Mrs. Henry R. Guild of Boston, 0-6, 6-4, 6-2.

Mixed Double Finals.

The mixed doubles reached the finals when Mrs. Fabyan and Cooke defeated Valerie Scott of England and Gardnar Mulloy, 6-1, 9-7, and Miss Marble and Hopman overcame Miss Stammers and Riggs, 6-0, 6-4.

RUBAIYAT AND ARDELLE WIN IN WAUKEGAN RACE

Rubaiyat, Commodore Nathaniel Rubinkam's 43 foot cutter, and Ardelle, C. E. Waltman and Clare Udell's R class sloop, were the major winners in the Columbia Yacht club's annual race to Waukegan, sailed yesterday in a strong north wind and rough sea. It was the stormiest long distance race of the yachting season to date, several of the forty-four starting craft being disabled.

Henry Rubinkam sailed Rubaiyat in his brother's absence. The crew consisted of William Uhle, Ed Decker, Louis Stirling, Carleton Morehouse, and Don Sherwood. The yacht was fitted with a new main boom the day before the race as an experiment in curving the mainsail.

Betty Bro Wins.

Rubaiyat won in B class of the cruising division with a corrected time of 6:54:31. This was the best time of any yacht in the division and won the cruising time prize.

Betty Bro, Commodore Milton Friend's Columbia Yacht club flagship, won in C class in 8:06:29. The yacht was sailed by Robert Gregg, Glenn Rughe, Bernie Joseph, and a crew of club members. Robert P. Benedict sailed his 55 foot yawl Southern Cross to victory in A class with his daughter, Faraday, working as one of the yacht's crew. The time was 7:49:39.

The Waltman-Udell syndicate R class yacht Ardelle of the Chicago Yacht club won in its class and also took the Universal [racing] division time prize. Ardelle's elapsed time, 7:15:42, and corrected time, 6:15:15, were the shortest of any yacht in the fleet.

Rubaiyat's Mast Split.

Rubaiyat's mast was split during the race, but the yacht finished despite the hazard. Warrior, sailed by Vice Commodore Victor Milliken of the Chicago Yacht club, was dismasted off Evanston, and was towed back to Belmont harbor by the Wilmette coast guard. Invader, R. O. Klenze's Seawanhaka class sloop, was towed back to Burnham Park harbor by a motor lifeboat.

The schooners Red Arrow and Aloha, the cutters Belle Aurore and Aloha, the ketch Breeze, the yawl Comet, and the sloop Ariel returned to Grant Park harbor. The north wind caused the other yachts to tack as much as fifty miles in order to reach the finish line. Summaries of first fourteen boats finishing:

Friends of Hagen
Guldahl is golf's star comeback man

[This is the thirteenth of a series of sketches on the fifteen golf professionals who will join with Walter Hagen in the veteran's twenty-fifth anniversary tournament, opening Thursday noon at the Midlothian Country club.]

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The galleries in the Hagen tournament will see in Ralph Guldahl the original man-who-came-back of golf, for few in the history of the game ever have touched the big Texan's battle against odds. Although he won't be 28 years old until Nov. 22, Guldahl has undergone a series of ups and downs such as most golfers don't experience until they are past 40.

Chicagoans first heard of Ralph in June, 1933, when he stepped out of a bunker off the seventy-second green of the National Open tournament at North Shore. His shot from the sand had left the ball only four feet away from the cup. If he sank it, he earned a tie with Johnny Goodman and a playoff chance to win the championship. But he didn't sink the putt and older heads who watched that failure said the kid was through.

By the summer of 1936 it appeared that they were right. Ralph was about to leave the game completely for a job as an automobile salesman, but friends induced him to play in one more tournament—the Western Open at Davenport. The story of his finishing round of 64 in winning that title is the opening chapter of an amazing comeback. Ralph played out the tournament circuit, winning the scoring title and finishing second among the year's money winners.

In 1937 he set a world's record in winning the National Open championship at Detroit and retained his Western Open crown after a playoff with Horton Smith. Last year he repeated in both the National and Western Opens and played great golf in this year's National, only failure of putts to drop preventing him from being up there again at the finish.

Guldahl, who now registers from Madison, N. J., will play with Harold McSpaden in the Hagen tournament. Ralph is in another one of the playing streaks which have distinguished his career. Recently he won the first prize of $2,500 in the Dapper Dan Open after a playoff with Gene Sarazen and Denny Shute.

"AUSTRALIA WILL WIN CUP," SAYS NORMAN BROOKES

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—Sir Norman Brookes, former Australian tennis champion and president of the Australian Lawn Tennis association, arrived last night on the liner Mauretania.

Brookes, a former Davis cup player, confident of the ability of the Australian team to beat Jugo-Slavia next Thursday, Friday and Saturday and gain the right to challenge the United States for the cup.

"On paper, the odds should be 2 or 3 to 1 in favor of Australia, after they beat Jugo-Slavia, to win from America." Sir Norman said. "We almost beat you last year, when you had Donald Budge, and I do not see how you can win this year without him."

Foreign Stars Are Feared in Women's Golf

Noroton, Conn., Aug. 19 [Special].—The finest women golfers in America, with two notable exceptions, are gathered at the Wee Burn club here in preparation for the national tournament that starts Monday. But the international angle is the major topic of conversation and speculation. The exceptions are the appendectomy convalescents—Patty Berg, last year's champion, and Marion McNaughton, New York title holder.

Burn Up Course in Practice.

Chief attention is directed at Miss Barton and Miss Crocker, who have been burning up the Wee Burn course in practice. Miss Barton's score of 70, which set the women's course record and lowered the prior mark of 72 set two days previously by Miss Crocker, demonstrated to the home crowd that it is going to take supergolf to thwart these invaders. Miss Marvin, conqueror of several star performers in spring tournaments, including Dorothy Traung at White Sulphur, is known to be a match play tartar.

Miss Crocker is much the opposite type of player from Miss Barton. The Paraguayan champion is one of the hardest hitters of a golf ball ever seen among women.

Foremost in regard among the homebred starters, naturally, is Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare Jr., the Philadelphia matron who has won the title six times and still gets around a golf course with efficiency.

Chunky Miss Berg probably would enjoy the favorite's spot but for her emergency operation a month ago. But even with Patty out, there is plenty of talent available. Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., star is regarded a strong contender, especially after the way she spread-eagled the field which played at Green Meadow last Wednesday, scoring a 74—five strokes ahead of her nearest rival.

GAR WOOD WINS OUTBOARD RACE IN NATIONAL MEET

Red Bank, N. J., Aug. 19 (AP).—Gar Wood Jr. of Algonac, Mich., and his mechanic, Frank Vincent of Tulsa, Okla., today won the amateur and professional class A events of the national sweepstakes regatta. All events today were in outboard competition.

Over the rainswept one and two-thirds mile course on the north branch of the Shrewsbury river, Wood won the first five mile heat in 7:02 and the second in 8:41.

Vincent turned in a best speed of 41.077 miles an hour to win the second heat after taking the first. The eastern title went to Fred Jacoby of North Bergen, N. J.

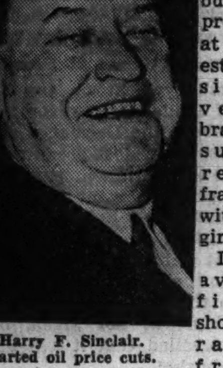
STEEL INDUSTRY BRACES WABBLY BUSINESS WEEK

Main Indices Divide on Gains, Losses.

BY LELAND FORRESTER.

Advances and declines were mingled in last week's movements of mingled in the leading industrial indices, but steel production, at the fastest pace since November, braced the summer's recovery framework with strong girders.



Harry F. Sinclair.
Started oil price cuts.

Latest available figures showed the railroad freight movement, electric power production, cotton textile manufacturing, and retail trade joined the steel industry in the march to higher ground.

The automobile industry, nearing the end of the 1939 model production year and preparing to get under way on the 1940 models this week, reduced output last week. Residential building, engineering construction awards, and new financing declined in volume.

Wholesale Trade Less Brisk.

Wholesale trade was reported to have lacked some of the briskness of other recent weeks. Loans by banks to business decreased in Chicago but increased in New York City.

Mills produced steel at the rate of 62.1 per cent of capacity, the highest mark since last Nov. 14. In the preceding week the schedule was 60.1 per cent, and in the corresponding 1938 week it was 40.4 per cent. Iron Age said steel prices were on the firmest basis since 1937.

Freight loadings in the week ended Aug. 12, the latest reported upon, were 665,197 cars, or 0.6 per cent more than in the preceding week and 12.8 per cent more than in the 1938 week. Electricity production in the Aug. 12 week was 2,333,403,000 kilowatt hours, against 2,325,085,000 in the preceding week and 2,133,641,000 in the 1938 week.

Automobile Production Shrinks.

Automobile production last week was 12,955 units, against 24,875 in the preceding week and 23,940 a year earlier. The Buick division of General Motors corporation will begin production of its 1940 models tomorrow, with 300 units scheduled to leave the assembly lines. Later the rate of output will be quickened.

Buick is calling 5,000 persons to work, and will use 11,000 when the plants go on a full time basis. Hudson Motor Car company announced reductions in prices varying from $25 to $43 on its new models.

Automobile companies and headlight and bulb manufacturers, after three years of coöperative effort, announced the development of a new type of automobile lamp which, they said, will be as important in accident prevention as safety glass and four wheel brakes. Details will be made public Aug. 24.

Oil Situation Chaotic.

One of last week's developments in industry was the wrangle over crude oil prices. The price controversy reached such an actue stage that six states ordered wells closed in an effort to forestall cuts in crude quotations.

The issue was brought to a head by the companies dominated by Harry F. Sinclair, who in recent months had tried to initiate a movement among oil refiners to increase prices of their products to avoid cutting crude oil prices.

After his price raising efforts failed, Sinclair, through the Sinclair-Prairie Oil Marketing company, ordered a cut of 20 cents a barrel in crude prices. Some other big buyers followed the action. Then six of the big oil producing states ordered their wells shut down, acting under control powers vested in state agencies.

Illinois Boosts Oil Output.

Meantime, production in Illinois, which only within the last year has attained the rank of a major oil state, continued to set new weekly records. The states which shut their wells blamed Illinois in part for their troubles and urged a special session of the legislature to enact oil control laws. Gov. Horner, in seclusion at Highland Park, has not announced any stand on the issue.

Statistics released during the week included a report by the federal reserve board showing that its index of industrial production rose to 102 per cent of the 1923-'25 average, from 98 in May. This indicated factory activity had climbed nearly to the level of last December.

Industrial Index Advances.

The Associated Press composite index of industrial activity advanced to 94 per cent of the 1929-'30 average. It stood at 93.2 per cent a week earlier and at 76.3 per cent in the corresponding 1938 week. The index, with its seasonally adjusted components, compared as follows:

	Latest week.	Previous week.	Year ago.
Automobile prod.	75.0	80.0	32.0
Steel mill act.	*88.4	80.8	54.2

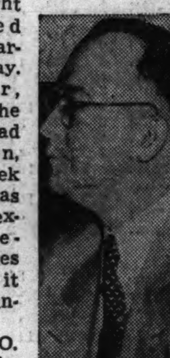
Oil Men Flail Ickes' Threat to Intervene

Secretary of the Interior Ickes' threat to take a hand in the crude oil price fight was attacked from two quarters yesterday. Jerry Sadler, member of the Texas railroad commission, which last week ordered Texas wells closed, expressed amazement at Ickes stand and said it was "entirely uncalled for."



Ernest O. Thompson.

Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the interstate oil compact commission, at Austin, Tex., said of Ickes' threatened suspension of the Connally "hot oil" act: "It would not mean a thing on earth. It is not operating now."

Six states last week ordered oil wells closed in an effort to bolster the crude oil market after some leading buyers had cut the price 20 cents a barrel.

Ickes Threatens to Act.

Ickes said on Friday that if the tieup causes a gasoline shortage or price boost he might suspend the Connally act, which forbids interstate shipment of oil produced in violation of state regulations. Yesterday Ickes said he had received no reports of Connally act violations.

Sadler, commenting on Ickes' attitude in a telegram to the secretary, said:

"I have read with a great deal of amazement your statement that you stand ready to suspend the Connally act in event of an emergency. In view of the fact that the regulatory bodies of five states have successfully met the attack of the Standard Oil company and its affiliates in their vicious attempt to rule or ruin the industry, it strikes me that your statement is poorly timed and uncalled for."

Thompson, who in addition to being head of the eight state compact commission is a member of the Texas commission, said the states which closed wells are trying to solve the oil problems without "running to Washington."

Lion Closes Awaiting Ruling.

The Lion Oil Refining company of El Dorado last night agreed to close its fifty-two wells in the Shuler field of Arkansas until 6 p. m. Monday. By that time, Company Attorney Jeff Davis said, Chancellor W. A. Speer of Union Chancery court would have rendered a decision in the suit filed by Lion for a permanent injunction to restrain state authorities from enforcing a shutdown order. The hearing is set for 1 p. m. Monday.

At the same time the chancellor will act on a cross-complaint filed by attorneys of the Arkansas gas and oil commission to keep the Lion company from re-opening.

The oil company refused to close its wells when the state gas and oil commission issued a shutdown order effective last Thursday at 7 a. m. State troopers padlocked the wells. Yesterday Chancellor Speer issued a restraining order forcing them to evacuate the field. The Lion Oil Refining company was the only company to defy the shutdown orders.

Report Drop in Oil Stocks.

The federal bureau of mines reported yesterday that stocks of domestic and foreign crude petroleum at the close of the week ended Aug. 12 totaled 267,536,000 barrels, a net decrease of 1,446,000 barrels, compared with the preceding week. Stocks of domestic oil decreased 1,544,000 barrels for the week and foreign crude increased 98,000 barrels.

[The shutdown orders were effective Aug. 15 and 16.]

Charles F. Roeser, president of Independent Petroleum Association of America, yesterday resigned as a member of the executive committee of the American Petroleum institute.

In a letter to Axtel J. Byles, president, Roeser said he had accepted membership on the executive board in hope that presentation of the viewpoint of the independents in the group would be beneficial. He said recent events had convinced him the effort through the institute was futile. His resignation is effective immediately.

TREASURY'S BIGGEST TAX SETTLEMENT MADE WITH ASSOCIATED GAS

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP).—In the largest tax settlement of its kind on record, the internal revenue bureau today formally relinquished claim to $53,682,000 in taxes levied against the Associated Gas and Electric system.

A treasury official said the tax abatements represent the formalizing of agreements reached several weeks ago. The system agreed to pay the government $8,700,000, and has already paid $3,000,000, borrowing the money with the approval of the Securities and Exchange commission. The balance will be paid over a period of five years.

The taxes abated applied to various years from 1929 through 1935. They included: Associated Gas and Electric company of Ithaca, N. Y., $42,928,552; Eastern Utilities corporation of Wilmington, Del., $3,743,655; Associated Gas and Electric Properties, Boston, Mass., $3,689,009; Associated Securities corporation of New York, $2,497,927, and Florida Public Service company, Orlando, Fla., $823,822.

MENDELSSOHN WRIT ISSUED TO BANK CREDITOR

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—The Manufacturers' Trust company today obtained a $750,000 writ of attachment against Mendelssohn & Co., Amsterdam, Holland, banking firm, and five of its partners. The bank suspended payments Aug. 11.

Supreme Court Justice J. Sidney Bernstein granted the writ after the trust company told of five unpaid loans totaling more than $700,000. The company said the dutch bank had $2,600,000 worth of collateral in the Chemical Bank and Trust company here.

The New York Trust company previously had obtained a writ of attachment to protect a $2,650,000 loan to the Mendelssohn company, which got into difficulties shortly after the death of its chief, Fritz Mannheimer, famed for his activity in French government finance.

July Rural Store Sales Top 1938 by 7½ Per Cent

An increase of 7½ per cent was recorded in daily average sales of general merchandise in small towns and rural areas in July by comparison with last year, the department of commerce estimated yesterday. A more than seasonal decline from June was shown, however. June sales were the largest for any month since June, 1929, which they equaled. The department's seasonally adjusted index, based on 1929-'31 as 100, dropped from 131.7 for June to 124.8 in July.

Illinois Wells Producing Oil at Top Speed

Centralia, Ill., Aug. 19 (AP).—With 70 per cent of the nation's crude oil supply cut off in an effort to strengthen a faltering market, Illinois daily production, unbridled by regulations, hovered at the 300,000 barrel mark today.

Although production figures for the week had not been completed, representatives of major companies estimated the Lake Centralia-Salem field was producing 180,000 barels of the state's total daily output.

New Field Is Developed.

A new field, at Keensburg in Wabash county, drew operators' interest. More than 20 tests were being drilled or located in the village as the result of one successful completion, the Harry Fotiades No. 1 well, which flowed eighty barrels in 54 minutes.

While another operator drilled on the Methodist church lot, a derrick towered above the tombstones of a nearby cemetery. A 125 barrel well was completed in the southern tip of the area.

Complete 33 Wells in Area.

The Lake Centralia-Salem district of Marion county had 33 successful wells completed during the week, the largest of which was Shell's No. 8A Farthing, estimated as a 5,136 barrel well.

Nine new wells in Richland, Wayne, and Clay counties had a total initial production of 7,240 barrels. The biggest well of the weke in Clay county was Wiser No. 5 Daly, which produced 1,200 barrels in 24 hours.

CHICAGO AREA'S STEEL MILLS CUT OUTPUT SLIGHTLY

Steel operations in the Chicago district are scheduled to begin tomorrow at 55.3 per cent of capacity, a decline of 0.4 point from the last week. In the week beginning July 24 the rate was 54.1 per cent, and a year ago it was 38.2 per cent.

Pittsburgh operations will start at 55.2 per cent of capacity, unchanged from a week ago. A month ago the rate was 50 per cent, and a year ago it was 32 per cent. One company reported its new business this month is running ahead of July orders without the aid of buying by automobile manufacturers.

Buffalo area operations have reestablished the year's high mark of 60.5 per cent of capacity.

Youngstown plants will operate at about 55 per cent of capacity, a level which has been maintained during most of the summer.

8 MONTH PEAK IN USE OF IRON ORE ESTABLISHED

Cleveland, O., Aug. 19 (AP).—With an increase of twelve furnaces in blast, consumption of Lake Superior iron ore during July totaled 3,143,337 gross tons, the Lake Superior Iron Ore association reported today.

This was the highest ore melt since the 3,150,073 tons of November, 1938, and compared with 2,829,667 tons during June and with 1,674,721 tons during July last year. Consumption for the first seven months of 1939 was 20,114,223 tons, compared with 12,341,008 last year.

The 102 active furnaces at the end of July represented a new high since the 120 as of October, 1937.

National Banks Establish Peak in Assets, Deposits

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP).—Preston Delano, comptroler of the currency, announced today total assets and deposits of national banks on June 30 were higher than on any previous call date in the history of the national banking system. Assets of the 5,209 active banks were $33,180,578,000, an increase of $2,803,018,000 over the total reported by 5,248 banks on June 30, 1938. Deposits totaled $29,469,469,000, exceeding by $2,653,575,000 the amount reported June 30, 1938.

Credits Tax Revision Plans for Rise.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19.—The improvement in business, which has continued since June, is scheduled for expansion in the fall months, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States said today.

The steady improvement set in, the chamber said, after it became apparent that congress was determined to do something about taxes. Important revisions aimed at stimulating business, were made in the corporate tax laws during the last session.

"An early and substantial start has thus been made for a rise in activity in the fall months," the chamber found. "With reasonable freedom from adverse influences from outside, the indices this fall should overcome much of the margin still remaining under the indices for 1936-'37."

Acceleration More Rapid.

The analysis recalled that a year ago there was improvement under way from the June low point of the 1937-'38 depression.

"The acceleration this year is at a much more rapid rate, and it extends more generally to all parts of the country," it continued. "In five of the federal reserve districts the volume of business now is farther ahead of the corresponding period of last year than was the case in any preceding month this year. The volume has recently ranged up to 13 per cent over the level of last year. The smallest percentages of increase are in the west."

The automobile industry is about ready to enter upon its new manufacturing schedules.

Steel Near 1937 Level.

The steel industry seems about to reach a figure in production not equaled since 1937.

Machine tool builders, with a large volume of orders, significantly record an increase in the proportion of domestic orders, although business for export is still large.

Cotton textiles still have their problems but progress is being made toward meeting them.

The largest factor in the manufacture of woolen textiles has shown a profit this year against a net loss of almost 5 million dollars in the corresponding period of last year.

Nonferrous metals are strengthening their position.

Chemical industries generally have been making progress, with improving sentiment in most divisions.

Lumber Exports Advance.

The lumber industry recorded an increase of 19 per cent over the first half of last year, and recently exports have been at a higher rate than at any time in two years. These figures are being attained in the face of an increase of 100 per cent in imports of lumber.

The petroleum industry is an exception to the general trend toward improvement. Its current troubles are largely the result of over production.

The chamber pointed to new peak production of electric power, coal shipments matching those of the good period in 1936-'37, and a rising demand for raw materials, as other indications of sustained recovery.

"Perhaps the best indicator for the coming months," the chamber concluded, "is to be found in the evidences now beginning to appear of plans for raising new capital. August has seen the first upturn in many months in the aggregate amount of business loans made by banks."

LATIN AMERICA SHIPS US MORE CANNED BEEF

Washington, Aug. 19 (AP).—South American canned beef, which president Roosevelt described as superior to the domestic product, entered the United States in increasing quantities during the first half of 1939. The department of agriculture reported today that imports totaled 41,000,000 pounds, compared with 39,000,000 in the first six months of 1938.

In his comment last spring which aroused the anger of senators from cattle states, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned only Argentine beef, but the department report showed the imports came from Uruguay, Brazil and Chile as well.

[Copyright: 1939: By the New York News.]

RIO DE JANEIRO, Aug. 19.—Conversations for resumption of payments on Brazil's foreign debt have begun. Payments were suspended in November, 1937, when President Getulio Vargas said adverse economic circumstances demanded the step, although it did not mean flat repudiation. John C. Phillimore, representing British bondholders; Dana G. Munro, representing United States security holders, and Rene Berger, French representative, are meeting here with Minister of Finance Arthur Souza Costa in opening the parleys.

July Building in State 34% Over Year Ago

Building of all types in Illinois last month exceeded the level of July, 1938, in value by about $1,120,000, the Illinois department of labor revealed yesterday in its monthly review of construction. The cost of all building last month totaled $8,273,252. This represented a gain of 34.4 per cent over the cost of $6,153,527 in the corresponding month last year. Permits issued throughout the state rose to 2,859, an increase of 20.4 per cent over the 2,374 issued in July, 1938.

For the seventh consecutive month residential building was larger than in the corresponding month of the preceding year. Home building last month amounted to $4,250,129, an increase of 47.3 per cent over the $2,884,753 reported for July, last year. The number of residential buildings climbed to 760, an advance of 51.4 per cent over the 502 for July, 1938.

Home Building Predominates.

Home building permits issued in July accounted for 51.3 per cent of the total cost for all construction throughout the state. New nonresidential building represented 29.9 per cent of the month's total. The remaining 18.8 per cent of the total was for additions, alterations, repairs, and installations.

The dollar value of permits issued in July was 6.9 per cent less than in the preceding month. Total permits issued last month declined 8.9 per cent from the total taken out in June.

In the Chicago metropolitan area the number of permits issued last month totaled 1,509 and dollar value was $6,076,495. This compared with 1,668 permits and cost of $6,412,697 in the preceding month and 1,124 permits and $3,949,397 cost in July, last year.

Comparisons for Chicago.

The Chicago area proper reported 734 permits issued in July with total dollar value of $3,654,386. In the preceding month 915 permits with value of $4,147,847 were issued. The number of permits issued in July, 1938, totaled 503, with value of $2,234,026.

The metropolitan area excluding Chicago had 775 permits with value of $2,422,109 issued in July. This compared with 753 permits and value of $2,264,850 in June and 621 permits and $1,715,371 value in July, 1938.

Of sixty-seven Chicago suburbs, thirty-five reported larger expenditures for building construction in July than in June. Fifty cities had larger expenditures last month than in July, 1938. Fifty-one cities reported larger expenditures for the first seven months in 1939 than in the corresponding period a year ago.

NEW ROOM-CAR TRAIN TO START COAST SERVICE

A Diesel electric powered streamliner made up of room-car equipment with the exception of one coach will replace the City of San Francisco out of Chicago next Wednesday, according to an announcement yesterday.

The announcement was made jointly by the Chicago and North Western Union Pacific, and Southern Pacific railroads. Part of the equipment will be supplied by the Pennsylvania and New York Central roads.

The train will carry seven sleeping cars of streamlined design. These will have a total of eighty-seven rooms, of which thirty-six will be roomettes, five drawing rooms, nine compartments, and thirty-seven double bedrooms.

The train will leave at 7:15 p. m. Chicago time on the schedule of thirty-nine and three quarter hours maintained by the streamliner which was wrecked by vandals. It will make the trip five times each month. The first eastbound run will be made from San Francisco on Aug. 26.

Postal Revenues in July Show Gain Over Year Ago

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 [Special].—Postal revenues during July were $54,545,287.72, representing a 3 per cent gain over July last year, First Assistant Postmaster General William W. Howes announced today. He said the large increases noted during the last six months of the fiscal year ended June 30 had continued and that reports of August revenues indicated even larger gains.

PACKARD TELLS DETAILS OF ITS NEW 1940 CARS

Models to Be Offered in Four Lines.

Details of its 1940 lines of automobiles were announced yesterday by the Packard Motor Car company. The new models will be offered in four lines—two in the moderate priced class and two in the higher priced.

The lower priced cars are the One-Ten and the One-Twenty. The former has a six cylinder engine of 100 horse power and the latter has an eight-cylinder 120 horse power engine.

Engine Newly Designed.

The higher priced cars are the One-Sixty and the One-Eighty, both powered by a newly designed eight cylinder engine of 160 horse power. The 160 horse power engine takes the place of the old Super Eight and the Twelve.

The principal change in appearance of the 1940 Packards is the streamlining of the front end. The hood has been narrowed. Vertical grilles are located between the hood and the fenders, giving "cat-walk" engine ventilation. The "cat-walk" extends along the front of the car parallel with the front bumper.

Parking Lights on Fenders.

Parking lights are placed on the tops of the fenders. Despite the changes the 1940 cars are recognized instantly as Packards.

Mechanically, improvements consist largely of refinements brought about by development work and testing. The spring suspension has been improved, as have the econo-drive, which reduces engine revolutions per mile, and the shock absorbers, which check side as well as up and down movements. The car is equipped with the sealed beam light, which provides greater safety for night driving.

ILLINOIS-IOWA UTILITY PLANS BIG REFUNDING

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—Refunding of $100,000,000 of outstanding mortgage bonds and debentures of the Illinois-Iowa Power company is under consideration in the next few months. The plan is subject to disposition of a pending preferred stockholders' suit due for trial in the autumn, and providing money market conditions are favorable, it was learned today.

Illinois-Iowa Power company is successor out of the reorganization of Illinois Power & Light corporation. It belongs to the North American Light & Power company of the North American system. It serves electricity and gas in Illinois and Iowa.

In 1937 a recapitalization was effected which reduced the capital from $74,600,000 to $43,700,000. The surplus thus created was used toward eliminating a deficit and providing funds for certain reserves to better enable issuance of refunding bonds. There was likewise a reclassification of preferred stocks and the common stock was halved, among other things.

SURPLUS CROPS MOUNT DESPITE FEDERAL PLANS

Corn, Cotton Stocks Highest in History.

The United States is entering the 1939-'40 marketing season with the largest supplies of corn and cotton on record. The government has attempted to regulate prices and production of these major crops.

The corn surplus on Oct. 1, when the new crop year will begin, is expected to total 550 million bushels, by far the largest supply ever carried over into a new season. Of that amount, the government owns directly or holds as collateral on loans to producers 257 million bushels. The amount held by the government alone is only about 40 million bushels short of a full year's normal commercial requirements, because only about 300 million bushels of an average two and one-half billion bushel crop ever enter trade channels. The remainder is used on the farm.

Storage Facilities Taxed.

The record corn supplies threaten to overflow existing storage facilities to such an extent that the government has been forced to order 30,000 steel cribs to store the corn it expects to take over on defaulted loans in the next six weeks. Grain men believe that the actual defaults will be three times as large as the government estimates.

The cotton surplus on Aug. 1, beginning of the 1939-'40 season, amounted to 13,032,611 bales. This record surplus is more than twice as large as the average annual carry-over in the ten year period, 1928-'37, and is only a few thousand bales less than the average total consumption of American cotton, including exports, in the same ten years. Average consumption in that period was 13,037,000 bales annually.

There were 11,412,000 bales under government loan Aug. 1. The Commodity Credit corporation already owns 1,670,000 bales of the 1934 crop and will take title to about 5,270,000 bales of the 1937 crop on Sept. 1—making a total of 6,940,000 bales.

Holds Six Months' Supply.

Thus on Sept. 1 the government will own more cotton than the average supply on hand at the beginning of the marketing season during 1928-'37, an amount sufficient to provide for the nation's entire domestic cotton requirements for about six months.

Cotton exports in the season just ended dropped to 3,327,000 bales, the smallest in sixty years. The loss of this major agricultural market has been laid to the government's program for boosting domestic prices above the world market level.

The department of agriculture is now seeking to relieve the glut by paying an export subsidy of about $7.50 a bale. By this means it is hoped to raise exports this year to six million bales. In addition, a barter deal has been arranged with Great Britain calling for half a million or more bales of cotton in exchange for British rubber.

STOCKS LOWEST IN SIX WEEKS ON WAR SCARE

List Declines in Spite of Belated Rally.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Aug. 19.—Stocks closed at their lowest levels since July 7 today despite a rally in the final hour that brought the list up from its early weakness. Losses ranged from fractions to a point.

European uncertainties continued to dominate the thoughts of traders. Germany's seizure of Slovakia was the latest development in the situation and many feared that the time was approaching for a showdown between Germany and Poland over Danzig.

Domestic news was considered generally favorable, but traders ignored these developments and focused their attention on Europe.

Some Issues at New Lows.

The opening was quiet with a number of issues setting new lows for the year in early trading. Later some stocks regained as much as a point on what was said to be the elimination of week-end selling orders.

Total transactions were the largest for a Saturday since July 12, although only 289,650 shares changed hands. Of the total of 536 stocks traded 114 advanced and 284 declined. The others closed unchanged.

United States Steel gave a good performance in its group. It opened on a block of 1,000 shares with no change in price, dipped slightly in later dealings and then came back to close with a gain of less than a point. Bethlehem gave up a fraction.

Oil Shares Are Firmer.

Shares of oil companies hardened fractionally. Chemicals were weak with the exception of Allied Chemical, which spurted 4 points. Du Pont finished off 2 points.

Chrysler pared an early loss of more than a point to a fraction. General Motors also finished slightly below yesterday's final level. Rails and utilities generally lost fractions.

Westinghouse Electric, off nearly 2 points at one time, came back to wind up with a loss of $1. American Telephone was 1¼ points lower. United States Rubber cut a large loss down to a fraction.

International Nickel touched a new low for the movement on a loss of 1¼ points. Eastman Kodak lost 3 points. Farm equipments were fractionally higher. Some support flowed into Douglas Aircraft on its earning report, but it closed fractionally lower.

WHEAT MOUNTS AS WAR TENSION GROWS ABROAD

Prices at Highest Level Since July 12.

Increased uneasiness over the European political situation advanced wheat prices in North American markets about 1 cent a bushel yesterday to the highest level since July 12. There was no material pressure to sell and closing trades on the Chicago Board of Trade were at gains of ¾ to ⅞ cent. Winnipeg prices were ⅝ to 1 cent higher at the close. Liverpool prices advanced ⅜ to ¾ cent.

Freezing temperatures in the western part of the province of Alberta which may result in damage to late maturing wheat also were a market factor yesterday. The upturn in the Liverpool market was checked by hedging sales of Argentine grain.

September Wheat at Premium.

September wheat on the Chicago Board of Trade closed yesterday ⅜ to ⅝ cent above the December and May deliveries, the widest premium so far.

The new government export wheat subsidy program went into effect at noon yesterday. Sales of 40,000 to 50,000 bushels of old crop hard winter wheat were reported to have been made for shipment from Atlantic ports to the continent. The amount of subsidy was not given, but the belief prevailed that it was about 35 cents a bushel.

Argentine wheat for August shipment was offered yesterday equal to 49 cents a bushel, delivered at Liverpool. This compared with 57 cents for American No. 1 dark hard and 46⅝ cents for No. 2 red winter wheat.

Argentina Subsidizes Wheat.

The Argentine government is paying 59½ cents for wheat delivered at Buenos Aires and is said to be reselling the grain to exporters equal to 38¼ cents, indicating that the government is taking a loss of about 21 cents a bushel on sales abroad.

Corn advanced in sympathy with wheat and closed ⅜ to ½ cent higher.

September oats closed ⅝ cent higher yesterday, gaining ¼ cent on the May delivery and going to a premium of 1 cent over the deferred future. This is the largest premium at which the September delivery has sold over the May contract during August in more than fifty-three years with the exception of 1907, when the difference was as much as 1⅝ cents at one time.

FOOD SHIPPERS ASK LOWER RATE ON NEW COOLER

Portable Refrigerators Carried in Box Cars.

Shippers of perishable foods have petitioned the western classification committee of the railroads to lower freight rates on less than car lot shipments in special refrigerated containers. The request has been taken under advisement by Robert C. Fyfe, chairman of the committee.

The classification committee held its quarterly meeting in the Union station in Chicago recently. At a public hearing the Jones dairy farm of Fort Atkinson, Wis., asked that the consolidated freight classification of the railroads be amended to permit shipments of its fresh sausage in portable containers without any charge for the weight of the containers.

Railways Revising Categories.

The railroads are now revising the 500 page book which contains rules and lists which determine into what classes various commodities are divided for rail shipment. There are now about 15,000 different classes of freight. The rules also state in what manner the merchandise is to be prepared for shipment.

Shippers of fresh foods and other perishables are now charged for the goods and also for the weight of the container at the same freight rates. The Wisconsin farm requested that the only expense in shipment be the freight costs of the gross weight of the commodity loaded in the portable icebox. The box itself should be carried free. On the return trip, the petition suggested, the charge on the empty box would be one-half of fourth class rates.

Use Portable Refrigerators.

Four leading railroads, the Rock Island, Monon, Chesapeake and Ohio, and the Erie, are now carrying perishables in portable refrigerators which can be placed in box cars with other types of merchandise. In most instances the roads own the containers.

They make it possible to send safely refrigerated goods in ordinary cars to places where the cost of sending a refrigerator car would be prohibitive. Being of manifold uses, they scurry about the land on this train and that like a waterbug on a pond.

Howard F. Zimmerman, manager of the perishable department of the Universal Car Loading and Distributing company, experimented with various shipping containers for fresh foods from 1932 to 1936. In May, 1936, he produced a lightweight refrigerator box which he used successfully to send 4,970 pounds of butter to New York. Two hundred pounds of dry ice were used.

Railways Use New Device.

H. A. Huber, superintendent of refrigerator service for the Rock Island Lines, tested the container and later ordered ten for regular service. That road now has thirty-five in operation. The Monon railroad has fifteen, the Erie ten, and the Chesapeake and Ohio six.

Huber reported that the Rock Island containers carried 1,709,164 pounds of fresh yeast for a large food company from Sept. 17, 1938, to last June 30. Other goods carried by the roads by this method include candy, frozen foods, fresh meats, vegetables, dairy products, mayonnaise, fresh fish, plants, flowers, dressed poultry, and bottled liquids.

The portable refrigerators are constructed in Chicago by a company headed by Mrs. Loretta M. Zimmerman, the inventor's wife. They are built with heavy gauge steel and contain compartments for dry ice.

Fitted with Stoves in Winter.

During the winter months, the containers may be used for shipment of fruits and vegetables, with a small charcoal burner providing warmth to prevent frost.

The heater is filled with "charkets," or nut sized balls of charcoal. Lighted, the heater will maintain a temperature of 65 degrees in zero weather throughout an ordinary shipment, according to Zimmerman.

The Monon railroad has used these tiny stoves to warm shipments of shoe polish, both in bottles and tins. Freezing destroys the composition of the polish or causes the liquid to break through the glass container.

Lipsticks and other cosmetics which disintegrate in near-zero temperatures have also been transported in the heated freight containers.

Although wine is often stored in cool cellars, it becomes cloudy if frozen. Thus when wines are shipped in winter months, the warm containers are sometimes used to insure preservation of the liquids' sparkle.

Hold $7.50 Worth of Dry Ice.

The containers are 6 feet high, 5 feet wide and 7 feet long and are equipped with wheels. Filled with 250 pounds of dry ice costing about 3 cents a pound, low temperatures can be maintained for perishable foods throughout a three-day shipment, according to Zimmerman.

There are only about 200 of these and similar containers in use in this country. Most of them are owned and operated by railroads. The Baltimore and Ohio and the Pennsylvania railroads are testing them.

Large distributors of frozen foods and dairy products have investigated the possibility of purchasing their own portable ice boxes. Ownership of the containers would permit these companies to load them at warehouses, transport them by truck to railroad box cars in a continuous operation. At present the perishables have to be loaded into the container at the railroad terminal.

Interests in the frozen food industry, which is confronted seriously with a distribution problem, have said that railroad freight charges have been too high to permit sales in small communities of the country. The portable refrigerator enables shipments daily to the small cities, eliminating the need of an entire refrigerator car for less-than-carlot freight.

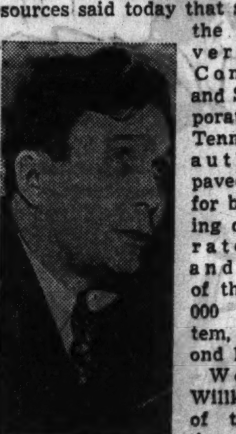
TVA AGREEMENT HASTENS UTILITY FINANCING PLANS

Integrated System Studied by Willkie.

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Utility sources said today that settlement of the long controversy between Commonwealth and Southern corporation and the Tennessee Valley authority had paved the way for broad reshaping of the corporate structure and refinancing of the $2,000,000,000 utility system, world's second largest.



Wendell L. Willkie.

Wendell L. Willkie, president of the corporation, announced it would spend $16,000,000 on new capital construction over and above its regular budget as a result of the TVA settlement, and a "generally more favorable attitude by congress and other legislative bodies toward business."

Experts Study Question.

Experts for the company are reported to have undertaken studies regarding integration under the "death sentence" clause of the holding company act, refinancing of more than $300,000,000 of bonds and preferred stocks of southern subsidiaries, and possible merger of all southern subsidiary companies into one or two.

Prime question in the integration study is whether the Securities and Exchange commission will permit C. & S. to continue to own two geographically separated distribution systems — one centering about Consumers Power company in Michigan, the other based on Alabama Power company.

If C. & S. is permitted to continue to own only one geographically integrated system, it is generally assumed that Willkie will elect to retain the northern system, adding to it, if possible, Midland United, an Insull relic now in reorganization.

Report Midland Conferences.

Interested bankers are reported conferring with Willker regarding Midland United.

It is known, however, that Willkie would be extremely reluctant to yield up the southern system, which has witnssed striking growth in recent years.

The SEC has scheduled public hearings for late September in what utility experts assume to be the test case on whether a top holding company can own more than one geographically integrated distribution system. This is the integration plan of American Gas and Electric company, filed last Nov. 30.

Willkie has indicated that settlement of the TVA controversy would make possible refinancing and replanning of the remaining southern properties.

BUSINESS BITS

Earle N. Lashmet, resident vice president of the Liberty Mutual Insurance company at Philadelphia, has been named resident vice president for the company in Chicago. He will be in charge of operations in the middle west. He has been with the firm for fifteen years, having started as a safety engineer.

The Walgreen company store at 31 East Adams street won first prize in a window display contest as part of a dairy month competition conducted by the National Association of Chain Drug Stores. A Walgreen store in Memphis, Tenn., won first prize for soda fountain backbars, and a Walgreen store in Little Rock, Ark., took third place in the latter contest.

R. B. Brown has been named vice president and director of the National Macaroni company, Libertyville, Ill., a subsidiary of the Grocery Store Products company. Brown has been in the firm's sales division for the last four years.

W. A. Rooksberry of Little Rock, Ark., yesterday was appointed regional director at Chicago for the railroad retirement board. He was described as 50 years old, "a labor man who has come up through the ranks." He has had twenty years experience as a railroad man, as boilermaker, shop foreman and inspector, the announcement said.

RAILROADS PUT MORE FREIGHT CARS IN SERVICE

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 [Special].—During the first seven months this year class one railroads put 10,302 new freight cars in service compared with 6,927 put in service in the corresponding period last year, the Association of American Railroads announced today.

New steam locomotives put in service in the period totaled twenty, compared with 136 in the 1938 period. However, 119 new electric and diesel locomotives entered service compared with eighty-two in the 1938 period.

Class one railroads on Aug. 1 had 8,473 new freight cars on order, compared with 10,234 on the same day last year, and 10,062 on July 1, 1939.

New steam locomotives on order on Aug. 1, 1939, totaled 72, compared with 26 on Aug. 1, last year, and 60 on July 1, 1939. New electric and diesel locomotives on order on Aug. 1, this year, numbered 46, compared with 23 one year ago and 48 on July 1, 1939.

BONDS STEADY AFTER RECEDING FOR THREE DAYS

New York, Aug. 19 (AP).—Bond prices held about steady today following three days of declines. Total dealings mounted to $1,759,000, the largest for a Saturday since July 29.

Closing a bit lower were New York Central 5s, Delaware and Hudson refunding 4s, American and Foreign Power 5s, International Hydro Electric 6s, and Anaconda Copper 4½s.

Up a shade were Pennsylvania railroad general 4½s, Missouri-Kansas-Texas 5s, Pacific Telephone and Telegraph 3¼s, United States Steel 3¼s, and Remington Rand 4¼s.

United States governments tended lower. Treasury 3¾s of '56-'46 showed the widest loss with a drop of 17-32d of a point.

Investment Return in Steel Industry Registers Decline

The return on the investment in the steel industry during the first half of 1939 was less than half of the preceding ten year average, and only one-fifth as large as in the 1919-1928 decade, the American Iron and Steel Institute reported yesterday. Dividends of $519,000 paid to stockholders were equal to 8 cents for each dollar paid to wage earners of the steel industry.

Erie's Operating Income Increases Over Year Ago

Net operating income of the Erie railroad increased last month to $568,700, compared with $209,245 in July, 1938. Gross revenues totaled $6,278,700, against $5,685,065 in the similar month last year. During the seven months ended July 31 net operating income amounted to $4,768,392, compared with net operating loss of $69,961 in the seven months ended July 31, 1938.

GAS APPLIANCE SALES INCREASE IN CHICAGO AREA

New Home Building Helps Expand Business.

Lower operating costs and a broader market, created by increased suburban home building, have caused a marked increase in sales of gas furnaces, utility company officials in the Chicago area said yesterday.

Introduction in 1931 of natural gas piped from the Texas Panhandle and mixed in Chicago with manufactured gas has cut the cost of gas heating considerably, it was said. In recent years gas utility companies have pressed a campaign to stimulate the use of gas heating units, especially in suburban and residential areas.

Appliance Sales Gain.

Clayton G. Cassidy, advertising manager of the People's Gas Light and Coke company, estimated that sales of home heating appliances in the first half of this year rose 79 per cent over those in the corresponding period of 1938. He said the large gain resulted from increased building of new homes heated by gas and from aggressive sales and advertising programs.

In many of the suburbs served by the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, purchases of gas heating units gained as much as 40 per cent over those of the first six months of last year, according to C. W. Bradley, vice president.

The North Shore Gas company, operating in several north and northwest suburbs, reported sales of automatic gas heating systems had doubled. Extensive small home building was partly responsible for the gain, it was explained.

Residents of communities west of Chicago served by the Western United Gas and Electric company also increased purchases of gas furnaces, company officials said.

More Gas Consumed.

All the companies reported more consumption of gas for home heating as well as for cooking, refrigeration, and water heating.

The experience in the Chicago area was reflected in national statistics reported by the Association of Gas Appliance and Equipment Manufacturers. National sales of gas furnaces in the first half of this year rose 101 per cent, gas range sales expanded 38.4 per cent, gas refrigerators 30 per cent, and gas water heaters, 28 per cent.

Peoples Gas reported that sales of ranges increased 30.3 per cent in Chicago, with sales of water heaters up 50.5 per cent, and refrigerators up 13.8 per cent.

SMALL LOSSES SHOWN BY MOST CHICAGO STOCKS

Most issues on the Chicago Stock exchange showed losses yesterday. Commonwealth Edison, volume leader, declined ⅛ at 29½ on a turnover of 4,300 shares. Middle West was off ¼ at 8⅝. Among the most active issues Walgreen showed the sharpest drop. It closed ⅞ lower at 19⅝.

Marshall Field and Heilemann Brewing reversed the trend among the trading favorites with advances of ⅛ point each. Thirteen thousand shares changed hands during the session. Seventeen of the seventy issues traded showed gains, forty-two declined, and eleven finished unchanged.

Volume of trading during the last week was 137,000 shares, compared with 114,000 in the preceding week and 98,000 in the corresponding week last year. Of 193 issues traded last week, forty-eight advanced, 110 declined, and thirty-five were unchanged. Twelve sold at new highs for 1939.

amount from June and were 3 per cent larger than in July, 1938.

Ninety-two class 1 railroads had operating revenues totaling $297,393,346 in July, compared with $243,624,962 in the 1938 month. Railroads made a new move to win back freight business from competitors. The roads announced that rules on demurrage and storage will be liberalized Oct. 1 to give shippers more time to load and unload cars, and to reduce penalty charges when freight cars are kept longer than the regular time allowed customers.

Economists Report Improvement.

Economists of the department of commerce and the bureau of agricultural economics of the department of agriculture submitted reports on business which said conditions have improved this year. They predicted that the improvement will continue through winter.

Corporation earnings reports, except for the oil industry, continued to show, on the whole, better results than a year ago. A few companies voted extra or increased dividends on their common stocks.

Secretary Wallace, pondering steps to aid exports of lard and other fats, and to cut surpluses, indicated he may ask the Export-Import bank to underwrite credit transactions involving such exports, Wallace balked, however, at subsidizing lard exports. He said such action was not waranted.

His assistants would not discuss proposals which have been made for an arrangement to barter lard for German factory goods. American representatives of German trade interests were in Chicago trying to clear the way for a barter transaction.

The department of agriculture, which subsidizes flour, increased the subsidy 15 cents a barrel, lifting it to a maximum of $1.55 a barrel. Cotton exports also are subsidized. Egypt struck back at the cotton subsidy by abolishing its export tax on cotton.

The amount of cotton held in the United States on Aug. 1 was the largest for that date since records have been kept, the carryover amounting to 13,032,611 bales. Exports of cotton in the 1938-39 season fell to the lowest mark in sixty years.

Japan Takes First Rank.

Meantime, it was disclosed, on the basis of official Japanese figures, that Japan has ousted the United States from first rank as a supplier of goods to China. In the first four months of this year, Japan supplied one-third of all products imported by China.

At home, the government, through the Tennessee Valley authority, became the sole producer and wholesaler of power in Tennessee. At a $78,600,000 payment and deed ceremony in New York, the Commonwealth and Southern corporation's president, Wendell L. Willkie, handed over to the TVA all of the electric properties of a Tennessee subsidiary.

COTTON

Trading in American cotton markets yesterday was restricted. Uneasiness over the European political situation was a factor both here and abroad. Prices were slightly higher early in sympathy with Liverpool, but a reaction came later on scattered hedging sales and closing trades were unchanged to .05 cent lower on the active deliveries.

Spot cotton closed .04 to .10 cent lower, with New York, 9.22 cents; New Orleans, 8.88 cents; Galveston, 8.75 cents, and Houston at 8.73 cents a pound. Prices follow:

ALLIED MILLS DOUBLES PROFIT IN LAST YEAR

Union Tank Car Also Has Increase in Earnings.

Allied Mills, Inc., earned more than twice as much in the year ended June 30 as in the preceding year, H. G. Atwood, president of the company, said yesterday in his annual report to stockholders. The company, manufacturer of live stock feeds, soy bean products and liquors, has plants in eight states. Its general offices are in Chicago.

H. G. Atwood.

The report showed that profit was $1,301,578, equal to $1.37 a share. This compared with $606,771, or 64 cents a share, in the year ended June 30, 1938.

"The improvement in earnings has been largely due to the increase in volume of the live stock feed and soy bean divisions, and to the more stable price of commodities that prevailed as compared with the preceding year," said Atwood.

Distillery Business Expands.

"The distillery division also showed a satisfactory increase in volume of sales, but the profits from these operations were somewhat lower as a result of price reductions effective in the distilling industry.

"Because of the steady increase of volume of sales of the distillery products, it was deemed advisable to provide additional facilities for bottling these products. A new bottling plant is practically completed [at Peoria] and operations will commence within the next thirty days."

Net sales of Allied Mills for the year totaled $26,011,902, compared with $26,068,000 in the preceding year. The cost of sales was cut to $20,978,390, from $22,204,203.

Union Tank Car Earns More.

Another large Chicago enterprise, the Union Tank Car company, reported an increase in earnings in a statement covering the six months ended June 30. Net income rose to $700,274, from $509,504 in the first half of 1938.

Union Tank Car owns about 39,000 tank cars which it leases to shippers on a rental basis. It also receives a mileage rate from the railroads. The report listed the cost of cars, plant, equipment and fixtures at $87,744,327.

Abitibi Power and Paper Co., Ltd., Canadian producer of pulp, paper and power, announced that it had a profit of $191,633 in July. This compared with $256,843 in July, 1938.

Cut Rate Liquor Concern Fined Under Fair Trade Act

The Cut Rate Liquor store, 200 West Randolph street, has been fined $250 by Federal Judge William H. Holly for failure to observe an injunction restraining the store from selling Seagram products at less than the prices stipulated by the Seagram-Distillers corporation, pursuant to the Illinois Fair Trade act. The order was issued Aug. 4 by Judge Michael L. Igoe. The Seagram corporation filed a petition last week alleging the store had continued to cut prices and asking that the defendant be fined for the benefit of the plaintif.

NEW PACT SPURS CITY'S CLIMB TO AIR SUPREMACY

Chicago:—"Aviation capitol of the world." This prospect was pictured yesterday as experts received news of the final signing of the American-Canadian agreement giving air lines of both countries reciprocal rights in the territory of each nation.

Fred D. Fagg. Hails new pact.

To Chicago, already known as the air hub of the nation, the pact means an early direct connection with the trans-Atlantic airways. It will widen the city's air facilities to international scope.

Among those most gratified by the agreement was Fred Dow Fagg Jr., who is chairman of the aviation committee of the Chicago Association of Commerce, vice president and dean of faculties of Northwestern university, and a former director of the United States bureau of air commerce.

Gives Access to Seaboard.

"This advances our plans to make Chicago the world's air capitol," Dean Fagg said. "It gives the city definite access to the Atlantic seaboard and the air routes to Europe.

"Chicago will get a route that is 450 miles shorter to the trans-Atlantic plane bases at Shediac, N. B., and Botwood, Newfoundland. As director of air commerce in Washington two years ago I worked toward the agreement. It is fine to see the successful results of teamwork."

Not only will Chicago benefit by a three hour saving in time to the trans-Atlantic bases, but the entire western part of the United States will share in the saving, Dean Fagg said.

"It's a great forward step," said Fowler Barker, secretary of the American Air Transport association. "It is characteristic of the American civil aeronautics authority members that they have done an excellent job."

New Airport Under Way.

Although the $1,000,000 airport at Moncton, N. B., where land planes will deposit passengers and cargo for Clipper planes at Shediac, is still under construction, there is a smaller field available, Barker said.

Trans-Canada Airlines is expected to open service soon between Toronto and Moncton. Northwest Airlines has filed notice it will apply for a certificate for a route between Chicago to Toronto, which would give this city the link desired.

The pact between the United States and Canada provides for the interchange of services between cities in either country. Canadian operators are to be given permission to fly routes in the United States in return for certificates granted to this nation's air lines.

TWO RAILROADS TO SELL NOTES FOR EQUIPMENT

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 (AP)—The interstate commerce commission today authorized the Missouri Pacific railroad and the Southern railway to issue equipment trust certificates in the amounts of $2,980,000 and $400,000, respectively.

The $2,980,000 Missouri Pacific issue has been sold to a syndicate composed of Salamon Bros., & Hutzler, Dick & Merle-Smith, and Stroud & Co. the certificates bear interest of 2¼ per cent. The syndicate bid 100.139 and accrued dividends. The Southern's certificates, which bear two per cent interest, have been sold to Blyth & Co., Inc., at 100.0791.

The Missouri Pacific will buy 1,000 all steel gondola cars, two streamline trains, two Diesel electric passenger locomotives and seven Diesel electric switching locomotives. The Southern will use the proceeds of its issue to buy new passenger equipment.

Grocery Chain Store Sales Best for July Since 1929

Washington, D. C., Aug. 19 [Special].—Daily average sales of chain grocery stores for July were about 9 per cent larger in dollar volume than in July, 1938, and higher than for any July since 1929, the commerce department announced today. Sales declined from June by about the usual seasonal amount. Total sales for the first seven months of this year were about 6 per cent above the dollar value for the corresponding period of 1938 and 2½ per cent larger than for the 1937 period.

SUMMER SLUMP IN HOG PRICES ENDS LAST WEEK

Supplies Curtailed; Rates Swing Upward.

One of the longest summer declines in the history of the Chicago hog market ended last week with an abrupt curtailment of supplies and an upward swing of prices. The rally was the most pronounced of the year. The daily averages moved up for four successive days. This was the first time this year that the market advanced in four consecutive sessions.

The six day average at $5.25 showed a gain of only 5 cents because of the low level of prices prevailing early in the week. However, this is the first time since the week ended July 1 that the weekly average did not show a decline. Final rates were unevenly 25 to 70 cents above the close of the preceding week, with "lard hogs" scoring the largest gains.

Receipts Lower; Lard Firmer.

A reduction in aggregate receipts throughout the country, with supplies of extremely heavy hogs diminishing most, coupled with recent advances in the lard market were the principal factors contributing to the rise in hog prices.

The decrease in pork tonnage was larger than indicated by receipts because of a drop in average weights of hogs. Stock in Chicago averaged 285 pounds, off 7 pounds from the preceding week.

All classes of pork and hogs, however, still are considerably lower in price than is usual for this season of year because of the record breaking decline prior to last week.

Last week's average live cost stood $2.50 under the corresponding period in 1938, a reduction of 32 per cent, and it was $6.55 lower than in 1937, representing a loss of 55 per cent.

The various cuts of fresh pork at the close of the week sold wholesale from 15 to 33 per cent lower than a year ago and 41 to 50 per cent lower than two years ago.

Cattle Markets Erratic.

Cattle markets were erratic last week, but steers averaged steady for the six days at $9.10, this price equaling the lowest weekly average of the year. The price was $1.15 under a year ago, a reduction of 11 per cent, and $4.80 lower than in 1937, a decline of 34 per cent. Final rates for steers were steady to 25 cents lower than a week earlier. Yearlings sold steady to 15 cents lower.

A severe decline swept the lamb trade. Closing rates were 40 to 60 cents under a week earlier, with the six day average at $8.55, a new 1939 low. Old sheep sold steady to 25 cents lower.

Most live stock received yesterday went direct to packers.

GERMANY BUYS BIG SUPPLIES OF WAR MATERIALS

Enters Domestic Market for Refined Copper.

The outstanding development of the week in commodity markets was the heavy demand for copper and rubber by Germany. Trade sources reported that nation bought about 8,000 tons of electrolytic copper in the London market, and also purchased refined copper in this country for immediate shipment. Nazi purchases of rubber since Aug. 1 are said to have totaled well over 3,000 tons, most of which was acquired in London.

Both commodities are required in the manufacture of armaments. Germany is dependent upon foreign sources for most of her supplies.

Copper Prices Higher.

Copper prices are the highest in several months, and a tight supply situation exists in the English market. German buying of blister copper in the London market was believed an emergency measure. The blister, or partly refined metal, can be delivered in about ten days and further processed in Germany within another sixty days.

Spot rubber in New York gained 0.15 cent a pound during the week and futures advanced slightly. Export copper moved up 0.05 cent a pound to 10.65 cents. Copper futures were about unchanged.

There was no uniform trend in commodity markets during the week. Lead, silk, and hides futures were lower, while cocoa and sugar moved up slightly. Yesterday's prices:

COMMODITIES.

Trading in commodity futures offers a valuable service to farmers and business men. Through the medium of such trading, they are able to insure themselves against drastic price losses in the commodity in which they are interested. Such price insurance is known as "hedging."

The producer, owning outright and intending to sell a specific commodity, may hedge against a decline in that commodity's price by selling futures contracts. If the cash price of his commodity declines the futures contract will also decline. By purchasing a futures contract at a lower price he will make a profit on his futures dealings, thus compensating for the cash price decline of his commodity.

This system works conversely for a merchant who is committed to buy any actual commodity. He can hedge his position by buying future contracts. Thus if the price of the actual commodity goes up, making the purchase to him more expensive, the price of the futures contract will also rise. He will compensate on the futures market for the increased cash price.

The movement of a commodity through various channels of trade is complex. It takes time. By hedging through futures contracts, the producer or merchant insures himself against price changes certain to develop during this period. He abandons the hope of speculative gain and leaves only the expectation of a normal manufacturing, handling or producing profit.

The use of hedging is viewed favorably by bankers. When the banker knows that the actual commodity has been hedged, he knows that the price risk has been practically eliminated. He is, therefore, willing to lend a much larger percentage of the commodity's current value than he would if the commodity were not hedged and the holder was carrying the risk of a price change.

Futures contracts are normally canceled before the commodity is delivered to the holder of the contract. A contract of purchase may be liquidated by selling an equivalent contract. Likewise a contract of sale may be liquidated by purchasing an equivalent contract. Few contracts remain open to maturity. In those cases in which they do, the actual commodity is delivered.

Trading may be carried on in commodities for a smaller sum of original capital, in relation to the value of the entire contract, than is the case with stocks. The margin requirement on stocks is at least 40 per cent of the purchase price—the buyer must put up $4 for every $6 he borrows on a $10 purchase. In commodities the original margin requirement is only about 10 per cent of the contract's value.

The trader in commodities also escapes interest payments on the money representing the difference between his capital and the contract's value. That is because the contract is for future delivery, and payment is not made until delivery. The trader has not actually borrowed any money. The stock trader, of course, has borrowed money when he makes a purchase on margin and he must pay interest on that borrowed money.

In addition to the proportionately smaller amount of original capital required and the absence of interest, trading in commodities is normally cheaper in both tax and commission payments. At the same time it should be remembered that to the uninitiated commodity futures trading is extremely hazardous. The novice speculator can lose his entire capital in a very short time.

GIRL AVIATORS TO PROVE SKILL IN SKIES TODAY

Flying Club Offers 8th Annual Show.

A group of office girls, stenographers, theater cashiers and trained nurses today will don goggles and helmets and gather at Palwaukee airport near Wheeling, Ill., to show that they can fly airplanes as well as most males. The young women, all members of the Chicago Kirls' Flying club, are to stage their eighth annual air show this afternoon.

All the women participating in the meet fly for sport. Most of them hold solo or private pilot licenses, and spend their own money for time in the air. In the past, nevertheless, they have performed in annual exhibitions in a manner that stamped them as expert aviatrixes. Not a member of the club ever has been injured in a show, despite several minor mishaps.

Today's meet will open at 2:15 p.m. with a salute from the men flyers of the Chicagoland area. Some 50 men pilots in their own planes will fly over Palwaukee field and land. The second event will be a cross country race from the airport to Naperville and return, a round trip of 65 miles. Eight girls have entered this race.

Two Will Bail Out.

Two of the girls, Martha Stadler, 1702 Horeb avenue, Zion, and Miss Lydia Christiansen of Racine, Wis., will make parachute jumps. Both girls are registered nurses. They made practice jumps last Wednesday at Curtiss-Reynolds airpor under the supervision of Lieut. Verne Stewart, veteran parachute expert. Stewart will supervise their preparations today.

Then will follow contests in landing to a mark—the girl putting the wheels of her airplane closest to the mark wins the prize—in bomb dropping and in stunting. There will be an interlude while Al Hedler from Curtiss field gives an aerobatic exhibition in his Great Lakes biplane. Hedler is the only male to have a part in the show.

There will be two other races. One is described by Frances Anderson of Bellewood, the show chairman, as a novelty race. This is to be a surprise event and Mrs. Anderson refused to describe it in advance. The meet will end with a 25 mile free-for-all race around a five mile closed course. Seven girls have entered.

Those in Races

The girl pilots who will fly and the airplanes in which they will compete are: Mrs. Anderson, Taylorcraft monoplane with 50 horse power motor; Helen Budwash, 15737 Marshfield avenue, Harvey, Porterfield monoplane, 50 horse power motor; Helen Welch, 2115 Sedgwick street, a Rearwin monoplane, 90 horse power LeBlond motor; Janet Mayhero., 108 3d street, Wilmette, Piper Cub, 50 horse power motor; Alice DeWitt, 1635 West 83d street, Rearwin monoplane, 70 horse power LeBlond motor; Dorothy Ring, 1253 [illegible]eland avenue, Ryan ST monoplane, 95 horse power Menasco motor, and Jerry Truesdell, 5402 Woodlawn avenue, Piper Cub, 50 horse power motor.

Miss Stadler also has entered several events and expects to fly if she is able to obtain a Piper Cub, 50 horse power motor, for the races.

There is considerable difference in the cruising and top speeds of the airplanes the girls will fly. Fastest ship in the meet will be Miss Ring's Ryan, which is capable of 140 miles an hour. Next in performance comes Miss Welch's Rearwin at 123 miles an hour and Mrs. DeWitt Rearwin at 115 miles an hour.

Protest No Handicap.

The Cubs, Taylorcraft and Porterfield planes have a top speed of about 85 miles an hour with their 50 horse power engines. A number of the girls in the club have protested against the refusal of the race committee to handicap the faster planes, but handicaps were ruled out.

It was explained that the prize money which has been posted for each event will be shared equally by all pilots who enter. The winners will receive no more than the competitor who finishes in last place.

Miss Welch, a charter member of the club, is the only pilot who has taken part in each of the seven previous contests. She has held a private pilot's license since 1931 and has logged more than 500 hours of flying. She is social secretary for the club and is employed as a private secretary by a loop business office.

Miss Ring and Mrs. DeWitt hold instructor's rating. Miss Ring is a commercial pilot and Mrs. DeWitt holds a limited commercial ticket. Both girls have been consistent winners in club contests. Miss Ring is a stenographer in an insurance office and Mrs. DeWitt helps her husband, Bernard, operate the General Air Service at Ashburn field.

Harvey's Amelia Earhart.

The theater cashier of the club is Miss Helen Budwash. She has been called "the Amelia Earhert of Harvey" by some of her neighbors. Miss Budwash entered a race against men pilots in the recent Amateur Air show at Curtiss field and took fourth place ahead of five men flyers.

Two of the fledgelings who will be in the meet are Miss Mayhercy and Miss Truesdell. Both won their private pilot licenses this week.

Refugees Pick Up English to Live New Life

BY EDWIN STOLL.

"What are the essential attributes for beauty in women and men?" That is the question written on the blackboard.

"The shine deceives," volunteers a noted European physician, groping for the correct English words to express the adage. "A man must not necessarily be handsome. He must have 'it'," brokenly adds a cultered middle aged woman, to the merry laughs of her classmates, ranging in age from 18 to 76.

Forgetting their troubles for an hour, the class of foreigners enters into the discussion with enthusiasm, each offering his or her bit in the attempt to master the English language. As this one or that stumbles over a word, Mrs. Stephanie Knowles, the teacher, comes to the rescue, providing it or explaining another as a substitute.

Most Are Refugees.

The scene in the Hyde Park Y. M. C. A. is memorable because it represents an undaunted people driven from their homes and jobs, adjusting themselves to a new life in a new world. The majority of the students, many of them with masters' and doctors' degrees, are Jewish refugees from Germany, Austria, and Czecho-Slovakia.

The board of education and Johanna lodge, No. 9, United Order of True Sisters, sponsors the class of fifty which meets every Tuesday and Thursday morning during the summer session. Subjects include the English language, American history, civics, and letter writing.

"Were you speaking German?" interrupts Mrs. Knowles with a note of severity in her voice. "No, ma'am!" comes back the answer with a laugh as a lawyer hastily withdraws his head from a whispered conference with a classmate. The pupils on this particular morning are studying English through conversation. Other languages are strictly forbidden.

Rabbis in Group.

Two rabbis sit in the intent group around the table, one of them a brilliant young man of 32 from Berlin who plans to renew his rabbinical training in Cincinnati after he learns the language. Three doctors are part of the circle, one of them a sprightly man of more than 70, who was decorated by the former kaiser for his accomplishments.

At the end of the board is a small white haired woman who, too, has seen 70 summers. She is a cousin of the famed American, Julius Rosenwald, brought to this country through the Rosenwald fund. Then there are many lawyers and professional men and women, all eager to establish themselves in a land of the free.

Naturalization and citizenship are the ultimate goals, but five years must elapse before these can be obtained, so many drop from the class after they find permanent jobs or learn enough to make their way about in this strange new world.

Saw Need of Class.

Engaged in adult education work for many years, the Johanna lodge, composed mostly of Jewish women, saw the need of a class for German immigrants about two years ago. They consulted the board of education, obtained a teacher, and with the coöperation of the Y. M. C. A. started the project, which includes a beginners' class of twenty-five preceding the advanced group each of the two days. There those with fewer degrees or the newer newcomers start from scratch.

Assisting Mrs. Knowles, the board of education instructor, at each session are two of the committee on adult education from the Johanna lodge. During the winter, three from this group conduct a conversation class on a third morning of the week in addition.

Augmenting the training still more, Mrs. Florence R. Conney, 5026 Woodlawn avenue, chairman of the committee, holds an informal open house each Wednesday night in her home. An enthusiastic old lady who has found pleasure for years in assisting strangers in America, especially at the Maxwell street settlement, she leads another conversation and "advice to the perplexed" class.

Others on Committee.

Other members of the committee are Mrs. Justin Kaufman, 1348 Hyde Park boulevard; Mrs. Isaac Louis, 5142 Kimbark avenue; Mrs. Albert Porges, 5210 Dorchester avenue; Mrs. Theodore Horwich, 5479 Hyde Park boulevard; Mrs. Eugene Flesch, 1209 Madison Park; Mrs. Harold Stern, 5528 Hyde Park boulevard; Mrs. Martin Pokrass, 5526 Everett avenue, and Mrs. Anita B. Cohn, 1414 Thorndale avenue. Mrs. Sidney E. Levy, 5437 Hyde Park boulevard, is the president of Johanna lodge.

But the hour is up. Mrs. Knowles writes the home work on the blackbord, six new words, which she explains as she pronounces them. They are "poise, carriage, slovenly, slipshod, foremost, and pulchritude." A master's degree will come in handy indeed, is the passing observation.

Flossmoor Men's Club Plans Annual Jamboree

The Flossmoor Men's club, open to all men residing in the village, will hold its annual jamboree for golfers, near golfers and plain and fancy wielders of the knife and fork Thursday at Cherry Hill Country club. Prizes for tournament play will be distributed at dinner in the evening. Members of the committee in charge are officers of the club, Ewart [Pete] Strawbridge, president; Jack Perry, vice president; Dr. R. B. Reeves, treasurer, and Al Tatge, secretary.

Pedal Pushers Prepare for Jaunt

Three pert pedal pushers were framed last week by the photographer. They really hadn't done anything, but they will. Next Sunday, along with numerous other young Beverly cyclists, they will pedal all the way to Thornton forest preserve and back, a trip of some twenty-five miles. They are members of the Pedal Pushers club organized recently by Richard Wilson, representative of the League of American Wheelman. In addition to such long winded and long suffering trips as they propose to take next Sunday, the young people ride each Monday evening, leaving Jim's Bike shop, 1453 West 103d street. Any cycling enthusiast over 17 years old is invited to join the club members on their tours. Judging from the fancy figures that some of the members cut on a wheel, there should be plenty response to the invitation. Take for example (left to right) Miss Dorothy Bebb, 1652 West 102d street, treasurer; Miss Jeanne Dunne, 1661 West 102d street, publicity chairman, and Miss Ruby Lee Brubaker, 1708 West 102d street.

BUSIEST CORNER OUTSIDE LOOP IS HALSTED-63D

Trafic Count Lists Cars and Pedestrians.

Halsted and 63d street is the busiest intersection in Chicago outside the loop, according to a trafic survey made by the Works Progress administration under the sponsorship of three city departments.

The triple intersection of Ashland avenue and McDowell and 47th streets is the second busiest of the second busiest of the outlying street crossings, and 63d street and Cottage Grove avenue is third, the count disclosed.

Pedestrians outnumber automobiles by more than five to one at the 63d and Halsted intersection, but by only about two to one at the others, the survey count indicates.

At 63d and Halsted the checkers for the WPA counted an average of 120,591 pedestrians during a 16 hour period. In the same time 21,978 passenger cars and trucks flow through the intersection on an average, according to the study.

Figures on Trafic.

The average count for the Ashland-47th-McDowell intersection is 53,359 pedestrians and 27,564 vehicles. For the 63d-Cottage Grove crossing it is 38,998 pedestrians and 19,069 cars and trucks.

Another south side intersection—that of 79th and Halsted streets—is in fifth place in point of pedestrian and vehicular trafic, the count reveals.

One curious fact shown by the study is that while Chicagoans go to work at widely varying hours, most of them get home at about the same time. Noon and the half hour starting at 5 p.m. are the peak periods for pedestrian trafic, according to the clockers.

Scorn Rain Now.

Rain apparently is no longer a serious deterrent to automobile trafic as it used to be in the early days of the motor car. The count showed a falling off of vehicular trafic of less than 13 per cent on rainy days.

Results of the study, which is not yet completed, will serve as a guide in the formulation of future trafic policies of the city government, it was indicated. It will make possible to an extent hitherto impossible an intelligent planning of vehicular and pedestrian regulation and control, engineers said.

Already the survey is bearing fruit. Of 7,400 street intersections studied, nearly 500 have been designated "high pressure" points. This means that walk signals will be installed on the stop lights in an effort to reduce the pedestrian hazard and speed both pedestrian and motor vehicle movement.

ANDERSON BANDSMEN TO PLAY IN JACKSON PARK THIS EVENING

With Marian Carlisle, soprano, and Dan Baker, tenor, as soloists, the Oscar Anderson band will play a concert at 8 o'clock tonight in the Jackson park bandshell under the sponsorship of the park district with the coöperation of the Chicago Federation of Musicians.

NINTH CATHOLIC ACTION SCHOOL TO OPEN AUG. 28

Southwest Side Youths Aid Preparations.

Hundreds of south and southwest side students will attend the ninth annual summer School of Catholic Action sponsored by the Sodality of Our Lady Aug. 28 to Sept. 2 in the Morrison hotel. The school will be identified with others held in Boston, St. Louis, New Orleans, Milwaukee, New York, and Buffalo, and will be attended by directors, faculty moderators, parish and school sodalists from all parts of the country.

Courses will be conducted in line with the plea of the late Pope Pius XI. for "special attention to the sciences of civics, sociology, and economics with a view of evolving a constructive program of social action fitted in its details to local needs."

Among the most important subjects treated during the six days will be "How to Assist at Mass," "High School Student Democracy," "Public Worship Clinic," "Parliamentary Law," "Consumers' Coöperatives," "Digest of Political Science," economics, and public questions.

Members of Faculty.

The faculty will be composed of the Rev. Daniel A. Lord, national director of Sodality of Our Lady, the Rev. J. Roger Lyons, and the Rev. George A. McDonald, associate directors of the national sodality; the Rev. Herbert O'H. Walker, associate director and lecturer; the Rev. Aloysius J. Heeg, associate director and authority on catechetics; Miss Dorothy J. Willmann, executive secretary for parish sodalities and lecturer, and the Rev. Martin Carrabine, moderator of Cisca, Chicago Inter-Students' Catholic Action organization.

Others on the faculty will be the Rev. Francis Deglman, student counselor and director of sodalities at Creighton university, the Rev. Gerald Ellard, authority on church liturgy; Miss Edith Feldhake, recreation specialist; the Rev. Francis P. LeBuffe, eastern secretary of the sodality; George Neil, authority on recreational organization and projects; the Rev. Ara F. Walker, professor of philosophy at John Carroll university, Cleveland, O.; the Rev. E. J. Weisenberg, professor of dogmatic and patristic theology at St. Mary's college, St. Mary's, Kas., and Miss Marian Prendergast, executive secretary for the Summer Schools of Catholic Action.

Members of Committee.

South and southwest side young men and women who will be active on the committee for this year's summer school are Thomas Hanlon, 8205 Throop street, chairman of bus tour; Miss Kethleen Garvey, 3328 West 65th place; Edward Marciniak, 4607 Whipple street, and Robert Shanahan, members of the entertainment committee, and Miss Frances Walz, 2559 East 72d street, and Miss Mary Muellman, 1845 West Garfield boulevard, members of the activities committee.

ST. JOHN THE BAPTIST PARISHIONERS UNITE IN SUMMER FESTIVAL

The annual summer festival and carnival of St. John the Baptist church opened last Friday at 51st street between Morgan and Peoria streets to continue until next Sunday evening. Women of the parish will serve dinners in the parish hall at 6:30 o'clock this evening and next Sunday. Rides, games, booths, and entertainment are carnival features. The Rev. A. L. Girard, pastor, is chaplain of the 33d division of the National Guard and has invited members of the guard to attend. The Rev. J. C. Gibbons and the Rev. A. W. Peterson, assistant pastors, are aiding in carnival arrangements.

Fratority Beach Party.

The 311 of '37 fratority will hold a summer beach party for its members today on the Jackson park beach.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs About Some Folks You Know.

EXTENDING its boundaries deep into Indiana, Our Town records the reëlection of the Rev. H. A. Nuoffer, pastor of the Trinity English Lutheran church, Hammond, as district superintendent of the English Lutheran churches of the South Chicago area during the recent convention in Concordia college, River Forest. His circuit includes all churches south of the loop and those as far east as La Porte, with a total membership of more than 7,000.

The Rev. H. A. Nuoffer.

The Rev. Mr. Nuoffer, in addition to performing his duties as superintendent, has served as president of the Lutheran Publicity Association of Greater Chicago, which represents 155 churches of the Missouri synod. Active in the field of Christian higher education, he assisted in organizing the Chicago Lutheran Sunday School Teachers' Training institute, 17 North State street, in 1924, and has been its president since 1926.

Artists all, the three Kempf brothers are still quite different. Paints, stone, or wood—they use all three to express themselves. Tud, 1356 East 57th street, a sculptor and carver, can take a cow bone and shape it into an elephant. He can pick up a stone from the beach near his Dunes cottage and turn into the "Mona Lisa." He can twist a piece of wood until it becomes an ostrich. He can take an old ax handle and turn it into a lily. Tud's brother, Roman, is a designer and can conceive a large variety of things. Tom, another brother, is a painter and uses water colors as his medium. The trio now has an exhibit in the Club Woman's bureau of Mandel Brothers which will continue through Thursday.

FLORENCE EZZELL STEVENSON. That is the name preceding sketches in two recent books of significance, "The International Blue Book, Who's Who of the World" and "Who's Who of American Women, Volume III." An artist of note, Mrs. Stevenson, whose home is at 9411 Longwood drive, won a cash prize presented by the South Side Art association in the spring exhibition for her oil painting, "Cameos." She is now busy transferring to canvas the sketches which she obtained during a recent visit to New England.

Emil Mayer, 5107 Blackstone avenue, an Our Towner of long standing, will mark his seventieth birthday today with a reception in the home of his son, Samuel, 7340 Crandon avenue. He was born at 863 West Washington street, according to the old system of street numbering.

"MOST people think I look like a baby!" exclaims little Jerry Truesdell, 5402 Woodlawn avenue. But then she confounds them with her hobby—aviation. A pretty 24 year old secretary, she holds a solo license and third class radio operator's license, and today will take part in the air show at Palwaukee airport presented by the Chicago Girls' Flying club, which she joined in 1937.

Jerry Truesdell.

A graduate of Hyde Park High school and the Chicago Business college, she has been interested in airplanes since she was very little and grew up—which, incidentally, wasn't so very far because she's only 5 feet ½ inch tall. She took flying lessons at the ground school class of the Peoples' college, an adult education project, in 1936, and has earned every cent of the money for her training, which fact accounts for the slight delay in obtaining other licenses. Her ambition is to become an acrobatic flyer, and she wouldn't mind breaking a few speed or altitude records. At present she flies at least once a week, sometimes three or four times, at the Lansing airport.

Saturday will be homecoming day for Lieut. and Mrs. Alvin B. Auerbach at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Auerbach, 5314 Kimbark avenue. They will be at home to their many relatives and friends. Stationed in Panama with the 11th Engineers of the United States army for the last two and a half years, Lieut. Auerbach has been transferred to Fort Belvoir, Va. Later they will leave for Cedar Rapids to visit the parents of Mrs. Auerbach, Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Schoen.

Vacation and travel are synonyms for Miss Mary Frances O'Neill, 6751 Oglesby avenue. After visiting Banff and Lake Louise, she sailed recently on the S. S. Empress of Japan for Honolulu for a six weeks' jaunt. On her return she will visit the San Francisco fair.

Celebrating the eighty-ninth birthday of her mother, Mrs. Celia L. Wertheim, Mrs. Benjamin Samuels, 5421 Cornell avenue, held an open house yesterday afternoon and evening.

SO. WEST SIDE TO GAIN UNDER BOARD'S PLANS

Three Buildings to Open Next Month.

BY HAROLD SMITH.

Fifteen public school building projects on the southwest side, calling for a total expenditure of $5,925,000, are under way or planned. This was reported to Supt. William H. Johnson last week by Don C. Rogers, director of the building survey department of the board of education.

Three of the fifteen are scheduled to open their doors to pupils next month, by the opening day of school if possible. Plans are complete for two other undertakings, while final plans for the other ten remain to be worked out. These projects are a part of one of the most extensive school building programs in the history of the city, according to school board officials. The total value of new and additional building under way or planned is $19,210,000. Twelve new school buildings or additions are scheduled to go into service in September.

Will Cost $1,500,000.

One of these is the new Gage Park High school at 56th and Rockwell streets. This building will cost $1,500,000 and will provide accommodations for 2,200 pupils.

Boundaries for the new district the school will serve were announced last week. The district is carved out of parts of the Lindblom and Harper High areas. Boundaries of all three districts are shown in an accompanying map.

Supt. Johnson announced that the formation of the new high school jurisdiction means the immediate cancellation of all out-of-district permits in the area. The only exceptions are 11th and 12th grade pupils, who may, if they wish, remain until graduation in the schools they are now attending.

Another southwest side building improvement set for probable opening next month is the $200,000 rehabilitation of the Chicago Teachers college at 6800 Stewart avenue, which has a capacity of 500. Most of the work being done was necessitated when the institution was recently changed from a normal college.

Adds Four Classrooms.

Still another that will in all likelihood be in service before Oct. 1 is the $125,000 addition to the Bass Elementary school at 6554 South May street. This will give the school four additional classrooms, an assembly hall and a gymnasium.

Other southwest side school improvements, given in Mr. Rogers' report on progress, are:

Brownell Elementary school, 6509 Perry avenue. Bids have been received for a $180,000 building to replace the structure that was burned early this year.

Wilson Junior college, 6800 Stewart avenue. The site has been acquired and architects are working on the sketches for a building to cost $1,750,000 and to accommodate 3,000 students.

Harvard Elementary school, 7525 Harvard avenue. Plans were originally launched for a $100,000 six classroom addition, but they ran into unexpected difficulties. There is now talk that the plans will be completely revised.

Plans in Early Stage.

New elementary school at 6800 Stewart avenue. A total of $400,000 was appropriated for a 28 classroom building on this site, with kindergarten, gymnasium, and assembly hall, but the plans are still in the preliminary stage.

Libby elementary school, 5300 South Loomis street. Little has been done toward the $100,000 gymnasium and assembly hall, for which the money has been appropriated.

Hendricks Elementary school, 313 West 43d street. Funds have been appropriated for a $310,000, 22 classroom building with kindergarten, assembly hall and gymnasium.

Vocational center building at 61st street and Wabash avenue. An appropriation of $150,000, to provide facilities for 200 pupils, has already been made, but plans have been delayed because additional site is needed.

At Coleman School.

Coleman Elementary school, 4655 South Dearborn street. Bids have been received for a $300,000 wing to replace the portion that burned last December. It will contain 18 classrooms, a library, a kindergarten, and a laboratory for the home mechanics course that was instituted last year. It is estimated that it will be completed by next May.

High school at 36th and Sangamon streets. Site is now being acquired for a new school at this point, but there are no plans as yet and no money has been appropriated.

Harper High school, 6520 South Wood street. A total of $300,000 was appropriated for an addition, but there has been little progress.

Sherwood Elementary school, 57th street and Perry avenue. Site is being acquired for a $310,000 structure.

New elementary school at 245 West 57th street. Money has been appropriated for a $200,000 building containing ten classrooms, a kindergarten and a combined assembly hall and gymnasium.

Voice of the Southwest Side

FEARS YOUNG SPEEDERS.

Recently I heard a comment that the young girls and boys of Beverly Hills were too fast. I don't know whether the speaker referred to the morals of the young people or to their tendency to overlook all speed laws while driving family cars, broken down jallopies and even, yes even, bicycles.

I only know that I have two grievances against them. The first, that it isn't safe in vacation time for a calm, law abiding, work-a-day housewife to go shopping on 95th street. Bicycles scoot around corners unannounced and endanger b-ttles of milk and packages heaped high in the arms of shoppers, to say nothing of silk stockings and shins beneath them.

I live on the famous southwest side speedway Longwood drive, and am the mother of three small children, two boys and a girl. They are active youngsters and hard to corral in the back yard. Often when I think they are safe at play in the back, I find them out on the drive running after their baseballs and undaunted by the reckless young automobile drivers who fly up and down the drive on unimportant pastimes. The offenders are inevitably young high school boys and girls, many of whom are not even old enough to apply for a driver's license. That is my second grievance. I believe that greater trafic regulation should be enforced in Beverly Hills, and especially along the drive, if not to save life and limb, then at least to calm down the younger generation who seem to be going nowhere fast. CONCERNED.

BUSHES BLOCK VIEW.

In view of the many laws and ways to reduce auto accidents these days I wonder what has to be done about high bushes on the corner obstructing view from the street crossing.

On the southeast corner of 83d and Throop streets there are bushes six feet high all the way to the curb. Every day three or four times I have to come to a complete stop before going around the corner. It's dangerous, and although many of the neighbors grumble, so far there has been nothing done about it.

Please notify the necessary department in the city and we'll all be very thankful if these bushes can be trimmed down before more accidents happen.

LOUIS E. GAWLEY.

IN DEFENSE OF CYCLISTS.

Did you ever try riding a bicycle down 67th street on the park side with a lot of selfish people who take up the whole sidewalk and who refuse to move in order to let a bicycle go by? These same selfish people complain about having to jump aside to keep from being run down. Maybe if they tried a little street etiquet they wouldn't have to jump. You can't judge all the bicycle riders by a few discourteous ones. Also, bicycle riders aren't hoodlums. MARY J. BANTSOLAS.

PARKING PROBLEM.

Regarding the problem of double parking out on the southwest side, some one might check up on Ashland avenue, between 78th and 79th streets opposite the softball grounds. Double parking? There are bicycles, pedestrians, trucks, street cars, baby carriages, babies and no trafic authority on the scene!

W. T. SHELLEY.

SOUTHWEST SEA SCOUTS ABOARD GROUNDED SHIP

Six southwest side Sea Scouts were among those on board the 200 foot sailing schooner, the Oliver H. Perry, which recently was feared lost on Lake Michigan.

The three masted vessel was aground on the Ils aux Galets reef in the lake, halfway between Charlevoix and Mackinac Island. It left Chicago on a two week voyage July 29 and was due back on Aug. 12. The ship, built in 1920, sailed between Nova Scotia and Africa for many years. It is now under charter to the Sea Scouts of Detroit.

Among the southwest side boys on board were Joseph Schulte, 10453 Prospect avenue; Ted Hatfield, 1736 West 104th place, and Edmund Schulz, 10025 Charles street, of the Sea Scout ship Iroquois; Ken Malmgren, 3507 West 60th street, and Robert Cole, 6231 Menard avenue, both of the Vagabond. Hubert A. McCurdy, 219 West 79th street, an officer from the Endeavor, was also with the Perry.

St. Columbanus Society to Visit Shrine Tuesday

Members of St. Columbanus Altar and Rosary society will go on a tour to Holy Hill, Wis., Tuesday. Buses will leave 71st street and Calumet avenue at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Joseph Burgin, 6920 Vernon avenue, the president, has charge of reservations.

LAUNCH INQUIRY ON TRAFIC TRAP IN MIDLOTHIAN

Use Boys to Camouflage Police Car; Claim.

The state's attorney's office launched an investigation last week into numerous complaints that the police of Midlothian are operating a trap for unwary motorists traveling through the village.

One angle of the case that is receiving special attention is the charge that the police are employing children in the operation of the trap.

Assistant State's Attorney Richard B. Austin, who is in charge of the inquiry, said that at least twenty motorists have charged in the last few weeks that they were fined summarily for real or fancied violation of a stop sign halting Crawford avenue trafic before it crosses 147th street.

Boys Conceal "Police."

Several of these drivers charged, Mr. Austin said, that police making the arrests apparently were inducing small boys to stand on the running board of the lurking squad car, concealing the word "Police" painted on the car, from the eyes of drivers. These young accomplices leap from the running board when the squad starts after a victim, the motorists related.

As a rule, the victims report, they are taken before Police Magistrate Robert Lewis and given their choice between pleading guilty and paying a "small" fine on the spot, or posting bond and appearing later with a chance of being sentenced to pay a much larger fine.

All the victims thus far interviewed declare that Magistrate Andrews turned a deaf ear to their protests that they had stopped completely or had slowed to an almost imperceptible speed before entering the intersection.

"If police conceal their identity in a case of this sort," Mr. Austin said, "they certainly are lacking in sincerity, even if they are not guilty of technical entrapment.

Suggests Fairer Plan.

"Many careful drivers do not come to a full stop at an intersection if there is no other trafic in sight. If the police want to make drivers halt absolutely, all they need to do is to let the squad car be in plain evidence at the intersection, with the police insignia showing.

"It is highly improper to use children as accomplices in a trafic trap, and I shall investigate the charge fully and take whatever action is appropriate if my inquiry substantiates it."

Several of the Midlothian arrests have been made by Chief of Police M. E. Reynolds, according to officials of the Chicago Motor club, who received most of the complaints and turned them over to the state's attorney.

Reynolds was one of the Midlothian representatives at a meeting last December called by Mr. Austin to acquaint village officials fully with the laws governing trafic offenses.

Witness for Special.

Reynolds was also a character witness for Mayor Charles Special of Dixmoor and the four officials and policemen at their trial last fall on charges of conspiracy to extort money from motorists caught in Dixmoor speed traps. All five were convicted and given jail sentences.

At the December conference it was brought out that the total of Midlothian's trafic fines soared just before the Dixmoor convictions. Mr. Austin said the fines dropped suddenly after the convictions, but have been climbing in recent weeks.

During the year ending in May, 1938, Midlothian's income from trafic fines was $1,468, Mr. Austin said. But from May to November that year, a period of only six months, the income jumped to $2,365, nearly $400 a month. Immediately after the Dixmoor convictions the trafic fines in Midlothian dropped back to an average of about $125 a month, Mr. Austin said.

"Sting of Sarcasm, Scorn" Will Be Sermon Subject

"The Sting of Sarcasm and Scorn" will be the subject of a sermon at 11 o'clock this morning by the Rev. Clinton C. Cox in the Drexel Park Presbyterian church, 64th street and Marshfield avenue. The Rev. Mr. Cox will also preach at 8 o'clock in the evening. His topic then will be "Mount Gilboa." Music will be furnished at both services by the choir under the direction of T. C. Barg.

New School Boundaries

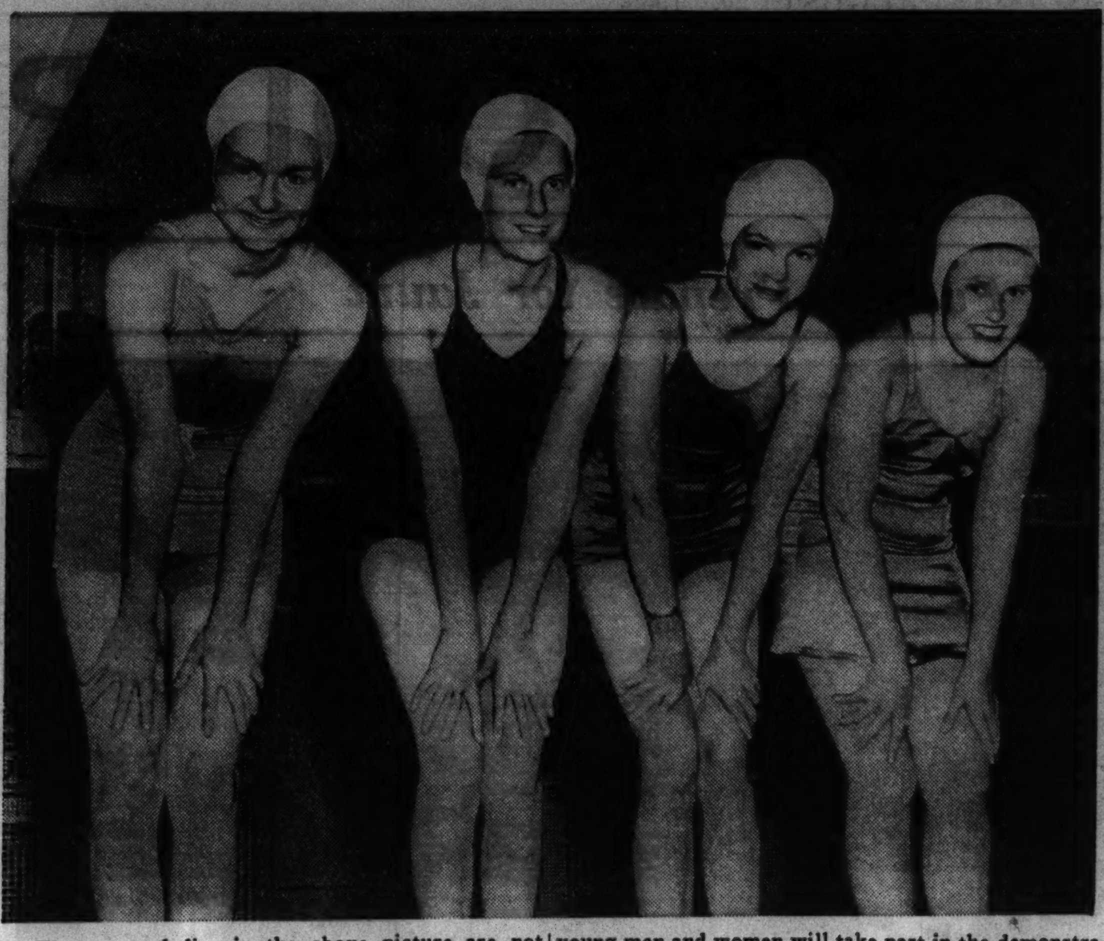
The map above shows the boundaries of the district to be served by the new Gage Park High school, which will open next month. It also shows the revised boundaries of the Lindblom and Harper High school districts, from which the new district was taken.

No Novices, These, in Pool Maneuvers



The young ladies in the above picture are not holding their knees to keep them from trembling. Far from it! They are expert young swimmers, who keep a calm head under and above water. As such they will take part in the swimming exhibition to be held by the Englewood Y. M. C. A. Friday evening in the "Y" pool, 65th street and Union avenue. Seven hundred young men and women will take part in the demonstration under the direction of Lou Henderson and Lenore Erlandson of the "Y" staff. In the picture are (left to right) Alice Boyte, Jeanne Hoving, Camille Kloser, and Marian Van Heyningen. The junior young men of the "Y" will conduct a similar exhibition on Aug. 31.

3-DAY RETREAT IS SCHEDULED FOR METHODISTS

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

The imperative distractions of modern civilization allow so little opportunity for the "cultivation of the garden of the soul" that Bishop Ernest Lynn Waldorf's invitation to a three day retreat finds instant response. For the fourth successive year hundreds of Methodists, members of the Rock River conference, will gather at College camp, Lake Geneva, Sept. 1 to 3, for spiritual enrichment, rest, recreation and meditation.

Bishop Waldorf.

"We find there that which satisfies our physical, moral, mental and spiritual hungers," reads the Bishop's invitation. "We come tired, seeking upbuilding, and in our fellowship we find that which meets us and takes us where we ought to be if we are to make the contribution of life and service pleasing to God."

This year the youth groups of the Methodist church will have a portion of the program. They have planned a full day's discussion on the subject "Resources for Christian Living often Overlooked" which will occupy the whole of Saturday.

Plan "Bishop's Dinner."

Following the "Bishop's Dinner" on Friday evening, Sept. 1, the opening event of the retreat, the Methodist church at large, arising from the recent merger of the former three branches, will be considered from the standpoint of various church groups.

Dow Bancroft, director of the new board of Lay Activities, will speak for the laymen; the Rev. Glen Gothard, pastor of Monroe Center church near Rockford, for young people, and Dr. Horace G. Smith of Garrett Biblical seminary from the preacher's standpoint. These three aspects will be summed up by Bishop Waldorf under "This Retreat as a Spiritual Preparation for the New Church."

The Saturday sessions will be divided into three groups. The speakers for the men's division will be the Rev. James R. Uhlinger, pastor at Rock Falls, the Rev. Leon L. Hammitt of the First church, Aurora, and the Rev. James H. Durand of Calvary church, Chicago. After a general discussion, the men will break up into smaller groups under the Rev. Almer M. Pennewell, pastor of St. John's church, 4700 Ellis avenue, the Rev. Charles Draper of Sycamore, and the Rev. Charles R. Goff of Court Street church, Rockford.

The women's program on Saturday morning will open with a sunrise prayer meeting, conducted by Mrs. A. C. Crawford of Trinity church, Chicago, the form of which was prepared by Mrs. Robert E. Meany of the same parish. The devotions will be followed with addresses by Mrs. Erskine M. Jeffords of Wilmette, Mrs. C. B. Watson of De Kalb, Mrs. A. L. Fuller of Wilmette, Mrs. C. Claud Travis of Evanston, and Mrs. Rudolph Malek, superintendent of Jennings seminary, Aurora.

Program for Youth.

The youth program will also begin with a morning watch service, conducted by the Rev. Donald Crocker of Dolton, followed by a symposium on spiritual resources, the leader of which will be the Rev. Paul Grimes of West Ridge community church.

Participating in the discussion, will be Robert Boyer, of the University of Chicago; Jack Lang, of West Ridge community church; Truman Kirkpatrick, of Hyde Park; Leona Barrett, of Chicago Heights; Louise Drew and Paul Jones, of Oak Park, and the Rev. John Tennant, of West Chicago. The young people's meetings will be summarized by the Rev. Frank A. Lindhorst, director of Christian education for the midwest region.

Brief talks will be given on Saturday evening by Dr. Aubrey S. Moore, home missionary and church extension superintendent, and Dr. Edmund D. Soper of Garrett Biblical institute. The retreat will close at noon on Sunday, Sept. 3, with a morning service at which Bishop Waldorf will preach. The co-chairmen of the retreat are Rockwell F. Clancy and Alfred C. Crawford.

The annual outing of the Lutheran Welfare society, sponsored by 177 congregations of the Missouri synod in the metropolitan area, will be held today in the grove of the Oak Forest infirmary. William F. Zirzow of Congress Park is president of the organization, which has a membership in excess of 80,000. The Rev. Henry H. Blanke, pastor of St. John's church, Montrose and Lavergne avenues, will be the principal speaker at the afternoon missionary service. Music will be furnished by the St. Paul's Harmony band of Austin and the Good Shepherd quartet of Berwyn.

Mr. and Mrs. Cologero Tummino, 326 West 105th street, announce the engagement of their daughter, Josephine, to Bruno Marcenkus, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Leutkus, 314 East Kensington avenue. Miss Tummino is a graduate of Fenger High school and her fiance is an alumnus of Pullman Technical Training school.

Col. Harry Abells Gives Out Appointments.

Planning the new semester, Col. Harry D. Abells, superintendent of Morgan Park Military academy, last week announced five appointments on the faculty, innovations in the curriculum, complete plans for the football season and the decoration of all the cadet rooms.

Col. Harry D. Abells.

According to advance registrations, an increase is indicated in both the upper and lower schools enrollments. New cadets must register on or before Sept. 11 and returning students will sign up for the semester on Sept. 12.

New on the faculty will be Maj. C. N. Jackson, who, with his wife, took up residence on the campus last week. Maj. Jackson will assume the duties of commandant of cadets, having had 20 years army experience. Another addition to the faculty is Lieut. Harold M. Stambach, who will be an instructor in commercial subjects and will direct the intra-mural physical education program of the upper school.

In Lower School.

In the lower school, new members of the faculty are Lieut. Edwin M. Stoehr and Lieut. Leeman C. Baird. Mrs. L. C. Baird will be matron of the lower school. The announcement of the election of a third lower school teacher will be made in the near future as well as the selection of a housemother for the junior school department.

Two major developments have been introduced in the curriculum. The first includes a greater assistance to members of both the junior and senior classes in personnel guidance, particularly along the line of vocational adjustment. A comprehensive battery of test, schedules, and score cards will be given to all members of the two upper classes which will enable the faculty to know the aptitudes, abilities, and interest of the cadets. The program will be under the direction of Hugh G. Price, principal of the upper school.

Another Major Change.

The second change in the curriculum will be a remedial reading program. Tests in the past have indicated that many new students entering the school are unable to carry on the comprehensive reading program with success, and plans are now being made which will provide specific assistance for each new cadet who needs remedial reading.

The season's football schedule is already posted in Abells field and a new automatic score board erected in anticipation of the coming home games.

ILLINOIS CENTRAL ELECTRIC

This is what he wrote:—

"I have been a resident of the South Shore District of Chicago for more than twenty years, during which time I have used the Illinois Central suburban service exclusively in going to and from my office. This includes the period when there was one special train each way per day on the South Chicago branch—The Business Men's Special, leaving the South Shore station, northbound at 8:14 am and Van Buren Street at about 5:15 pm, southbound—and on up to the present time, when the special trains run practically on each other's heels during the morning and evening rush hours.

"During all this time the Illinois Central service has been by far the best in the City and I am a little ashamed to say that it has just occurred to me that I have taken it too much for granted and that a word of appreciation would be in order. And so I want to offer my congratulations and thanks to those responsible for this fine service, which is as much a part of my life in Chicago as my food and clothing."

Ask any ticket agent for map showing residential districts served by Illinois Central Electric—also time table and information about train service. Or write or phone A. U. Sawbridge, District Passenger Agent, 140 S. Dearborn St., Phone ANDover 1600.

12 in All Given One Year Scholarships.

Five south and southwest side undergraduate students at Armour Institute of Technology were among twelve young men to be awarded one year scholarships recently for further study at the institute. According to H. T. Heald, president, the scholarships, covering a full year's tuition valued at $300, were presented on the basis of scholastic record, personality, extra curricular activities and general fitness.

Alvin L. Winkler.

Two local juniors to receive the awards were John Catlin, 7611 Paxton avenue, and Leonard H. Reinke, 7411 Dante avenue. Young Catlin, a mechanical engineering student, is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and was given the John Hamline scholarship, a memorial to the late lawyer and sponsored by a group of his friends.

A member of Scarab, honorary architectural fraternity, Mr. Reinke was the recipient of a Dora T. Bartlett scholarship. The Bartlett scholarships were established in 1937 by Frederic Clay Bartlett Jr., a graduate of Armour, in memory of his mother. They provide three full year tuition awards to worthy students in the department of architecture.

Among the local seniors receiving scholarships is Alvin L. Winkler, 10055 Lafayette avenue, senior mechanical engineering student. Mr. Winkler, who is a member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and of Pi Tau Sigma, honorary mechanical engineering fraternity, was given the Isadore S. Prenner scholarship.

Dahlia to Reign Over Floral Kingdom at Garden Exhibits

Like a tailored debutante, the dahlia, with its well bred air and waxy lips, will rule the floral set at three flower shows on the southwest side. Other members of the garden society, the asters, roses, lilacs, zinnias, petunias, gladioli, and marigolds, also will be on parade.

Mrs. C. C. Rehbein.

Two of the shows will be conducted on Sept. 9 and 10 by the Chicago Garden club in Hamilton park fieldhouse, 72d street and Normal boulevard, and by the Garden Club of Midlothian in the Lions' clubhouse, 148th street and Waverly avenue. The show at Hamilton park will also be continued on Sept. 11. The Garden Club of Morgan Park will hold its third annual flower show on Sept. 14 and 15.

The Chicago Garden club's show will be the third annual event of the organization and the second held in coöperation with the Central State Dahlia society. According to Mrs. C. C. Rehbein, president and chairman of the show, there will be a huge floral flag, made of 2,000 gladiolas, hundreds of fine specimen dahlias, and numerous displays of all varieties of garden flowers grown by men and women in their gardens.

Shows to Be Free.

No admission will be charged for entries or entrance to the show and ribbon awards will be presented in each classification. Special exhibits will include garden and bridge table settings, as well as displays by the Junior Garden clubs of Marquette and Hamilton parks.

Pottery, garden wearing apparel, ornaments, and bird houses also will be exhibited. Creating the impression of a garden, picket fences, arbors, bird baths, benches, and singing canaries will abound in the showroom.

Dahlias also will be a prominent feature of the Midlothian show, since the Central States Dahlia society again will award a medal for the most perfect specimen. The medal was won last year by Charles Strombeck of Morgan Park. All amateur dahlia growers are invited to compete.

According to Mrs. W. D. Button, flower show chairman, new stands have been made for the arrangements and specimen classes to show the exhibits to a better advantage. Shadow boxes, miniature arrangements, and table settings will be special features. Prizes will be garden equipment donated by merchants and ribbons for first, second, third, and fourth places.

Among those assisting Mrs. Button in the arrangements are Walter Button, Mrs. Sheila Nicolai, Mrs. Viola Steffen, and Mrs. F. H. Volland of Homewood. Judges will be furnished by the Central States Dahlia society.

CROSSING PERILS ARE SURVEYED BY MOTOR CLUB

Trafic Signals Listed for Intersections.

Continuing its drive to eliminate dangerous south side intersections, the south area council of the Chicago Motor club recently received reports concerning hazardous street crossings, Roy F. Healy, chairman, reported.

Trafic signals at 76th and Loomis streets and at 76th street and Ashland avenue were included in an order recently introduced in the city council by Ald. B. J. O'Hallaren [18th].

The intersection of State street and Pershing road is scheduled for trafic signals, and that at Pershing road and Wabash avenue will be surveyed soon to determine whether signals should be installed there, according to a letter from Joseph J. Butler, superintendent of streets. He said also that "Stop—Through Street" signs will be installed at 89th and Morgan streets.

The city will make a new trafic count at 95th street and Jeffery avenue, it was reported. The opening of 100th street has brought heavy travel over Jeffery avenue, but, in the opinion of city trafic engineers, this will be reduced when Colfax avenue is opened between 95th and 97th streets. The opening has been delayed because of litigation. Colfax and Torrence avenues then will take much of the trafic now utilizing Jeffery avenue.

Club engineers have recommended a two-lane trafic movement, turning left on 141st street, instead of the present one lane, after a survey of the intersection of Indianapolis avenue and 141st street in East Chicago, made at the request of the council.

De La Salle School Mothers to Have Luncheon Tuesday

The De La Salle Mothers' club will have their midsummer luncheon at 1 o'clock Tuesday in the High school, 3455 Wabash avenue. Mrs. Ralph Blose is the chairman, and Mrs. Michael McDonald, the co-chairman. Mrs. George Leahy is president of the organization.

NEW FALL FARE OF STUDIOS IS ALMOST READY

Dog Days Are Busy Ones in Radio Circles.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Radio circles are busy in August getting ready for September and October. Here's the dog day round-up:

Tony Martin, singing husband of Alice Faye, has been engaged to be the vocal headliner on the Andre Kostelanetz musical series which will originate, at least for a while, from Hollywood this fall.

Barry Wood and Ben Wain are the replacements for Lanny Ross and Kay Lorraine on the Hit Parade. . . . Negotiations are under way to have Benny Goodman and Tommy Dorsey make guest appearances on the forthcoming Alex Templeton Time, which will originate in Chicago, come autumn. . . . Robert Young has been engaged as master of ceremonies of the revamped Good News program, scheduled for a fall return. Frank Morgan will make frequent appearances and Fanny Brice and Connie Boswell will be regulars.

Replacements for Rudy Vallee.

"One Man's Family" and "I Love a Mystery," a west coast thrillodrama, both written by Carlton Morse, may go into the hour that Rudy Vallee is relinquishing at the end of next month. . . . Buddy Clark will be the featured singer on Wayne King's new fall show. . . . Betty Winkler, who plays the lead in NBC's "1001 Wives," may want to have the name of the show changed to "1002 Wives." She is to become the bride this week of Robert Jennings, radio director. Hanley Stafford [Baby Snook's daddy] and Radio Actress Viola Vonn are said to be contemplating the altar. . . . Jerry Colonna, who will be back on the air in the Bob Hope show, is supporting Charlie Chaplin in his new picture "The Dictator."

Alice Patton a Mother.

It's an eight pound daughter for Mr. and Mrs. W. Hatfield Smith. The mother is Alice Patton, pianist on the Backstage Wife show. Grace Nelson has taken over Alice's air periods. . . . Alex McQueen, the Nothing But the Truth Man of radio, is writing for the national magazines. . . . Ruth Brine, CBS commentator, and Rolf Kaltenborn, son of H. V. Kaltenborn, the news analyst, have set the date.

Horace Heidt is back running his orchestra following recovery from an appendectomy. . . . Virginia Campbell, eastern actress, has been ill at her home in Westport, Conn., reputedly because of the intense lighting used in television. "Kleig poisoning" is said to be fairly common among picture performers. . . . Myrna Dee Sergent is coming over from WAAF to join W-G-N. She will have a new program reflecting women's interests. . . The Four King Sisters, formerly with Horace Heidt, then with Al Pearce's Gang, are now singing with Artie Shaw on the Music and Madness show.

Sherlock Holmes May Return.

Negotiations are under way to have Basil Rathbone of the movies revise Sherlock Holmes for a new NBC series. . . . The Shadow, by the way, will be back on Mutual this fall. . . . Clifton Utley will return to W-G-N in mid-September with his comments on foreign affairs. . . . Harold Turner, W-G-N pianist who has been studying in England for a year, is expected back at work most any day now. . . . WLS is about to embark on a new studio building venture. . . . Henry Hunter of the movies has rejoined Chicago radio circles. . . . Smiling Ed McConnell has been hired for a fall song series. . . . Tony Wons, who has been making violins up in Wisconsin, has several sponsors listening. . . . Virginia Lee, who conducted the "I Need a Job" series on W-G-N, has written a book based on her experiences. . . . Mark Love, W-G-N basso, is vacationing in Colorado; Kathryn Witwer, W-G-N soprano, in Cumberland, Md.

A New Type of Adventure.

The Human Adventure, that new University of Chicago dramatic series, is so unusual and so well done that even radio circles who usually ignore educational radio programs are talking about it. And favorably. . . . The University of Chicago Round Tablers have developed a new type of place card that might interest many a distraught hostess. The Round Table place card has on it, in addition to the name of the individual at whose seat it is placed, also the names of those seated to the right and left. The card was developed because Prof. T. V. Smith in the middle of a broadcast forgot the name of a colleague he had known for a decade. Obviously there is even greater need for it at a dinner where acquaintanceships may be practically brand new.

What You May Expect.

C. Y. O. Sports Program.

The fifth of the story of the C.Y.O. new radio series of the Catholic Youth Organization will be presented over WAAF at 2:30 p. m. today. This episode will show C.Y.O. combats crime and juvenile delinquency.

SEE TELEVISION LIFTING NATION'S CULTURAL LEVEL

Experts Forecast Effects on Ways of Life.

What the future holds for television is still uncertain, but its probable influences on society are already the subject of much conjecture. These speculations may be no more accurate than what was said in advance about the automobile and the airplane and other developments which have caused tremendous changes in our way of life.

Nevertheless, television tempts the experts to prophesy. David Sarnoff, president of RCA, in a statement issued last week said that the prime effect of radio will be toward unification of the life of the nation, and a wider development for the life of the individual. He also cited another expert who asserted that "the main impact of television will be to intensify the social effects broadcasting already is producing."

The Effect of Intensification.

This intensification of the social and psychological effects of aural radio may produce a series of changes in human lives and habit, Mr. Sarnoff added.

"Television will bring into peoples' homes," he said, "for the first time a complete means of instantaneous participation in the sights and sounds of the outer world.

"It will be more realistic than a motion picture because it will project the present instead of the past."

Mr. Sarnoff referred particularly here to news and sports events.

The Effect on Politics.

Discussing the effect of television on politics Mr. Sarnoff said that campaign addresses will become more effective when the candidate is both seen and heard and is able to supplement his talk with charts or pictures.

Citing the great increase in the general level of musical taste, thanks to sound radio, Mr. Sarnoff predicted that television would have a similar widening effect in the appreciation of the best in drama, the dance, painting, and sculpture.

"Through television," he said, "coupled with the universal increase in schooling, Americans may attain the highest general cultural level of any people in the history of the world."

Effect on Schools, Churches.

Mr. Sarnoff asserted that television will have a pronounced effect on existing institutions—motion pictures, the theater, schools, and churches.

"The motion picture industry," he said, "may become an important source of supply of recorded programs to television broadcasters. These recorded programs may serve the purposes of program material more conveniently than direct transmission of living actors. Television and motion pictures should stimulate each other.

"With a rising cultural level we may expect also an increase in the number of creative artists working with the materials of the theater. Such artists will be used not only in television; they will find additional outlets for their efforts. We may see a rebirth of local community theaters for the production of legitimate drama, musical performances, and the like."

An Implement for Teaching.

The school systems, Mr. Sarnoff predicted, will make considerable use of television.

"With this medium," he said, "it will become possible for the best teachers in the land to give carefully prepared and illustrated lectures to millions of children simultaneously.

"Church broadcasting will rise to new spiritual levels, for with television the listeners can participate most intimately in the services of the greatest cathedrals; they will not only hear the ministers and the music but see the preacher face to face as he delivers his sermon, and observe directly the solem ceremonies at the altar."

In New Series

Myrna Dee Sergent, outstanding commentator on feminine affairs, who will be heard on a new program on W-G-N from 9:50 to 10 a. m. tomorrow. Her program will be aired Mondays through Fridays. The inaugural program marks Miss Sergent's sixth year in radio.

HELEN BENNER, MARK LOVE ON MELODY PAGEANT

The Pageant of Melody, under the direction of Henry Weber, will present Attilio Baggiore, Mark Love, and Helen Benner in a program of concert music from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m., tomorrow on W-G-N and the Mutual system.

Baggiore will sing "De Miei Bollente Spiriti," from Verdi's "La Traviata." With Miss Benner and the octet, Baggiore will do "Song of India," and "Gypsy Moon."

Marion Schroeder, soprano, and Michael Wilkomirski, violinist, will be featured in the Concert Revue, directed by Mr. Weber, from 9:30 to 10:15 p. m. Thursday on W-G-N and the Mutual network. Miss Schroeder will sing "Voi che Sapete," by Mozart. Wilkomirski will play Mozart's "Concerto No. 5."

LINCOLN, DOUGLAS ROLES ESSAYED BY TWO ACTORS

Studebaker and Mueller have played the rôles of the Great Emancipator and his fiery oratorical rival on three different occasions on "Gems of American Eloquence" over W-G-N and the Mutual network on Friday nights. The program is heard from 10 to 10:15 p. m.

Incidentally, neither Studebaker nor Mueller looks like the character he plays. Studebaker is of average height, while Mueller, who stands well over six feet, is the antithesis in appearance of the "little giant," Douglas. Another Lincoln-Douglas debate will be heard on the program in the near future, Walliser said.

PLAN NBC-BELL TEST OF STATIC FREE BROADCASTS

Ask Approval of FCC for New Type of Station.

New York, Aug. 19 [Special].—Plans are being made for extensive testing here of "staticless" or "frequency modulation" broadcasting by NBC and the Bell Telephone laboratories as soon as the Federal Communication Commission gives the necessary construction permits.

Staticless broadcasting, compared with the usual kind of broadcasting known as "amplitude," has become synonymous in the last few years with the name of Maj. Edwin H. Armstrong, radio inventor and professor of electrical engineering at Columbia university.

Program Is Always Clear.

As demonstrated by Maj. Armstrong with his special radio transmitter, W2XMN, at Alpine, N. J., and special receivers designed for the system, atmospherics virtually have ceased to be a problem. The program is always clear.

On numerous occasions during thunderstorms he has shown that a program can remain clear despite the noises of nature. The Armstrong method is confined to operation on the short wave lengths because a wider track or roadway, available only on short waves, is required to gain the desired result of high quality and noiseless reception.

On Empire State Tower.

If the FCC approves, a 1,000-watt frequency modulation station will be installed on one of the top floors of the Empire State building, and operated through a series of tests to uncover what advantages the method may hold for broadcasting, according to O. B. Hanson, chief engineer. The NBS channel will be 42.6 megacycles, adjacent to that of W2XMN at Alpine. The Bell station will be installed at Whippany, N. J., where a corps of engineers will study the "frequency modulation" problem in all its angles, independently of the work of other experimenters, it was said.

TOBY TAYLOR TO BE FEATURED IN ROMANCE HOUR

A program of hit tunes will be presented on "Romance in Rhythm," conducted by Harold Stokes, with Curt Massey and Toby Taylor as vocalists, from 9:30 to 10 p. m. Wednesday on W-G-N and Mutual network.

Miss Taylor will sing "I Poured My Heart Into a Song," and with the chorus will do, "Can't Help Lovin' Dat Man," from "Show Boat." Massey will sing "Day In and Day Out" and "The Lamp Is Low."

The Four Grenadiers will sing "Love with a Capital You," and the orchestra will play "Drums in My Heart," "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Dancing in the Dark," and "Wer're Off to See the Wizard."

WAY BACK HOME IS THEME FOR MIDDAY SERVICE

"Way Back Home" is to be the inspirational theme of the W-G-N Midday Service for this week. The program is broadcast daily except Saturday and Sunday at 12:35 p. m. from W-G-N studios under the direction of Dr. John L. Dickson. Speakers for the week are:

Monday—Rev. Charles A. Carman, Morgan Park Baptist church.
Tuesday—Rev. W. Reid Hammond, St. James Episcopal church.
Wednesday—Rev. Fr. Raymond O'Connor, St. Catherine of Genoa Catholic church.
Thursday—W. E. J. Gratz of the Epworth Herald.

Safely Lose Ugly Fat

If you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—First... eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second.. mix ¾ of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with ¼ of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strict diet lists, strenuous exercises or taking drugs. Yet!—in a test conducted by Dr. Damrau of New York, with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of seven pounds was registered per month. This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch. Eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always made from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.

Irene Rich, lovely star of the screen and radio, now past 40, weighs the same as she did at 16. She recommends the easy Welch way to reduce.

Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice
If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add ⅓ water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

Bathroom Remodeled

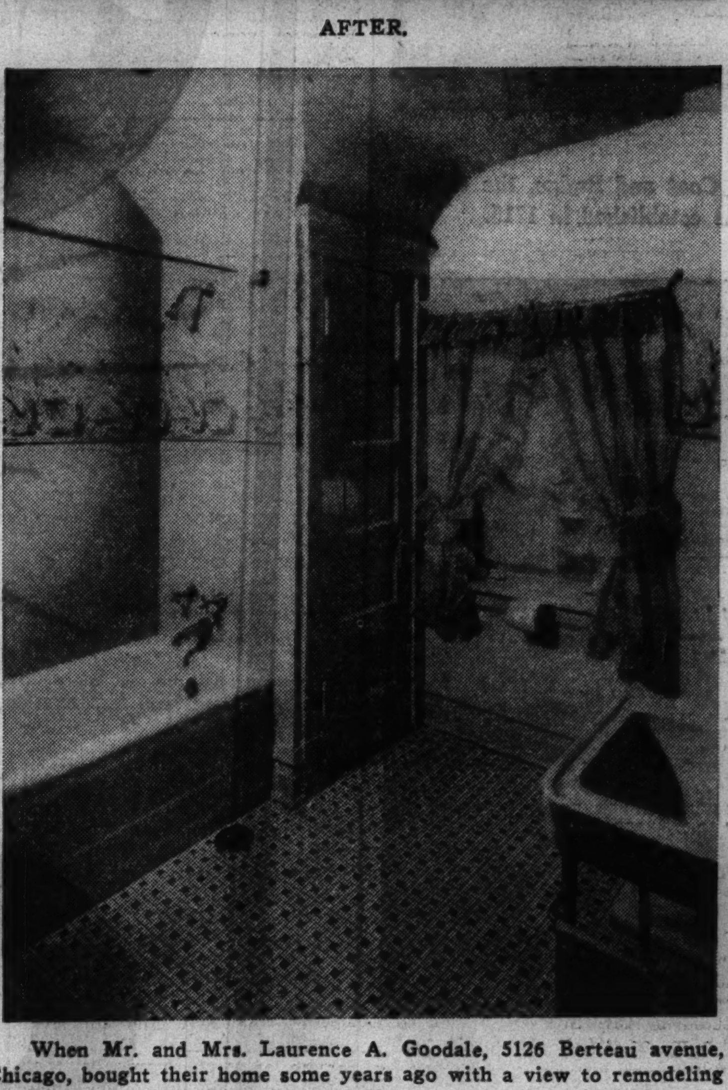
AFTER.



When Mr. and Mrs. Laurence A. Goodale, 5126 Berteau avenue, Chicago, bought their home some years ago with a view to remodeling it, a host of practical and engaging changes were made, including this bathroom on the second floor. On its walls there is now an attractively patterned, washable wall cloth. All fixtures are new, including tub with over-the-head shower.

SAFETY FOLDER ACCENTS COMMON DRIVING FAULTS

Motor Club Has Police Aid in Campaign.

As part of the state-wide "Keep to the Right" campaign, members of the south area council of the Chicago Motor club last week started distribution of folders designed by the safety bureau of the club to inform motorists of unsafe driving practices which cause accidents.

Using graphic illustrations and descriptions, the folder demonstrates common driving faults which cause accidents. It also explains legal hand signals for use when changing directions or stopping.

Five Points Stressed.

Included in the pamphlet are these points of advice:

Keep to right; drive in right hand lanes.

Use middle lanes for passing only.

Pull over on signal.

Stay within your lane; don't straddle lane lines.

Don't drive so slowly as to block trafic.

The drive was instituted by the motor club in coöperation with James P. Allman, commissioner of police; Thomas J. O'Brien, Cook county sherif; James B. Kerr, chief of park district police, and Walter Williams, head of the state highway police.

Frank X. Rydzewski, secretary of the south area council, said affiliated organizations would distribute the folders to their members. Police will hand others to trafic code violators with the type of error indicated by a check mark.

Points Out Dangers.

"We realize that many motorists violate safe driving practices without appreciating how dangerous such a practice is, Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, said in turning the folders over to the area council official. "We feel that motorists who read these folders will understand how to avoid these common mistakes."

Blue Island K. of C. Unit to Picnic at Sandy Hill

The Blue Island Knights of Columbus will picnic today at Sandy Hill grove, 135th street and Harlem avenue. Games, races, cards for the women, and refreshments have been arranged.

LONG PLANNING PAYS DIVIDENDS IN REBUILT HOME

Couple Buys House; Then Maps Changes.

BY LOUISE BARGELT.

There is just enough truth in the old bromide that you have to live with a house before you really know it, to keep it alive and in circulation. There's a glimmer of fact back of it, but more and more people are aware of the fundamentals of good house construction before they buy or build, and fortified in their selections and decisions by a wealth of first hand observation and a carefully compiled fund of information as to what they want and why they want it.

This was true in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence A. Goodale, 5126 Berteau avenue, who bought their home some years ago with definite intent to remodel it and definite knowledge of what they were going to do for it, once they owned it.

As one looks at the many changes wrought in this home, it is interesting to observe the number of them which fall into the category of "fall improvements," scheduled for action all around us, now that September is close.

New Heating Plant.

There was the original living room with its glazed in porch. This room was enlarged to an approximate overall of 18 by 20 feet by throwing living room and porch into one large room.

There was the old basement heating plant which was entirely changed, including new recessed radiators with grilles in the living quarters of the home, and installation of automatic heat to eliminate hand-firing.

New ceilings were built in all the rooms on the first floor. An old pantry went the way of unwanted things, and in its place apeared a small breakfast room adjacent to a completely modernized kitchen. And on the second floor a bathroom lost all of its old fixtures and decorations. Now it is all modern, with graciously patterned wall cloth on the walls and a built-in tub of white porcelain enamel on sturdy cast iron with over-the-head shower attachment.

And last the exterior walls of the house, which were of stucco, were given a new coat of paint and the house roof was insulated for greater weather resistance all year round.

Feels Insulation Pays.

Certainly this roof insulation was not the least of the changes, according to Mrs. Goodale, who has definite ideas on insulation and its value.

"If I were building a new house of my own," she said, "there's one thing I would have above everything else. I'd have the house insulated as thoroughly as possible, according to present understanding of insulating methods! I'd see to that before I decided on anything else, and no matter what it cost. Then I'd budget my other expenses accordingly. Comparison of fuel bills between those who live in insulated houses and those who don't proves the worth of insulation so emphatically."

All of which is true beyond any argument. True, too, that insulation pays for itself in fuel saved over a given period of years. And equally true that an already built house can be insulated adequately.

Several Types Needed.

There are five distinct ways of blocking heat escape from your house. Heat can find outbound trafic through your roof, your window glass, the cracks around your doors and window frames, and through your house walls and floors.

If you wish to stop that outgoing trafic through your walls you can use one of several types of insulation. Among these are the rigid insulations, the flexible, the fill or the reflective.

To eliminate heat losses through the cracks around the windows and doors there is weather stripping. For any loose joints between window frames and walls there is caulking.

Storm windows or double glazing can be used to block heat loss through your window glass. And glass bricks, which are a young member of the house material family, have a certain insulating value all their own. They are also a help in solving the problem of moisture condensation.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, Aug. 21.

Strawflowers are excellent for bouquets. The homegrown flowers must be properly cured, which means cutting in the bud stage and carefully drying. If cut when in full bloom the flowers are not as attractive as when in bud. The helichrysum is the largest and has shades of yellow and red. Pyrethrum sprays will control the aster blister beetle. Hand picking will also keep them under control when few plants are grown. Spraying is best on large areas. Sow some of the double hollyhocks now, thin the young plants, and a fine growth may be expected next season. If good plants of geranium are wanted for winter blooming continue to snip off the flower stems that push rapidly ahead.

Tuesday, Aug. 22.

Keep digging out weeds that appear in the lawn. A half hour's work each day will rid the yard of the most persistent weed. Arsenate of lead sprayed over weeds or wherever grasshoppers feed will soon kill them. Ants are difficult to eradicate and no matter what is used to kill them the work should be done according to schedule until all disappear. If nests are seen take an oil can and squirt a little carbon bisulphide into them and the ants will leave. Five pounds of arsenate of lead mixed with a bushel of fine moist sand or soil applied to 1,000 square feet of lawn area will kill grubs, beetles, and earthworms. A good watering should follow the application. In preparing a new lawn the same amount of arsenate of lead should be worked into the upper three or four inches four or five days before sowing. No attacks should follow for several years.

Wednesday, Aug. 23.

Pansies can yet be sown. Make a fine seedbed and keep the soil moist. Shade should be given until the seed germinates. Transplant when large enough to handle. Protect during winter with coarse material, not too light or too heavy. They like cool conditions. Buy a good strain. Good rock plants are the dwarf iris such as iris cristata and iris pumila in blue and yellow shades. They also are useful for edging perennial beds or for massing. Most irises need commercial foods instead of organic manures. Get the bulb orders in for early delivery. If the location is adapted to naturalizing bulbs the best kinds for the purpose are crocus, lily of the valley, grape hyacinth, squills, snowdrops, trilliums, daffodils, and glory of the snow. They should be scattered around by hand and planted where they fall without regularity if natural effects are obtained. If planted in sod, it should be lifted, the bulbs placed and the sod replaced.

Thursday, Aug. 24.

Gladiolus thrip seem to attack the plants in great numbers unless checked. A remedy that is effective is to mix one rounded teaspoonful of Paris green with two pounds of brown sugar and add three gallons of water. Spray thoroughly. Dust roses, chrysanthemums and other mildew affected plants with sulphur.

Friday, Aug. 25.

Cherries and peaches are budded at this season. The method may be learned by consulting garden books and bulletins. Layering the tips of black raspberries is an easy way to increase the stock. Many kinds of plants can be increased by this method. To obtain a good, vigorous growth and abundant fruit on raspberries and blackberries, cut out the old shoots now. Sow the vacant or unused lot with a cover crop, such as rye, millet, buckwheat, crimson clover, or hairy vetch. Crops of this kind will keep down the weeds and when plowed under will add humus to the soil.

Saturday, Aug. 26.

The standard fungicide for blight on tomatoes, potatoes, celery, and other plants is Bordeaux mixture. It may be obtained ready to mix with water. Sow a package of lettuce seed in a frame for a late crop. Cut back tomato plants to enable the fruit to have more light. It will ripen better and more uniformly. If cabbage heads begin to crack, bend the plants over until the roots break on one side. The growth will be checked. When cutting gladioli leave two or more leaves.

Rinso now washes more clothes than ever—

thanks to its new "Suds-Booster"

● You'll be amazed at how much more suds the new richer Rinso gives, thanks to the new "suds-booster." That means you can wash more clothes with the same amount of Rinso. A quick soaking in Rinso's active suds gets clothes dazzling white—washable colors bright and gay—often in as little as 10 minutes. Yet Rinso is safe for overnight soaking! And if you own a washing machine remember this: Not one—not just a few—but the makers of 33 famous washers recommend Rinso. New Rinso is easy as ever on hands. So for brighter, whiter washes, easier wash days, try the new 1940 Rinso. Comes in 3 sizes: Regular, LARGE, GIANT.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's
Technicolor Triumph!

JUDY GARLAND
(as Dorothy)

Whirl with Dorothy from the everyday on the black wings of a tornado—to the mystic Land of Oz! See an old lady knitting on a cloud; a cow milked sky-high!

In Munchkinland, you meet Toto, the wonder dog, and the White Witch (Billie Burke), who may give you magic slippers like Dorothy's to take you to the Land of Oz!

FRANK MORGAN
(as the Wizard of Oz)

Meet the harum-scarum Scarecrow. Hear him sing his sorrowful song, "If I Only Had a Brain!"

Dance down the Yellow Brick Road with Dorothy and the Scarecrow; thru orchards of apple trees which pick their fruit and throw it, too!

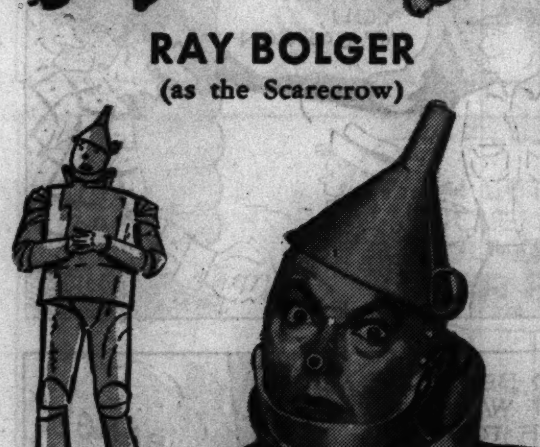
Greet the rusty Tin Man. Oil him up a bit so he can creak out his sad tale—"If I Only Had a Heart!" (Only the Wizard can grant it... and the Black Witch is determined that he shall never get it!)

RAY BOLGER
(as the Scarecrow)

Laugh at the plaintive Cowardly Lion—in need of courage. He's even afraid of Toto, the dog! Listen to him sing, "If I Only Had the Nerve!"

Signs of danger mean nothing to the fearless three—so instead of turning back, they plunge on!

Don't let the Black Witch (Margaret Hamilton) and her guards, the Winged Monkeys and the Giant Winkies head you off! Just beyond is the Emerald City—and the Wizard of Oz who makes every wish come true.



JACK HALEY
(as the Tin Woodman)

BERT LAHR
(as the Cowardly Lion)

Sing and whistle these gay, tuneful Arlen and Harburg song hits: "Over the Rainbow", "We're Off to See the Wizard", "The Merry Old Land of Oz", "Ding Dong"!... You'll never forget them once you hear them sung 'midst scenes of eye-filling spectacle by stars of stage and screen and a chorus of 300 voices.

Screenplay by Noel Langley, Florence Ryerson and Edgar Allan Woolf. From the Book by L. Frank Baum. A VICTOR FLEMING Production. Produced by MERVYN LE ROY. Directed by VICTOR FLEMING.

Day by Day on the Farm

By Bob Becker

Berries Are Ripe.

Aug. 19, 1939.

WITH wild blackberries now ripening in the woods on the Du Page county farm, some of the farm women have busy days ahead of them. Of all the wild fruits and berries on the farm, none is more highly prized than the blackberry for making preserves. Fortunately there is one patch that produces fruit early in the season and another that ripens its berries in August.

One of the young women on the farm already has put up forty-two jars of blackberry preserves from the early crop and now she is ready to pick berries of the late crop. Last year we missed seeing the blackberry bushes when the berries were ripe. So when the flockmaster told us the other day that the fruit was almost ready to be picked we decided to visit it. He told us how to get a line on the berry patch by going into the woods from a big poplar tree which stands alone at the edge of the oak timber. We found the place without any difficulty. The plants occupy a natural opening among the oak trees, so they get lots of sunlight. Some of them are 6 feet high and thus form an impenetrable thorny barricade.

Many Just Ripening.

We found many of the plants just ripening their large juicy berries. But for every ripe sweet blackberry that we saw [or ate!] there were fifty still a dark red in color. These should ripen within a few days.

One of the young women who has quite a reputation for her ability to make jellies and preserves was making apple sauce when we were on the farm. We could catch the fragrance of the fruit on her kitchen stove when we were outside in the yard. But to make real apple jelly of a delicious flavor she declines to use the domesticated fruit. She says the wild fruit is much better for jelly than the sweeter apples from the orchard, so she's waiting until the wild crabs in the woods are ripe.

The farm families should be able to stock their fruit cellars with plum preserves and plum jelly this year. There is a good crop of this wild fruit on the farm. We inspected a couple of trees with fruit so nearly ripe that it may be picked within a few days.

Young Opossum Caught.

The big box traps which were set in the game bird yard to catch prowling animals first bagged a grown opossum. When this animal was caught alive the boys were sure that they had the culprit that killed a bantam hen and they expected to get no more animals in the traps. But one of the box traps picked up a second four-footed prowler . . . a small, immature opossum. This little one was so young that he couldn't have done much damage to the birds even if he'd had a chance.

When birds have been living in a certain place on the farm long enough to call that place home, it's not easy to persuade them to live somewhere else. This week it's the white swans that are acting up because they have been moved. The two grown birds and their cygnets were taken from Half Moon pond [now drained] to the big pond. They marched back to their old home pond the next morning. Again the flockmaster transferred them to the big pond. He's had to confine them in a large wire enclosure in order to keep them there. He was saying the other day that, if the swans had half a chance, they'd get out of their present quarters and go right back to their old home.

Save the Difference

Commonwealth's rate is less on all loans than the maximum rate permitted by law. You do not have to be an "executive" or have a "special" credit standing to qualify for OUR reduced rate. Commonwealth's monthly rate of 2½% on loan balance of $150 or less and only 2% on loan balances above applies to ALL TYPES AND CLASSES OF LOANS. Any one who can make regular payments can qualify; there is no discrimination. EVERYBODY GETS THIS SAME RATE. Of course persons whose incomes are above average can afford to make larger payments and thus make substantial reductions in their loan cost.

No credit inquiries of friends or relatives. Applications received by personal call, letter, or telephone will receive immediate attention.

"Mary would never say so, but our house is too big to handle now that all of our children are married. We decided to rent a small suite for the two of us. We found just what we wanted by reading the offers in the Tribune want ad section."

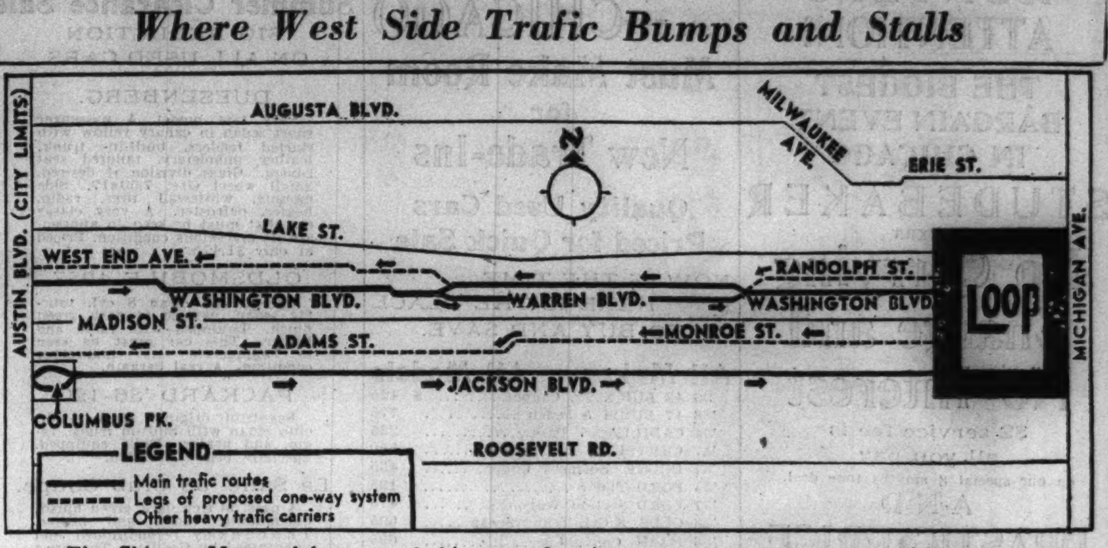
Are you looking for a new experience in comfortable living? The room, housekeeping suite, hotel apartment, or boarding house which offers the service you want at the rent you want to pay, can be easily found by consulting the Tribune want ad section.

Because they get better results, want ad users place more total want advertising in the Tribune than in all other Chicago newspapers combined.

SERVING CHICAGO FOR 92 YEARS

MOTORS—TRAFIC—HIGHWAYS

Where West Side Trafic Bumps and Stalls



The Chicago Motor club prepared this map of main routes of rush hour automobile travel to and from the west side, center of the city's accident and congestion problem. It shows the overloaded boulevards and some of the streets carrying the overflow. It also shows routes suggested for one way trafic systems for use both before and after ultimate construction of superhighways.

LINES OF 1940 AUTO MODELS WILL BE CLEANER

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

What will the 1940 automobiles be like, is a question now being asked by the American motoring public. It is still too early to give many details, although the first showings of some of the models give a clue as to what may be expected.

A number of companies already have started to build the 1940 cars. Others are soon to start, as dealers' stocks of the 1939 models are beginning to get smaller. A few manufacturers are continuing to make the 1939 cars, but in reduced numbers.

Extension of Streamlining.

Based on the four or five cars whose 1940 models have been more or less exposed to the public view, we may expect the average 1940 car to have the following changes over the 1939 models:

Appearance—There will be an extension of the streamlining. Lines will be cleaner. One prominent make, whose lines have changed little for many years, will be brightened through a liberal use of chromium. Ornamental grille work at the cat walk [which extends across the front of the car horizontal with the front fender] will continue to be popular.

Interior—The interior fittings will be more elaborate. Seats will be more comfortable, cushions being either of rubber or small springs. The ventilation in some of the cars having their own systems will be improved. Interiors of a number of models will be much more roomy than in the 1939 cars.

Engines—Changes in the satisfactory engines used in the 1939 models will largely be refinements to give better service and greater economy. The horsepower of a few will be stepped up.

Safety—Signals indicating the direction of a turn and operated by a button at the steering wheel probably will be more generally used. A new headlight promises better lighting for night driving. Improved safety glass, which gives greater vision and is more resilient, will be another improvement.

Use of Fluid Drive May Be Extended.

What about the fluid drive, a new method of power transmission introduced on one de luxe line, late last year? This system does away with gear shifting in ordinary driving. This is one question still to be answered, although there are reports in Detroit that its use may be extended to a number of models selling at much lower prices than the car on which it was brought out last year.

NEWS AND VIEWS

The Ford Motor company recently installed a spectacular "water pit" test to which the new Ford and Mercury cars are subjected before being approved for manufacture. The "water pit," which is located at the company's testing grounds near Dearborn, Mich., is so large that a one lane concrete highway dips into it. Cars may be driven through it at speeds as high as 70 miles an hour. The pit was built to permit the study of the effect of water on brakes, to check the tightness of underbody construction, to determine to what extent the car is under control when it strikes water suddenly at high speed and to guide engineers in protecting ignition systems against flooding.

Joseph D. Burke, one of the best known figures in the automobile industry, has been named vice-president in charge of sales of the Federal Motor Truck company. Burke, who entered the automobile industry with Studebaker in 1909, resigned last March as director of sales of the Dodge truck division of the Chrysler corporation.

Ray Fussell has been appointed as merchandising manager of the Nash motors division of the Nash-Kelvinator corporation, W. A. Blees, general sales manager, announced. His first experience in the industry was as a retail salesman. He has worked with a number of automobile companies. William J. Rutledge was named as assistant merchandising manager.

Production of spark plugs by the Electric Auto-Lite company, Toledo, in the first six months of this year has shown a gain of 80 per cent over the first six months of 1938, Frank A. Nealon, sales manager of the company's merchandising division, states. In April 1937 production was at the rate of 6,000 spark plugs a day, he said, and in April 1939 it had increased to 60,000 a day.

The Lincoln Park Buick company recently opened a new and larger used car shop at 750 Diversey boulevard. Opening of the premises has increased the company plant facilities 50 per cent, according to Barney Sheehan, vice president.

VOICE OF TRAFIC

WEST SIDE SUPERHIGHWAY.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Conceding that as C. R. T. says that North avenue is the superhighway west of Chicago, it can be brought southeast from Elmhurst on Lake street to meet the trafic of Roosevelt road and Butterfield road in the vicinity of Maywood. Thence take the most suitable street between Chicago avenue and Madison street for a superhighway route to the loop.

This would serve the entire population of the west side and all of the western suburbs. WEST CHICAGOAN.

WOULD BAN HORNS.

Chicago, Aug. 13.—Each two years there are more Americans killed by autos in this country than were American soldiers killed during the world war.

It is about time we pay less attention to some of the political ballyhoo about impending European or Asiatic wars and do something about a problem that is already a ghastly reality. The problem is so great that a permanent federal commission should be established to combat the evil.

Most people believe the enormous number of auto casualties can and will be reduced. The many trafic laws and regulations have done much toward keeping accidents from swelling beyond their already enormous figure. But, I believe, law agencies have failed to take steps toward controling the greatest single contributing factor causing auto accidents: the horn.

The horn has become such a menace in accidents that many sane drivers, and most all pedestrians, would welcome the abolishment of it. Quite a number of chronic horn blasters are psychopathic cases and should be picked up for observation. They believe all responsibility ceases after blowing the horn.

I have driven a postal truck off and on for many years through the streets of Chicago. The type of our work necessitates the most varied kinds of driving. Congestion on narrow residential streets sometimes forces us to park on the left side in order to make a delivery. Occasionally we are compelled to back out of alleys when forward progress is blocked.

Expediency many times compels the making of U turns in secluded sections in order to conform to a fairly strict daily schedule. And in no instance in all these years have I encountered a situation where the horn could not have been dispensed with. Care and courtesy are better for all concerned.

I am giving myself a little test on the horn. It is five weeks since I have used it and I am getting along the same as usual.

The city council of Chicago should adopt an experimental measure for three months abolishing the horn from autos [excepting fire, police and emergency cars] on the city streets. After that time I venture to say accident reduction would compel the permanent acceptance of the law. THOMAS E. BROGAN.

BE COURTEOUS TO VISITORS.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Why not urge Chicago drivers to be as courteous to out of town drivers as other state drivers are to us while traveling through other sections of the country.

Last night as I was crossing either Erie or Huron street, walking south on the east side of Michigan, the driver of a Texas car was going west and attempting to turn north. Many machines were parked on both sides of the street he was on and trafic was a little confusing—I know because I drive myself.

A Chicago [or Illinois] car was coming south and turning east onto the street the Texas driver was leaving. I will admit that the Texas driver did make a rather wide turn and was in the way of the Illinois driver, who couldn't possibly wait a minute. He yelled very discourteously at the Texas driver: "You're in Illinois now, not in Texas, look where you're going." The Texas driver backed up a little ways [which he would have done just as readily with a courteous request], made a shorter turn north and let the Illinois driver speed on his way.

It rather riled me that a local person should be so discourteous to an outsider—when we are especially inviting outsiders to spend their summers here near the lake. Maybe this letter won't do any good, but I do wish you would prepare some sort of an article—urging a little more courtesy on the part of Chicagoans toward outsiders. I've toured much of the country by automobile and the only place I've met with discourtesy was in New York and Massachusetts—in the latter state, New York drivers. G. E. G.

STREET CARS IMPEDED.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—How about a drive against the motorist and truck drivers who delay the movement of street cars?

The street car is not a lane-straddler nor a weaver of trafic. The number of people carried through our streets on street cars more than equal the number carried by automobile. Our trafic congestions would be much greater and trafic movement much slower were it not for the street car, their passengers being carried in many smaller vehicles. All in all the street car is a boon to the motorist and truck driver.

Something should be done to keep these narrow lanes of trafic, which carry so many thousands of people, free from the slow poke, the Sunday driver, the window shopper, and the neckers. How about the elimination of left turns at many intersections along car routes? W. G. ECHOLS.

WRANGLES DELAY TRAFIC RELIEF ON WEST SIDE

BY HAL FOUST.

West siders, in their intramural wrangles over the design and location for an ultimate superhighway, have denied themselves the degree of trafic relief available for prompt inauguration. For years the organized promoters of a plan to sell depressed realty to the public for a broad parkway have fought other proposals designed to lessen the delays and hazards of motor travel west from the loop.

These promoters were active ten years ago in the defeat of a $20,000,000 bond issue for the construction of a west side elevated highway. Without their opposition, the fast and safe route might be in operation today, with the bonds part of the Chicago park district's refinanced debt which includes bonds voted by Lincoln park and by south park for outer drive developments. These promoters, by putting pressure on aldermen, have also blocked plans for one-way trafic systems, of value in accident prevention and in expediting travel both before and after the completion of a superhighway.

Partly as a result of obstruction tactics, the west side today has the most dangerous and the slowest trafic facilities of any neighborhood in the city. And these tactics can have no influence in attaining their objective if the city and county administrations follow their announced intentions of letting engineers design and locate the future superhighways in accordance with trafic and economic requirements and regardless of political log rolling.

Make Preliminary Studies.

Engineers are making preliminary studies for the routes to be built with $60,000,000 of notes anticipating the city's and county's future gasoline tax revenue, as authorized by the legislature this year. This enabling legislation must be validated by the Supreme court before any of this money can be spent.

There's a long time to wait before a superhighway will be carrying express trafic through the west side. It will probably be next spring before there is a Supreme court decision. If the plans finally adopted call for any considerable acquisition of right of way, it may be years before the improvement is completed. It took sixteen years to widen Michigan avenue from Randolph street to Oak street, which involved condemnation of a comparatively few parcels of realty.

Boulevards Jammed.

In the meantime, Jackson and Washington boulevards are jammed during morning and evening rush hours with heavy overflows onto other east and west streets lacking even the protection of stop signs. Augusta boulevard carries a full load, although lacking in a convenient approach from the east. Noble street, one of the expedients used as such an approach, has been torn up and motorists from the central business district have been worming their ways to Augusta via Erie street and Milwaukee avenue.

Other motorists, more from desperation than by choice, have been dodging the elevated railway pillars to use Lake street while the boulevards have been jammed. Others have been dodging through the cluttered parking in the Randolph street market to reach the one-way boulevard west of Union park.

Monroe Gets Part of Travel.

Other drivers have been squeezing between street cars and trucks in Madison street in preference to being stalled on one of the inadequate boulevards. Monroe street, with its heavy trucks and with its street cars east of Morgan street, has also received part of the through travel that sifts through the west side.

Roosevelt road has a wide pavement that could carry more than its present usage were parking regulated. The location of Roosevelt, however, is too far south since a bulk of the trafic is destined to points north of Madison street.

Still available to the west side are the plans for one-way streets. The value of such trafic control has been established by the operation of Warren and Washington boulevards between Garfield and Union parks. This present system could be extended east by the use of Randolph street in combination with Washington. It would be extended west by using West End avenue with Washington. Another proposed one-way system would use Jackson boulevard for east bound trafic and Monroe street and Adams street for west bound.

"These one-way systems of comparatively small cost," said Charles M. Hayes, president of the Chicago Motor club, "would be of great service to through travel pending the ultimate construction of the superhighways. Also they would contribute to safety and to convenience of local trafic after the superhighways are built. One-way trafic is better for pedestrians as well as for motorists."

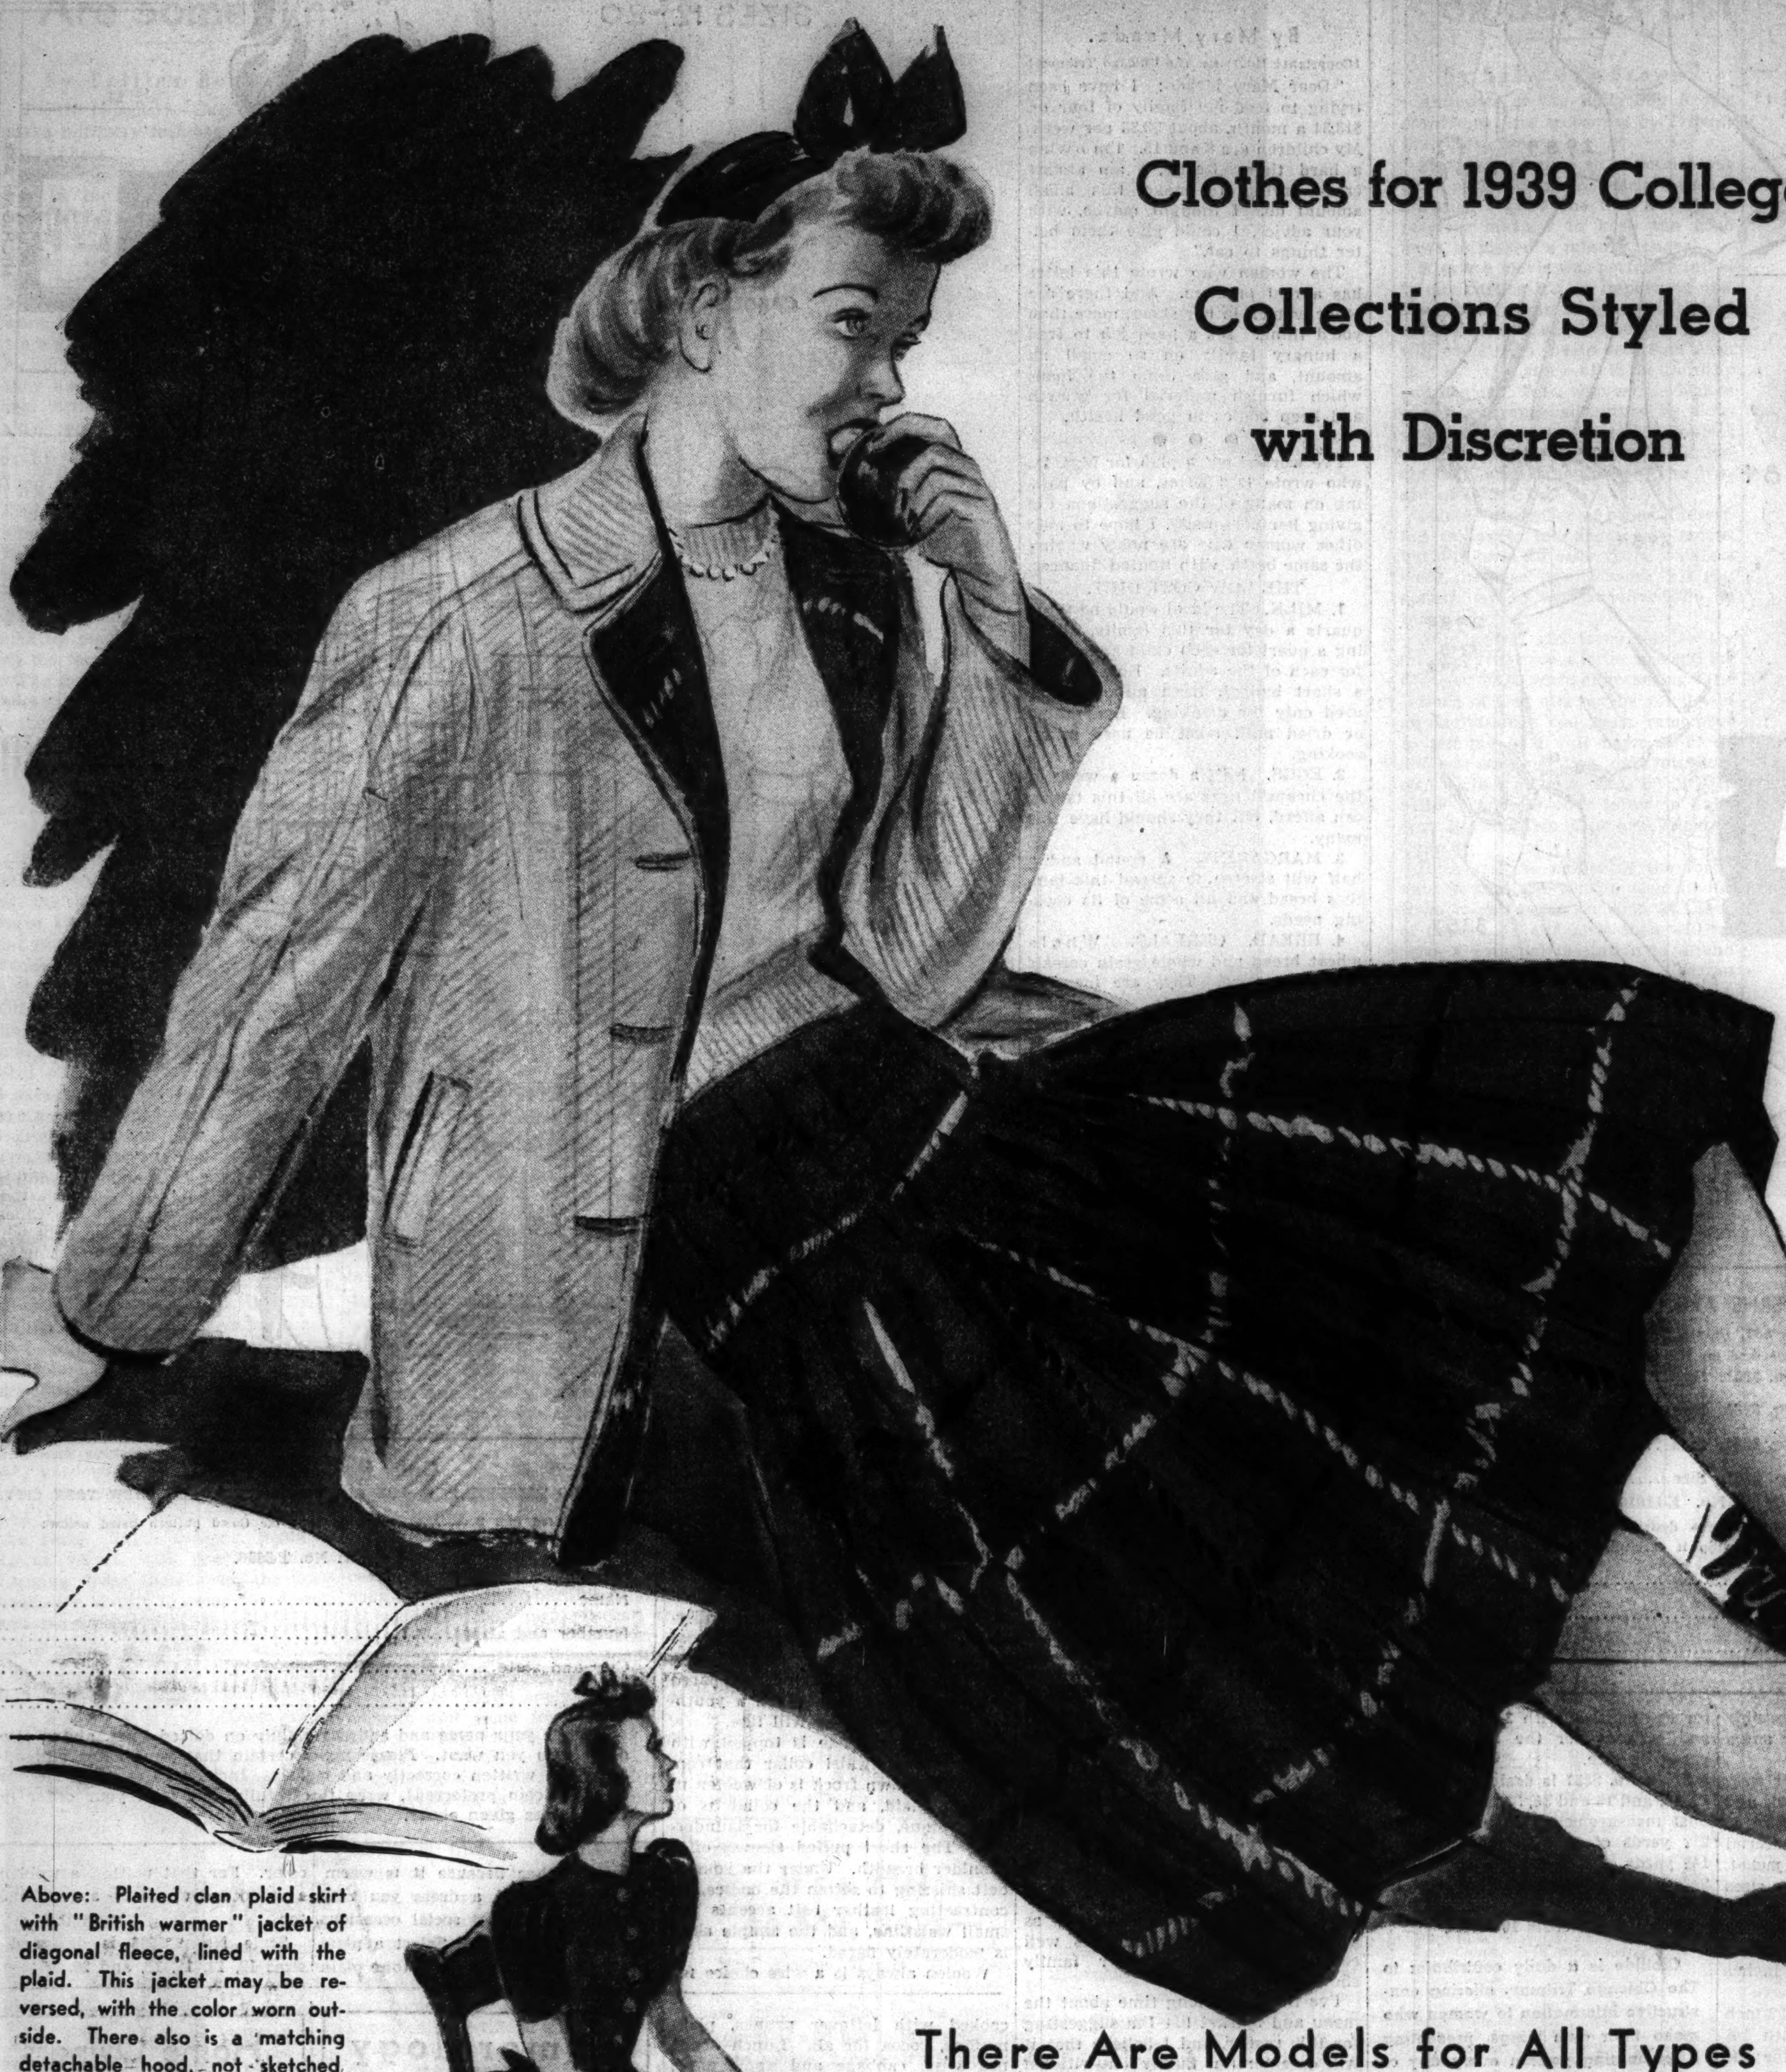
Clothes for 1939 College Collections Styled with Discretion



Right: College wardrobe "must," a combination of jacket, sweater, and skirt. Both jacket and skirt are of tweed, and the sweater harmonizes. There are skirts available to match virtually every colored nub in the jacket, and the sweaters are specially dyed.

Left: Dance dresses for the college girls are wide and romantically picturesque. Jewel tones vie with black for top honors. This model, in a soft shade, has contrasting velvet ribbon bows, and a bustle bow adds fashion interest to the back. Many of the smartest frocks for campus wardrobes have the bustle or the bustle silhouette.

Above: Plaited clan plaid skirt with "British warmer" jacket of diagonal fleece, lined with the plaid. This jacket may be reversed, with the color worn outside. There also is a matching detachable hood, not sketched.

There Are Models for All Types of Schools, Girls, and Purses

By RHEA SEEGER

PROBABLY no other shopping expedition, unless it be the selection of a trousseau, causes as much interest and excitement as the preview shopping binges for the college clothes featured in all the shops and stores weeks before registration day. Each year the college shops open to welcome the bewildered student and her parents. These shops are staffed with counselors, veterans at the game of assembling what it takes to make a perfect first impression. There isn't a school or college that hasn't a fashion-wise representative, a girl who has been through it all, one who knows the fads and fancies, the classics and the flops.

The school in which you plan to spend the important next four years absorbing education, tasting the fun of being "on your own" for the first time in your life, where you'll make impressions that will last a lifetime—such a stronghold of fun, work, and living rates the best of expertly planned wardrobes. Coats or suits, socks or stockings, hats or peasant kerchiefs, heeled footgear or saddle shoes, sweaters or jackets, slacks or dirndls, all this is tremendously important. When you live from Monday to Friday in the company of hundreds of other girls you need a much simpler wardrobe, scrub your face until it shines, use just a shadow of lipstick, and go from dawn till dusk in sweaters and skirts. Some places you can even live in slacks.

But if you join the surging crowds of both men and women you'll dress pretty much to impress the men—higher heels on the shoes, stockings plus decorative socks, simple but effective daytime dresses in wool and silk.

Here are some of their findings, a "must" for every wardrobe, girls' school or college, east, west, south, or north—a swanky reversible topcoat, natural gabardine lined with tweed or plaid wool. This is the coat for sloppy weather, the best friend in sunshine or rain, for class, for spectator sports wear, and general daytime use. Next, just as many sweaters as can be packed, with every wardrobe boasting at least one Brooks sweater—more if possible! Next, big plaid-patterned jackets or contrasting colored models to wear with separate skirts.

This year's crop of skirts features flared affairs, gored models plaited in the wide kilt plaits, and the newest pet of the coeds, the bias-cut plaited skirt. Clan plaids are star attractions in large, bold, bright, authentic colors.

Dresses for "rushing" teas are of silk or velvet, and these are the afternoon dresses, short and full, with black leading the color favorites, then the jewel tones.

Encourage the Child's Love of Rhythm, Music

By Gladys Huntington Bevans.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

With well kept grounds and every sign of its being a spotless little home we slowed up and turned into the drive when we saw the small lighted sign proclaiming GUESTS at its entrance.

After a restful night in the house of the pleasant young couple who had greeted us the previous evening, I woke to hear the unmistakable sounds that are made by a little thing whose mother is trying to keep it quiet. Later, dressed and ready to pay our bill and drive on home, in the living room I came upon a round-eyed small girl of about 2, seated in a big chair surrounded by a furry bear, a gingham dog, one block and a rubber doll. After some very offhand-seeming preliminaries on my part we began to get somewhere and Judy handed me the different playthings in turn. When the furry bear was presented the radio was softly playing a dance tune, so I pranced him gently along the big chair arm in rhythm.

"No—no," denied a young blonde head and the doll was offered, instead, for me to make dance. Intelligent child, I thought, as the mother said, "Judy dances—she loves to. I make it a point to find music that she likes."

Little children naturally love to sing and to dance. Listen to the first apparently tuneless little songs they invent themselves, then the next ones that they hear and follow. If only we all cared enough or knew enough, or were simply willing to take the trouble we could carry the dancing and singing along as our child grows and so help to develop an expression of music in dancing, playing or singing, or perhaps just an appreciation of it. The result? The joy and the satisfaction of a lasting connection all through life with music in some form.

What most often prevents mothers carrying along the spontaneous singing, dancing, or love of music—if they are not musical themselves—is their lack of knowing how to go about doing this, and what music to provide. If there is no one in the family who sings or plays the piano a first thought is to use the radio. With the variety and beauty of music, both in program making and execution, that radio furnishes, it is possible to do a great deal. But obviously it cannot fill the bill for all occasions and uses and ages of children, and on the spur of the moment.

We want the expression of music or our use of it with the children to be as spontaneous as possible—we must fit the music to the moment, or the mood, or prehaps our purpose; not the other way round, which we should have to do if we depended upon radio music entirely. If you play or sing, yourself, you can do this. If not, the next best thing is a phonograph. And if you can afford it, a good one, as a child can become used to poor quality of tone as he can become used to poor speech or poor food.

There are, of course, various sources of help for you if you're interested in this subject. Some nurseries and kindergartens and some progressive public and private schools do a fine job with music for children, and would be able to help you with suggestions as to how you might carry on at home. Good music stores and fine phonograph record stores have classified lists and people who can advise you.

For this column, however, we have done the sort of job that seems best to fit its needs. This is, we have made lists of various sorts, so providing actual titles of song books and phonograph records for home use.

For instance, we have grouped certain songs and music [not records] in this way for all ages:

Rounds.

Jigs and reels.

Negro spirituals.

Carols, and other traditional songs.

Then, we worked up another group of charmingly printed and illustrated books, containing words and simple accompaniments. Among these are, for example, "Our Old Nursery Rhymes," by Willebeek Le Mair and Alfred Moffatt, and "Singing Time," by Coleman and Thorn, developed from work with young children done at Horace Mann and Lincoln schools in New York City.

Also, we found [obtainable for a most modest 5 cents] a pamphlet called "Songs and Rhythms for the Little Child in the Home." You see, this is valuable because it contains suggestions for young mothers, besides giving titles of songs and records.

In this group are also suggestions for older children, such as "Lillibullero," a book of ancient favorite songs, "The Lonesome Cowboy," and too, the "Home and Community Song Book."

In the group of phonograph records the range again is wide in both age and purpose. For that break in the day's doings when perhaps the children lie stretched out on the grass in summer or the floor in winter, either already receptive, or perhaps because you have the idea of quieting them down, there are records to be used just for listening. Fine music it can be, but still within the appreciation of even very young children.

Paderewski's Minuet, so essentially simple, on the violin, and the scherzo from Beethoven's Third Symphony; the "Omaha Indian Game Song" [on the flute], and MacDowell's "To a Humming Bird" are the sort of thing I mean. But perhaps I should give you that varied group in full in the column tomorrow, so you will be able to see the scope and make selections.

We have tried [and I assure you two of us worked long on this examining and sorting] to cover ages and tastes in both boys and girls as comprehensively as possible in making the selections to recommend to you.

Tomorrow as many as possible of the phonograph selections for dancing, singing and listening will be given in the column.

A full three page list of "Songs, Song Books and Music for All Ages" (no phonograph records in this one) is of interest to parents, teachers, and children. Send a large, stamped, addressed envelope for it. Address Mrs. Gladys Bevans, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill.

On the House

By Louise Bargelt

There's a material available which may be described as a cedar type plaster. It has been manufactured for the inner surfaces of closets and storage chests with the view to making such storage spots "less attractive and inviting" to moths. This material is applied with a trowel over any wall surface which provides a sufficient bond and comes packed in twenty-five pound bags, to be mixed with water at time of application. It dries to a natural red color, free from cracks, and the manufacturers claim it to be fireproof, waterproof, and sanitary. If you are building a new house you can apply this material directly over your rough plaster coat.

New efforts and greater strides forward are being made in the home building field with a view to lowering house construction costs. One move toward such a goal is a prefabricated steel stair unit with steel stringers and risers welded into one unit, and oak treads screwed to the risers. Such stairs may be quickly installed by two men, construction time saved and the need of temporary stairs eliminated. If desired, the treads may be of linoleum or asphalt tile or even of steel.

A very neat and potent little air conditioner for summer use has now appeared which sits in the cradle of a window sill and cools and dehumidifies an individual room. It can be plugged into the nearest electrical outlet, being as easy to install as a radio. The dimensions of the cabinet are 23 inches wide, 16¾ inches high, and 9½ inches deep.

Food for 4 on $3.34 a Week? Here's Budget

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1939: By The Chicago Tribune.]

"Dear Mary Meade: I have been trying to feed my family of four on $13.34 a month, about $3.33 per week. My children are 8 and 15. I'm having a hard time. Really, I am almost crazy trying to make this small amount do. I thought maybe, with your advice, I could give them better things to eat."

The woman who wrote this letter has a real problem. And there are other women in her shoes, more than you'd think. It's a hard job to feed a hungry family on so small an amount, and give them the foods which furnish material for growth and keep bodies in good health.

I've worked out a plan for Mrs. D., who wrote this letter, and by passing on many of the suggestions I'm giving her personally, I hope to help other women who are nobly waging the same battle with limited finances.

THE LOW COST DIET.

1. MILK. The ideal would be three quarts a day for this family, allowing a quart for each child and a pint for each of the adults. But, on such a short budget, fresh milk may be used only for drinking. Evaporated or dried milk must be used in all cooking.

2. EGGS. Half a dozen a week of the cheapest eggs are all this family can afford, but they should have this many.

3. MARGARINE. A pound and a half will stretch to spread this family's bread and fill some of its cooking needs.

4. BREAD, CEREALS. Whole wheat bread and whole grain cereals should be used. They are inexpensive and nourishing.

5. MEAT. This family can't afford much meat. When it is used, it must be "stretched," in stews, pies and the like. Beans, dried peas, lentils and cheese, cereal foods such as macaroni, spaghetti and noodles may be used in place of meat.

6. VEGETABLES. Cabbage and carrots should be eaten raw frequently, and may be cooked for variation on other days. Tomatoes should be included as often as possible, canned tomatoes, tomato juice, and fresh tomatoes. Potatoes may be used abundantly.

7. FRUITS. Oranges would be most valuable, but tomatoes must be substituted in so restricted a diet. [Children should have an orange, orange juice, or tomatoes every day for vitamin C.] Fresh fruits whenever financially possible, dried fruits by all means, and canned ones when they are low in price, should be included in the low cost diet.

The planning and marketing problems of a family on such a limited food budget are acute. It will be necessary for the mother to sit down to a table with pencil and pad at least once a week, to plan her menus and make out her grocery list. It will be necessary for her to go from market to market, wherever there are bargains to be found, to compare prices and choose the least expensive foods. She'll have to cut out all but the simplest desserts, and there will be something of monotony in the family diet. But she can prepare the same inexpensive foods in different ways. Rice, for example, may be used in soup, as main dish, and as pudding, and if everything is well cooked and seasoned, her family shouldn't complain.

I've thought a long time about the menu and market list I'm suggesting for this reader, and I believe that it will care for her family's nutritional needs adequately. As soon as it is possible to spend more money, the milk and egg supply should be increased, and there should be more vegetables.

The prices in this list are as of Aug. 11. There may be minor variations to contend with in purchasing the foods at a later time. No allowance is made for sales tax on individual items. If most of the food is bought at one time the tax amount will be reduced, of course.

Campus Modes by a Co-ed

By Carolyn Ramey.

There's just enough scent of fall in the air to make a return to classes seem welcome. I've been busy these last few weeks concocting my campus wardrobe. Many of the models I'm having styled into patterns my fellow co-eds and girls in the business world may use for their own autumn collections. Clothes, to be smart for school wear, should be simple in line. The dress sketched today is a design pared down to essentials, and it's a youthful style I know you will like.

The shoulder yoke is topped with a narrow shirtwaist collar that contrasts. My own frock is of woolen in a faint plaid, and the collar is of white piqué, detachable for laundering. The short puffed sleeves offer shoulder breadth. Under the yoke is deft shirring to soften the bodice. A contrasting leather belt accents the small waistline, and the simple skirt is moderately flared.

Woolen always is a wise choice for campus clothes because it is warm. But if you want a dress you may wear to all sorts of social occasions you may prefer silk. Select a plaid one if you wish, or a jewel tone plain color. For that matter, a woolen in a monotone would be a good choice, too.

Home Owners' Queries

Milwaukee, Wis. [To the Home Building Editor].—We suffer a lot from noises overhead in our apartment and last year substituted an insulating board for ceiling plaster in all our rooms except kitchen and bath. We still hear too much of what goes on over us! What more can we do? K. L.

Answer: To soundproof an apartment is hard, since sounds don't travel through a ceiling alone, but through the entire framework of building. You could make your rooms a little quieter by installing an extra ceiling [use the same type board you now have] on furring strips, and for extra good measure lay heavy felt on both sides of strips. This should help some.

Cedar Rapids, Ia. [To the Home Building Editor].—Is it practical to plan for a wood panelled wall in a new basement recreation room? How would you finish wood? H. K. B.

Answer: Yes, if basement is dry and panelling properly applied. Get expert opinion on both points before you proceed. You can give the wood a natural finish, waxed, or you can stain it or paint it, depending on the type of panelling you use and type of finish you prefer.

Pull the Trigger on Lazy Bowels, and Also Pepsin-ize Stomach!

When constipation brings on acid indigestion, bloating, dizzy spells, gas, coated tongue, sour taste, and bad breath, your stomach is probably loaded up with certain undigested food and your bowels don't move. So you need both Pepsin to help break up fast that rich undigested food in your stomach, and Laxative Senna to pull the trigger on those lazy bowels. So be sure your laxative also contains Pepsin. Take Dr. Caldwell's Laxative, because its Syrup Pepsin helps you gain that wonderful stomach comfort, while the Laxative Senna moves your bowels. Tests prove the power of Pepsin to dissolve those lumps of undigested protein food which may linger in your stomach, to cause belching, gastric acidity and nausea. This is how pepsinising your stomach helps relieve it of such distress. At the same time this medicine wakes up lazy nerves and muscles in your bowels to relieve your constipation. So see how much better you feel by taking the laxative that also puts Pepsin to work on that stomach discomfort, too. Even finicky children love to taste this pleasant family laxative. This Season's Hats Really Are Somethin'

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS [Special].—Hats destined to make millinery fashions this fall are real hats. They're bigger in the head size. When they're high, they're higher than ever. When they're brimmed, they have real brims, and when they are trimmed, they're loaded. The whole idea behind the new French millinery is living space for the hat, as against the restricted areas occupied by our doll size chapeaux, now all too familiar everywhere.

A turban of coral pink.

The new millinery isn't always top-heavy, but there are toques that are actually a foot high, and there are brimmed hats of felt and velvet that could make a queen's parasol without much stretching. In between there are plenty of shapes for conservatives.

The beret is one of these, and it is being revived in a big way in most of the houses. The most thrilling beret I have seen is a sort of Henry the Eighth affair brought out by Schiaparelli, worn plastered over one ear and trimmed with three ostrich tips. Other berets are fat as English muffins and trimmed with lots of ribbon or quills or feather fantasies. Still others are covered with velvet leaves in brilliant fall colors. There are no untrimmed berets around.

High coachman hats, called postillion hats, are another new autumn millinery shape that is shown in Paris. These are modified a bit in shape from the original pattern, and are trimmed with romantic veils, feathers, and ribbons.

Draped turbans that are a follow-up of the flimsy fishnet affairs introduced on the seashore a good two years ago, and a big runner this summer, are important entries in the fall millinery fashions shown here. The new turbans are, however, shaped quite differently. They are wide at the sides and look something like a bull fighter's hat. Velvet brocaded faille silk is what many of them are made of, and they have matching gloves of the same. Rajah turbans, made of Lyons velvet, with jewel pendants hanging from them over the forehead, are shown to wear for dinner and the theater.

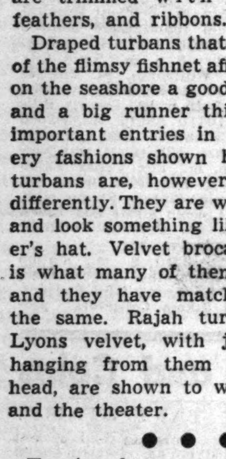
Evening hats get a lot of attention from the milliners, and most of them are so laden with ostrich plumes that a boom for the industry is forecast. Towering plumes in shaded Edwardian colors, such as mauve to gray, robin's egg blue to turquoise, wine to crushed raspberry, cover the dinner toque. Small bouquets of flowers, or ribbon bow knots, play hide and seek among the forest of plumes on these hats.



High turban of red fur.

Very high Scotch caps made of long haired beaver felt come from Suzy and make a bid for youth's attention. One such model is made of pale gray beaver and is trimmed with black velvet ribbon.

There are plenty of brimmed felt hats for sports and rough wear which carry a style message in the flocks of quills that trim them, three or four to a hat. Or they are trimmed with ribbons in two contrasting shades.

Toques for dressy wear are covered with ribbon bows. One hat by Schiaparelli is frankly "royalist," being made of royal blue velvet ribbon mixed with regal gold velvet ribbon bows. Schiaparelli trims many of her practical felt hats in ribbons of these two colors.

Striking trimming for all kinds of hats comes from Agnes. It consists of branches of artificial pine and cedar in natural colors. One hat is made of dark brown antelope felt, and the trimming is pine green. Dark brown, by the way, is a hat color that is all over Paris, and pearly gray is another. The latter is particularly used for trimming and combined more often than not with amethyst.

Schiaparelli's Henry the Eighth beret is made of a black felt that is very shiny and that is called "satin felt." Flat as a flapjack, this beret has, none-the-less, a double brim, and the three ostrich tips, two black and one royal blue, are set into the groove between the upper and lower brims.

The postillion hat that I have seen in all the grade A millinery salons here, and on some first rank heads as well, comes from Agnes. It is made of a vivid sapphire blue antelope felt and ostrich plumes in the same color are placed high at the front.

Through the Looking Glass

Cleansing, lubricating, and toning are the three simple rules that pave the way to acquiring and keeping a skin that is clear, healthy, and lovely in texture. Followed faithfully, they play a big part in conquering many skin problems and constitute an inexpensive form of beauty insurance.

If the great magician should suddenly appear and grant us one wish in payment for our good deed of the day, in a generous moment we think we'd ask that every woman in the world could have a lovely skin. And to ourself, we'd say over and over that we hoped she would also be endowed with the knowledge of caring for it properly.

We find that women are inclined to overlook the fact that the condition and texture of the skin itself are the foundation necessary to acquire that peaches and cream effect; that luminous quality; that youthful radiance or whatever they want to call the thing they strive for. They seem to think that no matter what condition their skin is in, they can, with no preliminary care, apply a coat of makeup and come forth a dazzling beauty. They wouldn't expect a coat of paint on a rough, splintered board to cover up all imperfections without first preparing a smooth, workable surface; and yet, they do expect a new coat of powder and makeup to hide all the flaws.

Skin problems are many and varied, but most of them can be corrected and controled by the religious adherence to a few fundamental rules that are simple and add up to three. Briefly, they are cleansing, lubricating, and toning. We sometimes wonder if it is a perverse streak in women that prevents them from following them. But we discover from the various pleas that come across this department's desk that, simple as they are, women still are puzzled about why and in what order they should be used. The answer is simply this: The cleansing will keep the skin clean; the lubricating will keep it soft; and the toning will help keep it firm.

First: Use your favorite cleansing method to remove all dirt, grime, and stale makeup. Do this at least once a day, and oftener if you have the opportunity. Do it very thoroughly at night.

Second: Keep your skin soft, and help ward off the unwanted lines, by using the creams or oils that please you most. Do this after your nightly cleansing.

Third: Tone your skin by improving the circulation. A complexion brush used in the cleansing process is one way, and the cold water rinses after cleansing should not be overlooked. The use of a skin freshener of the proper strength is another; and the application of a mask once or twice a week is still another.

With the help of the ever-necessary proper diet, sufficient rest, fresh air, and exercise, the average skin will respond beautifully to this kind of treatment, and it is the answer to the women who daily ask what to do for blackheads, enlarged pores, oily, dry or sluggish looking skins. It isn't the answer for the "sick" skin, the skin with an acne condition. A good skin specialist knows this answer, and is the one to consult.

It's a Help to Me, Says—

Mrs. Joseph Moreci, 2136 North Clifton avenue, Chicago: When I have leftover coffee in the morning I reheat it and put it into a thermos bottle where I have it all hot and ready for use during the day without any further care or bother.

Mrs. B. A. McBride, 501 North 5th avenue, Burlington, Ia.: I have found that I can sew just ordinary jar rubbers to the underside of my rugs that slide, and keep them firmer on floor. Also I use castoff supporter hooks for my pot holders. They are easily sewed on, and practical.

Mrs. T. C. V., Aurora, Ill.: I use a plain variety of old office desk wire baskets for my vegetables in my storage cupboards. They are easy to keep clean and when they become dusty or soiled I take the garden hose to them.

Mrs. Emory Jones, Chicago: I put to good use those waxed papers which come around my loaves of bread. I use them for polishing linoleum and wood floors. They take a dosing of wax easily, and don't soak it up the way a cloth does.

'Wizard of Oz' Party Is Next on Sally's List

By Sally Joy Brown.

Activities of the Sally Joy Brown department are sponsored by Tribune Charities, Inc.

I'm glad it's time to announce our next party, boys and girls, because it's such a good one that I couldn't possibly manage to keep the good news to myself a minute longer!

If ever a movie was perfectly suited to our parties it's an important new one which opens soon at the United Artists theater, and 100 boys and girls will come with me to see it on Aug. 31. It's the story of little Dorothy and her dog, Toto, who were whisked off on a strange adventure by a cyclone, through the Forest of Poppies and the Haunted Forest to the Emerald City, where they met—"The Wizard of Oz."

I know a number of other interesting things to tell about this movie, but I'll have to save them 'til next week, because now I must tell you about how to win an invitation to this party.

Any boy or girl is eligible to try for one. Write me a letter and tell me why you think you'd enjoy seeing "The Wizard of Oz," and maybe you'll win an invitation. You must remember to tell me your full name, address, and age when writing, and you must also write that note ALL BY YOURSELF. Address your letter to Sally Joy Brown, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Chicago.

Here are the names of the fortunate youngsters who've won invitations to my party on Aug. 24. Each of these boys and girls soon will receive a personal invitation to attend the Oriental theater to see "Tarzan Finds a Son." I'll see you all on Thursday!

Pockets Ride High on This Dress Designed in Paris

By Bettina Bedwell.

PARIS [Special].—Pockets are riding high on many of the new clothes for fall. Removed from their traditional places on dresses, they're doing fashion duty in many smart ways. The use to which they are put in the dress adapted for today's Paris pattern is exceptionally noteworthy. In this design they form part of the shoulder detail. The effect is one of broad shoulders and long, slim bodice line. Into one of the high pockets is stuffed a contrasting kerchief, just a tiny one to lend a color note.

The skirt of this model is many gored for flare. One of the important fabrics for a dress of this type is pin striped taffeta. The sketch illustrates how effectively stripes offer diagonals and verticals.

Striped woolen is another material that will make up well in this costume, especially for late autumn and winter wear. It's the sort of dress smart women are having made for their busy hours, socially or in business.

Style No. 5308 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, and 20, and 30, 32, 34, 36, 38, and 40 inches bust measurement. Size 16 requires 4 yards of 39 inch material, with ¾ yard of binding for the neckline.

Address orders to Chicago Tribune Paris Patterns, 119 West 19th street, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred — wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

French Women Have Practical Beauty Ideas

French women are very practical. They do exercises to beautify their skin. No, we don't mean facial gymnastics, although possibly they have their place in cosmetic rituals. The French are a logical people. They go back to the source of skin blemishes and skin loveliness. They know that unless their bodily functions are working effectively all the rouge, massage and makeup in the world won't make the texture of their faces beautiful.

They build up the muscle tone of the stomach and intestines, knowing well their skin will reflect their increased health. They keep the cells and muscles that control perspiration active in order to rid their bodies of damaging impurities.

This is the morning routine of a French woman who wants a lovely and glowing skin. To begin with, she takes a glass of warm Vichy water. Probably American women will prefer to substitute a glass of warm water combined with the juice of half a lemon. Then, giving the warm drink five minutes or so to settle, she begins her exercises. The warm lemon juice induces perspiration, keeps the sweat glands active, and clears out impurities.

Here are a fair French lady's exercises:

1. Sit on a stool or low chair, preferably backless. Plant the feet firmly on the floor. Then, breathing in, lean back until the right palm is on the floor and the left hand is straight up in the air. Then, breathing out, bring the left palm to the floor and the right hand up straight. Do this about fifteen times.

2. Kneel on the floor with the knees apart and the toes touching behind. Raise the arms at right angles with the body. Then raise one arm until it is straight above the head, lowering the other arm until the fingers are touching the floor and turning the chest toward the uplifted arm. Breathe in as the hand goes up. Return to right angle arm position breathing. Repeat, alternating the position of the arms.

3. Sit on the floor with legs stretched out and apart. Stretch the arms at right angles to the body. Then turn the body and one arm to the right as far as possible, then to the left.

4. Lie flat on the floor. Raise the feet and legs close together; then with the toes as a pointer describe as large a circle as possible, first to the right six times, and then to the left six times, without separating the legs. Breathe in while the legs are going up. Exhale as you lower them. Do this slowly in time to your breathing.

Strenuous, aren't they? Yes, but they are splendid for strengthening muscles that control elimination processes. They remind the muscles to keep the organs of the body in their proper positions. For instance, a sagging stomach will be lifted. The circulation will be stimulated and, after a morning bath, you will feel in splendid condition to start the day.

Of course, French women have a few little external tricks for their complexions, too. They find a boiled potato mashed up with a little milk makes an excellent astringent and facial mask. If their eyes seem bloodshot, they make an eye wash by boiling a few flowers of camomile tea, China tea, and rose water. And they swear by olive oil for rough upper arms and too dry skins.

Break-front cabinets like the handsome one in this photograph are coming back into their own again. They are ideal space savers, as they combine the practical features of bookcase, writing desk, chest of drawers, and cabinet. And you can get them during the August sales at most reasonable prices.

Break-Front Cabinets Back in Style Again

Do you want to make your home more attractive? Learn first about the things which may detract from its appearance. Read the booklet, "What's Wrong with Your Rooms?" by Edith Weigle, Tribune furniture stylist. On sale at The Tribune Publice Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street, or Tribune Tower. Price, 3 cents. Postpaid, 5 cents.

By Edith Weigle.

The limelight of popular fashion in furniture is being thrown on the break-front cabinet for the coming winter and for any time, for that matter. One only wonders why it has not been used more frequently before. It's not new, having been an indispensable part of home furnishings in the 18th century in England, but it has been in the background, somehow or other, for a long time.

We've had plenty of so-called Gov. Winthrop desks which combined glassed upper sections for books with slant top writing desks, and there has been a recent deluge of flat topped kneehole desks in mahogany, walnut, and pickled pine, but either because they were too costly or because they were too cumbersome, perhaps, decorators have slighted the break-front cabinet until this season.

Now it is coming into its own again. It is being made on smaller scale, so it is adaptable to the average sized living room, and it is being sold at lower prices. This particular month, when the summer furniture sales are in full progress, is a splendid time to get one, for the sales discounts will mean an even greater saving.

The break-front cabinet is so called because its center section is set out slightly beyond the two side sections. It is generally made of fine mahogany and the surfaces of the drawers and doors show beautifully grained surfaces of this handsome wood.

Sometimes it has a broken arch pediment or top, as has the model shown in the photograph today. Other times it is perfectly straight across the top with fine fluting or a little fretwork carving just below.

It is an ideal piece of space-saving furniture for the average home with its upper shelves for books and ornaments, its convenient writing compartment [concealed behind a drawer front when not in use], its drawer space and its lower side cabinet sections for odds and ends. But more than this it is a handsome addition to the furnishings of your living room. It will never go out of style and will always be in good taste.

It is used most often in the traditional type of interior with other pieces in 18th century English vein, such as Chippendale side chairs and arm-chairs, wing back chairs, barrel back chairs, Sheraton, Hepplewhite or Regency sofas, drum top tables, and the like.

In colonial mahogany living rooms it is also a welcome addition, and it may even be used in a room that combines the traditional with the modern.

The photograph today shows a good looking break-front cabinet manufactured by a middle-western firm that specializes in furniture of the medium price range. It is of mahogany and has all the convenient features I've mentioned. Note the writing compartment with its divided sections for stationery and its small drawers at either side.

When not in use this pushes back into the cabinet and the front part of it is lifted up and looks like a drawer front. The brass drawer pulls are of pleasingly simple 18th century design.

A FRIEND IN NEED

If you are in need, perhaps I can help you. If you have household articles or clothing you no longer use, please let me place them with needy families. Address correspondence to Sally Joy Brown, The Chicago Tribune, Chicago, Ill. Activities of this department are sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc.

By Sally Joy Brown.

Many needy families disposed of their furniture before finally applying for relief and have been living in furnished quarters since that time. However, with the recent budget slashes, the majority are unable to pay rent and are forced to move, generally without furniture of any kind, into unfurnished and, consequently, less expensive rooms. Those who are still living in furnished rooms have less space.

Requests for aid in providing at least adequate sleeping facilities have mounted greatly in the last few weeks.

A case worker on the northwest side writes:

"Dear Miss Brown: Mr. and Mrs. R., whom we are assisting at the present time, are greatly in need of a baby crib for their 2 month old child. We are unable to supply this item, due to our limited and restricted resources. The family occupies only one room."

Mr. M., a case worker, writes in regard to Mrs. X:

"She and her five children are at present receiving assistance barely covering their minimum needs of food and rent. The family is in dire need of a bed, as the children now are sleeping on the floor. The mother has no immediate hope of obtaining employment, as she must remain at home to care for the youngsters. The father deserted several years ago. We would appreciate your efforts in supplying them with a bed."

Miss B., another worker, writes:

"May we request a fold-up cot and mattress? We are interested in a motherless family in which there is a father, an elderly great-aunt, and four little girls, the oldest of whom is only 11 years old. Because of the inadequate sleeping facilities, two of the children have been sleeping with their aunt in a three-quarter size bed. This has been very unsatisfactory, particularly in view of the fact that the elderly woman is ill much of the time."

Has any reader a crib and mattress for this baby?

When You Have a Roommate, Be Considerate

How are refreshments served at the home reception? For answers to this and many other questions about wedding customs, read Helen Bartlett's valuable booklet, "The Wedding Reception or Breakfast." On sale at the Tribune Public Service offices, 1 South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower. Price, 2 cents; by postpaid mail, 3 cents.

By Helen Bartlett.

Girls going away to college and finishing school have no corner on the business of learning how to be agreeable and congenial roommates. There are many young business girls who choose to share their living quarters for the sake of company as well as saving on expenses. And, as a matter of fact, members of a family living under the same roof have to follow much the same code if their relationships are to be entirely amiable.

However, we still consider this the most appropriate season of the year to talk about the responsibilities of roommates, because of the tremendous number of young people going off to school this fall to live in dormitories, or sorority or rooming houses. To many of these youngsters it will be a completely new experience, this living together in close proximity and sharing of small quarters with other girls, many of them strangers. Some girls who never have been obliged to share anything in their lives before, will be called upon to make a strict readjustment if their years in school are to net them anything in the way of pleasant social contacts and good close, lasting friendships.

Friendships which develop from these small beginnings of being amiable roommates are built on a partnership basis. And a partnership does not permit selfishness and will not tolerate a domineering personality. The successful roommate is the product of the many little extra efforts. There may be problems and disagreements, but they are mostly trifling ones, although it is well to remember that even trifles, if they are piled up in large numbers, are enough to make enemies out of friends.

Remember always to keep up your share of the bargain. Be kind enough to take messages for the other occupant of your room, and see that they are delivered promptly and accurately. And don't fail to say "thank you" for little services that are performed in your favor. Think of your partner when dividing the cookies or cake sent from home.

Respect the other girl's wishes for quiet when she wants to read or study, or wants to sleep late in the morning. Do your part in keeping the room clean by picking up the papers that may be scattered about when you open the window, by hanging up your coat and hat when you return from class, by keeping your books in order on the shelf, and by never appropriating more than your rightful share of the limited space allotted to you.

The borrowing roommate probably is the greatest offender of all, whether it is a matter of dimes or frocks. There are emergencies, of course, and a good friend doesn't mind sharing her personal belongings with another if it doesn't become a habit. But don't ever expect another to supply you with little necessities day after day when you could and should provide these things for yourself. If it seems necessary to borrow a little money from your friend, be sure it is not too frequently, and be sure to pay up in full and on time.

The Harvest Moon

By Eleanor Jewett.

I sometimes think in August
'When the moon is round and red
That there has been a big mistake
And in the sky instead
Of the old moon, the one I know,
A pumpkin has found place—
Because that moon has surely got
A jack-o-lantern face!

Clotilde Children's Patterns

Every avid little scholar likes her first-day-of-school dress to be just so. It's feminine at any age to wish to impress with fashion wisdom, and mothers can help their own glamor girls to acquit themselves with distinction when term opens in the fall. This pattern is one that any youngster will like.

The frock consists of a suspender skirt with a contrasting blouse. Over it may be worn either a jacket or a bolero. A wise idea would be to make both toppers so that the outfit may be varied.

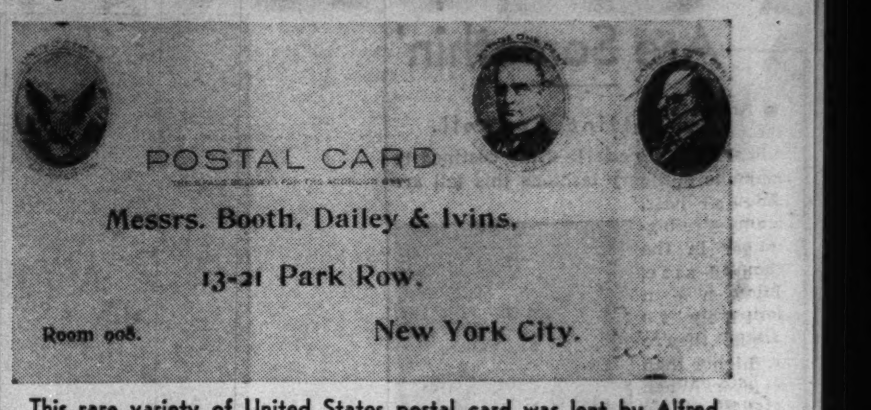
The original of this costume consists of a plain woolen skirt with a washable silk blouse. The bolero matches the skirt and the tweed jacket harmonizes in color. The ensemble may be made in combinations of blue shades, brown affinities, etc. Or a navy skirt might have green to complement it somewhere in the outfit. These suggestions are meant to assure you that almost any autumnal color scheme would be fitting.

Style No. 2617 is designed for sizes 6, 8, 10, 12, and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅛ yards of 39 inch material for the skirt, 1 yard of 39 inch for the jacket, and 1¼ yards for the blouse.

Address orders for Clotilde Children's Fashions to Chicago Tribune, P. O. Box 537, Grand Central Annex, NEW YORK CITY, inclosing 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred—wrap it carefully) for each pattern ordered. IMPORTANT! Be certain to state clearly the number of the pattern and the size desired, and write your name and address plainly.

The Stamp Collector

By Richard McP. Cabeen



This rare variety of United States postal card was lent by Alfred Diamond of Chicago for illustration. It is imposed upon a card of the ordinary design which replaced it. Both are described elsewhere in this column.

Mr. Cabeen will answer questions about stamps, except concerning values. Do not ask where stamps may be sold, as the Stamps and Coins advertising section adjoining contains offers to buy and sell. Inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

The first United States domestic postal card of the twentieth century was issued in 1902 as a memorial to President William McKinley, who had been assassinated late in the previous year. The portrait of McKinley which was selected for this card is a three-quarter view looking toward the left. This fills a rather large elliptical medallion which is inclosed in a thin frame. Above is an inscription reading "Postage one cent," and below another which reads "1843—McKinley—1901." Both are in small gothic type and the latter is inclosed with a thin line which parallels the ellipse and which is finished at the ends with small scrolls.

For the first time in the history of United States cards the elliptical portrait medallion and inscriptions which constitute the postage stamp of the card is balanced by a similar ellipse at the opposite corner. This contains a representation of the great seal of the United States, with the words "United States" above the medallion and "of America" below. These inscriptions are in gothic type similar to that used around the postage stamp medallion at the right.

The principal inscriptions of this card are located in the center, about opposite the bottom of the two medallions, a location which is a little lower than usual. This location was chosen so as to provide sufficient space for the postmark, and the upper inscription, which is used for the first time, reads: "The space above is reserved for postmark." Just

The card measures 3¼ by 5½ inches and is printed in black upon buff cardboard. This is one of the rarest United States cards and is undoubtedly the most desirable. Other cards which have list prices equal to or bettering the price of this card owe their scarcity to the absence or presence of a water mark or to some variety of overprint made in error when cards were being revalued in 1920. This is the only design which is not common in some form or other.

According to information furnished by Alfred Diamond of Chicago, who lent the card shown in today's illustration, the printing of this card was not satisfactory, and on April 29, 1902, 1,625,000 cards of this design were destroyed by the printing contractor under the supervision of the United States postal card agent. This was supposed to be the entire stock, but in some unknown manner a few turned up among cards delivered to the postmaster at New York. These were not detected by the clerks and were regularly issued. It is supposed that not more than 5,000 cards escaped destruction.

The card which took the place of the rejected variety, appeared later in the year and was identical except for the substitution of a profile portrait of McKinley, facing left, for the three-quarter view. This latter is quite common and remained in use until 1907, when it was succeeded by a new design which, however, continued to show the portrait of the martyred President.

On Aug. 6 the Polish postoffice issued a 25gr violet stamp of large format to commemorate the twenty-fifth anniversary of Poland's March to Freedom. On Aug. 6, 1914, Josef Pilsudski and his legionnaires marched out of Cracow to fight for Poland's freedom. The stamp shows Pilsudski with his legionnaires at the left and modern Polish soldiers at the right. The stamp is steel engraved from a design by Boratynski. The March to Freedom stamp is also included with two other 25gr stamps bearing the portraits of Pilsudski, first marshal of Poland, and Smigly-Rydz, present marshal, in a souvenir sheet printed in steel color and sold at 1z 25gr. The 50gr. surcharge in this sheet goes to the national defense fund. Special first day postmarks were applied at the Cracow postoffice.

A series of thirty-two illustrated postcards were issued on Aug. 1. These bear a 15gr stamp similar to the 25gr stamp described above and show scenes from the campaigns of the Polish legions during the struggle for independence. This information is provided by Jan Cithurus, philatelic correspondent of the Polish general postoffice.

The Hawaiian commemorative stamps of the territorial series and the 3 cent Stuart type stamp of the ordinary series have been removed from sale at the Philatelic agency, as of July 31, 1939. The latter stamp was issued on June 16, 1932, the design being copied from the 2 cent value of the George Washington bicentennial issue of 1932, with the value changed and the dates omitted. It was popularly believed at that time that this was to be the type design for a new general issue. The change in the administration stopped all work in connection with a new issue and the 3 cent Stuart remained a lone wolf until the advent of the recent presidential issue. This stamp replaced the only stamp in the series bearing a portrait of Lincoln, and duplicated the portrait of Washington which appeared also upon the 2 cent value.

Latest rumors indicate that the 3 cent stamp which is to be issued on of printing in America, will be placed on sale at New York City in connection with the annual Graphic Arts exposition which is to be open from Sept. 25, to commemorate 300 years Sept. 25 until Oct. 7.

William M. Stuart, stamp editor of the Washington Post, will be toastmaster at the annual banquet of the Society of Philatelic Americans in Baltimore on Aug. 26. The banquet is a feature of the convention of the society, which this year is being held from Aug. 24 to 27, at the Lord Baltimore hotel. The auction sale on Aug. 25 will be conducted by Lambert W. Gerber. One of the featured displays of the large exhibition will be the much publicized copy of the 1 cent stamp of 1861 bearing the first day date of Aug. 17, 1861. This stamp was discovered a little more than a year ago by Warren R. Du Bois of Los Angeles while looking over some unsalable stock and, according to newspaper reports of that time, was valued by Mr. Du Bois at an incredible figure.

The Gateway Philatelic society will not hold its usual meeting on Monday, Aug. 28, at the Wilson park fieldhouse, but will gather at 7:45 p. m. in the lobby of the new postoffice, Canal and Van Buren streets, for a tour of that building.

The nineteenth annual National Air races will be staged at the Municipal airport, Cleveland, O., on Sept. 2, 3, and 4, 1939. All collectors sending in covers properly addressed and stamped at the air mail rate may have the official cachet applied without charge. There will be a different color on each of the three days. In addition the sponsors will sell sets of covers, with cachets and pilot's signatures, and will obtain signatures of visiting and participating pilots on collectors' covers. There will be official poster stamps and other aerophilatelic souvenirs. Address Mark C. Emsley, director of cachets, 1939 National Air races, 2192 Brown road, Lakewood, O., when sending covers or writing about the other services.

The official prospectus and entry blank for the 1939 annual exhibition of the Chicago Philatelic society is ready for distribution, and may be obtained by addressing C. P. S. Stamp show, room 1611, 11 South La Salle street, Chicago. Those who are interested in bourse tables should include a request for locations and rental fees. The dates selected are Oct. 13, 14, and 15.

Lawrence Brothers of Anamosa, Ia., announce the publication of a presidential bureau print precancel catalog. This lists, describes, and prices every precancel of this class issued up to July 12, 1939. The catalog is priced at 10 cents and extra copies at 2 cents each.

Capt. John M. Rooks, Army War college, Fort Humphrey, D. C., who has been in service 31 years, will leave Washington, D. C., on Aug. 29, as the first air passenger booked out of that city for a continuous round the world, all air trip. Capt. Rooks will touch at New York, San Francisco, Honolulu, Guam, Manila, Hongkong, Bangkok, Calcutta, Alexandria, Southhampton, and New York. He has arranged a cover service for the trip and will send full particulars to collectors who write at once to the address given above.

PRESIDENT TAFT STAMP.

Only one single American ex-President was ever portrayed on any foreign stamp until a week ago, namely President Hayes on a Paraguay issue. Now, however, the Republic of Panama came out with a large and beautiful stamp showing the portrait of President Taft. What a sensation! and low face value, too.

Every collector will want to possess this stamp, but many will miss it. It is in the middle of a set, will be sold out immediately, and soon will be as unobtainable for almost any price as the President Hayes stamp is today.

We have a few and are using them to attract to our mailing list collectors of the desirable type whose names we approve of. To these collectors we will send the new Taft stamp for only 3c, together with a fine approval selection, which will prove the superiority of our service.

For an additional 5c for mailing expenses, we will also send our FREE, fully illustrated, 60-page book, "Famous Stamps and Their Stories," the most outstanding book on stamps of recent years.

RECKLESS ANGEL

By Mrs. Belloc Lowndes

Angel Plans a Desperate Enterprise as a Result of the Murder of Mrs. Woolryche

THE STORY TO DATE

● Angela Tindall, penniless young London aristocrat, has been given the nickname Reckless Angel because of her daring pranks. Ned Carvill, society jewel thief, is in love with her and hopes to marry her and make her an accomplice in the robberies he and his half-brother, George Adair, plan. But Angela is in love with Lord Bridlington, who has declared his love to her but feels honor bound to the ageing Mrs. Woolryche, an attachment formed in his youth. Angel learns from Lucy Morton, her roommate, of the gigolo with whom Mrs. Woolryche has been deceiving Brid. Angel writes Mrs. Woolryche a warning anonymous note. A fortune teller predicts a legacy which Angel receives, but she fails to discard an automatic pistol which is part of her inheritance. She takes it with her in her suitcase to the coming-of-age party of Tom Crofton, son of Lord and Lady Crofton of Longlands Manor, to which affair Angel has secured invitations for Carvill and Adair. Brid arrives at the party with Mrs. Woolryche. She is the sister of Lord Crofton, but, due to a quarrel with Lady Crofton, it is the first time she has been in Longlands Manor in years. The older woman's possessive attitude toward Brid angers Angel.

(Copyright: 1939: Marie Belloc Lowndes.)

ONCE in her bedroom, Angel locked her door, and, going to the dressing table, she sat down, put her elbows on the table, and cupped her chin in her hands.

The reflection she saw in the looking glass was not flattering. Her face was drawn looking, her expression listless, while in her heart burnt fierce fires of hatred and of jealousy. It was as if there echoed in her ears again and again the playful yet determined command: "Brid? Do come over here. You've hardly spoken to me."

Though it was now close on midnight, the unhappy girl felt wide awake, but at last she slowly began undressing.

When ready for bed she felt an odd wish to look at the pistol which had been left to her by her father's old friend. She took it up and saw that it was not loaded. But as she stared down at it, lying there in one of the drawers of the dressing table, she asked herself a question. What if she took it to Mrs. Woolryche's room and, pointing it at her, said firmly, "If you don't promise me to give up Brid—he is my Brid now and no longer your lover—I'll shoot you dead"?

It was a crazy notion, and she knew it to be such, if only because were Mrs. Woolryche forced to make such a promise she certainly would not keep it.

At last she fell into a troubled sleep filled with evil dreams.

She awoke and, looking at her luminous clock, saw that it was half-past two. All at once she began shivering, and it was as if some sentient being, if invisible yet very close to her, was urging and pressing her to do the dangerous thing she had half thought of doing while fingering the unloaded pistol. She felt that strong, evil entity to be so near that she could have touched it had she put out her hand.

In her time she had done many foolish, nay, many reckless things, and, as was a favorite slang term among her friends, got away with them. Why not follow that powerful urge now? It would give selfish, silly Toria Woolryche a good fright, even if it did nothing else.

She turned on the light by her bed and looked fearlessly about her. There was nothing to be seen, nothing to be heard, in the spacious bedchamber. Nothing, that is, but the slight out-of-doors nature sounds of an early June night. Yet she still felt as if close to her was a demoniac influence with whom she was gradually becoming in intense, sinister sympathy.

She made an effort, but it was a feeble effort, to banish the poisonous miasma surrounding her; but deep within herself she knew she was longing both to face and to threaten the woman who was destroying not only her life but the life of the man she, Angel, loved with all her being.

Yielding now to a fierce, compelling urge, she got out of bed and put on her bedroom slippers and a dressing gown.

She went to the dressing table and opened the drawer. Yes, there lay the wicked looking little steel weapon. After a moment's hesitation she took it from the drawer. Then she clutched the electric torch. Though she knew exactly where was situated Mrs. Woolryche's room, it was pitch dark in the corridors leading to it.

It seemed an immense way, yet in the daytime it would not have taken her half a minute to reach the end of the broad corridor. But at last she had accomplished that part of the way, and it was with relief that she turned into a long, narrow passage on one side of which was a row of windows looking into an inner court of the huge house.

At the end of that narrow passage was a lobby from which opened the four state bedrooms of Longlands Manor. The state bedrooms were only occupied on the occasion of a royal visit or when Lord Crofton was asked to entertain an ambassador and ambassadress.

Mrs. Woolryche's sister-in-law had smiled derisively when she had read the sentence: "Do, dear Violet, let me have the Cardinal's room! I used to long to sleep there when I was a child! I shan't a bit mind being in that part of the house by myself."

At last Angel—Reckless Angel with a vengeance now—stood just outside the Cardinal's room.

There was still time to draw back. One side of her whispered incessantly that what she had come here to do was not only crazy but extremely foolish and could lead to no good. But another, stronger side asked imperious questions to which Angel's heart gave eager assent.

Suddenly filled with a kind of wild courage, she slipped for a moment the automatic in the pocket of her dressing gown. With steady hand she turned the handle of the door and, having slipped through it, closed it noiselessly behind her.

Then, taking a few steps forward, she saw that one of the windows, that, in fact, opposite to the door, was open and the curtain drawn back. How fond Mrs. Woolryche must be of light and air! It was a starlit night, but very dark outside, for there was a new moon, so only a faint glimmer of light filtered through into the room. Still by now she could see on her left the gray, ghostlike outline of the wide four-poster.

Tiptoeing to the foot of the bed, she twisted the knob which flashed the light on in her electric torch.

Turning the torch slowly this way and that, she at last allowed the bright beam to rest full on the now ravaged looking head which lay propped up on pale pink linen pillows.

And as the girl who loved Lord Bridlington with a passion which amazed herself gazed at what lay there, there came over her a sensation of despairing anguish. Was there any hope that this vain, mean-natured woman would ever give up the lover who had been at once her shame and glory for so long? The answer to that question would surely be "No!" With such a creature no argument, no plea for mercy or understanding would avail. Angel asked herself, why do, in that case, what she had come to do? Would it not only mean humiliation and even agony? Then she hesitated—and was lost.

Slowly she lifted the automatic and held it out straight in the beam of bright light. But as she opened her lips and was about to call out her sleeping enemy's name, a man's hand shot from the darkness on her left and struck the tiny weapon from her fingers. She heard it fall with a thud onto the polished floor.

The girl gave an involuntary cry of surprise, and the woman lying in bed awoke—sat up as if galvanized into life and screamed: "Help! Help!"

Angel heard a sudden click. There came a flash. And Mrs. Woolryche's head fell back on the pale pink pillows and rolled helplessly over to one side. With shuddering horror the girl, standing as if turned into stone at the foot of the bed, saw that in the center of that glistening white forehead was now a small black hole.

Angel felt her shoulders seized. She was then quickly and firmly propelled toward the door. It was opened, shut, and locked behind her, and she found herself in the lobby, the lighted torch still in her hand.

Turning off the light, for a while she leaned against the wall, trembling violently, while trying to gather her wits together. At last she sank down on the floor outside the Cardinal's room and began listening to what was now taking place on the other side of the locked door.

THERE came sounds she knew to be caused by the hurried opening and shutting of drawers large and small, then the creaking of the doors of a massive wardrobe which, she vaguely remembered having noticed when she had been shown the room the year before, took up a considerable part of the wall opposite the bed. She heard at last the quick padding of feet coming and going across and around the large apartment.

At last the typical crunching noise caused by a heavy window sliding down into its socket proved that the man who had shot Mrs. Woolryche—Angel felt sure he was a professional burglar—had vanished, laden with the rich booty which if he was ever caught would cost him two lives—that of the woman he had killed and his own.

What an extraordinary, incredible happening it had all been! And then there came over her a feeling of intense dismay as she remembered that on the floor of that room, filled with horror and death, lay her automatic.

She, unhappy Angel, had but one thing to do. This was to recover the automatic which had been knocked out of her hand by the killer. When the police were called in by Lord Crofton the gun at once would be found and regarded as the weapon which had caused Mrs. Woolryche's death. Not only the housemaid who had unpacked for her, but malicious Joan Fletcher, whom she instinctively disliked, knew she had brought it with her to Longlands.

She began trembling violently and even her teeth chattered in her head as her imagination conjured up what would at once be believed by the police. Who would, who could believe her almost incredible story of what had really happened? But she could do nothing now, for the door was locked from inside. She must set her wits to work and manage to get into the room tomorrow morning before the police were summoned after the discovery of the murder.

She stood up and began her slow progress back to her part of the house. It might have been miles instead of yards. But at last she tottered into her bedroom, and when she was safe behind her own door she lay down and closed her eyes. But no sleep brought merciful oblivion.

Again and again, and yet again, she lived through those awful moments, for they had only been moments, when she had stood pointing her pistol at Mrs. Woolryche, and the man's hand had wrenched it from her, and then with his own automatic had shot dead the woman whose lips had just emitted that cry for help. Who was he? If only Toria Woolryche had had the sense to pretend to be asleep she would be alive now.

Angel had asked to be called at eight o'clock, so she waited, wide awake and feeling deadly cold, though it was a hot morning, till at last a smiling maid came in with a cup of tea. The girl looked radiant, for each member of the large household staff was to be given a handsome money gift to celebrate the coming of age of their employer's only son, and she smiled as she exclaimed: "Mr. Tom said breakfast must be ready in the old schoolroom at nine, miss, and the cars are ordered for ten."

Angel lay in her bath for twenty minutes, and it was nearly nine when she began to dress slowly. Now and again she would go across to the door of her room and listen. But only normal, cheerful sounds were echoing through the big house—sounds broken occasionally by a bell and distant murmuring talk. Once there came hurried footsteps that seemed to be rushing toward her room. Feeling sick with apprehension, she opened the door an inch or two, only to see a lady's maid walking quickly along with a glass of orange juice.

At last there was no more excuse for lingering, so she put on a white skirt and turquoise blue jumper. But instead of the jaunty little felt hat which went with the jumper she selected a brown mushroom straw. She knew she had done right when she looked in the dressing table mirror, for her face was chalky white and there were dark rings under the large eyes which were her most arresting feature.

It was nearly ten o'clock when she came into the cozy, shabby looking old schoolroom, where last time she had been staying at Longlands young Tom had tried to make love to her. But this morning he looked at her with reproach in his eyes. "You are late, Angel."

Her lips quivered. "I'm so sorry."

He saw that she had forgotten it was his birthday and perhaps the greatest day of his life. Whatever else an Englishman of Tom Crofton's type remembers or forgets, his coming of age remains ever vivid.

"It doesn't matter a bit," he said kindly, and then he noticed that something was very much amiss with her. What could have happened to make Angel Tindall look as she looked now?

He poured out a cup of strong coffee, and after she had sipped a little of it she suddenly jumped up. "Why, Tom—dear, dear Tom! Many, many happy returns of the day," and she flung her arms round his neck and burst into tears.

Almost any other girl would by now have reminded herself that Lord Bridlington was now free of the gyves which had cut into his flesh for so long. But that knowledge had not yet penetrated Angel's consciousness. She was far too terrified and anxious to think of anything except the immediate problem before her. It was the first time for months that the thought of the man she loved with so sobering a passion had been absent from her heart and thoughts.

Tom Crofton kissed her just as if he had been her brother. His good, honest heart ached for the girl. He believed she was unhappy because she loved Brid, while Brid no doubt still adored affected, silly Mrs. Woolryche, Tom's own aunt. He busied himself in trying to make her eat some of the delicious breakfast foods which had been kept warm in silver dishes on an electrically heated copper plate.

Her face began to look a little less drawn and wan. And yet she hardly knew what she was eating or drinking, for her mind was even more beset than it had been before with acute terror. How could she get back her automatic?

All at once she forgot herself and her terrific problem, for: "I say, Angel, I do like your friend Lucy! How was it that I didn't see more of her in London?"

Angel made what was really a valiant attempt to pull herself together. "Lucy works tremendously hard, and, generally speaking, she is too tired to go out in the evening. She is quite different from any of your girl friends, Tom, and worth a million more than any one in our crowd." She had just remembered that yesterday, just before they had gone up to dress for dinner, Lucy had said to her rather shyly: "I wonder you didn't fall in love with Tom Crofton, dear. I think he's one of the nicest boys I've ever met."

She now went on eagerly: "She and I have had rooms together in Queen's Close for ever so long, and I can't tell you how awfully good she is to me. She gets very little fun. I wish you'd ask her out some evening. Saturday is her best day, because then she has had a rest."

"It's an awful shame that a girl like that should have to work so hard," said Tom. And then he grew rather red. "She's the prettiest girl I've ever met. I wonder if you've noticed that she's very like that Gainsborough we've got in the long gallery?"

Just then they heard his mother's voice outside the door.

"If Mrs. Woolryche always rings between eight and eight-thirty, it's certainly strange she has not rung yet. But isn't it possible that she may have rung and that you didn't hear her?"

There came an agitated answer, very much on the defensive: "O, no, my lady, that's impossible! I stayed on in my room waiting till just now. Then I thought I'd best ask your ladyship what had better be done."

Then Lord Crofton intervened, "What's all this about?"

His wife answered: "Your sister never wakes later than half-past eight. It's close to ten now, and her maid has come to ask me what she had better do."

Tom grinned at Angel. "Aunt Toria is not as young as she was, and she went up long after you last night, so she is having a good snooze."

Angel stared at him. A good snooze. O, God! She felt as if she were going to scream.

Tom was ringing the bell now. "We'll start at half-past ten. There is no reason at all why we should be hustled." He was again looking at her with concern. Angel didn't look fit to do anything but to go straight back to bed.

He gave his order to a footman, and the man had hardly left the room when the door opened again.

"Tom! Come here."

It was Lord Crofton's voice, a voice heavy with calamity. He looked into the room, and they both saw that his face had gone gray.

"Father! What's the matter?"

"I want you, my boy," and then he closed the door.

Tom didn't obey at once. He lingered long enough to say: "You stay here, Angel. Lucy will be coming here in a minute. Make her wait here, too, till I come back. My good old dad is an awful fuss-pot."

As Tom left the room Lady Crofton came into it. She, too, looked utterly unlike her serene, grande dame self.

"O, Angel, something appalling has happened, but though Lord Crofton and Tom are trying to get every one else away as soon as possible, we want you and Lucy Morton to stay on till after lunch, for that nice young Carvill and his friend, Mr. Adair, are being really helpful, so they will motor you to town early this afternoon."

The girl looked at her hostess. Her lips parted to ask the question to which she knew the answer. But she found she couldn't speak, and Lady Crofton went on in a strange breathless tone very unlike her usual measured accents.

"A burglar broke into the house last night! He managed to get up the north wall, where there are several large creepers, including a camellia tree which has a strong trunk. He was after my poor sister-in-law's jewels, and he got into the Cardinal's room, which she had specially asked for, and killed her. No one heard a sound, for those rooms are away from the rest of the house. She had a mania for taking all her jewels with her wherever she went, and the marvelous emeralds she wore last night are gone."

"Gone?" echoed Angel tonelessly.

"They are worth a king's ransom, and that's what the burglars—we think there were at least two of them—were after. They overlooked that wonderful string of pearls. But they were very clever at their job, for they must have left their shoes in one of the lower rooms in the temporary building and padded across the lawn in their stockinged feet. Though there are marks, there are no footprints to go by."

Angel waited to hear more, and she had not long to wait.

"Toria may have put up a fight, but there is nothing to show for it if she did. She must have wakened in terror, poor, poor thing, and, of course, she ought to have remained quite still. She always carried with her a kind of portable safe, a silly little jewel case, which she thought secure, but I expect it was opened in a minute. As for the emeralds, according to her maid, who is quite hysterical and no use at all, they were simply in a drawer, hidden, or so she thought, by her undies, and not even put back into their case!"

Angel stared at her. Again she tried to speak, and again no words would come. But Lady Crofton was too absorbed in the dreadful thing which had happened to notice anything, and she went on: "Lord Bridlington has already gone; in fact, he was the first person my husband told. Although, of course, one can't help knowing"—it was as if she were speaking to herself—"that he no longer cared for poor Toria, it must have been an awful shock for him, and he felt it would be best for him to go back to London at once."

And then at last Angel, in her extremity, found her voice: "I suppose Lord Crofton has telephoned to the police?" She tried to speak in a steady, indifferent way.

"Yes and no, my dear child. We have not sent for the local police. For one thing, the nearest town is a long way off, and it seemed wiser to us both to get in touch with Scotland Yard. Tom thought so, too. They're sending some men from the criminal investigation department, but, of course, they can't get here for another hour and a half.

"Meanwhile nothing is to be touched in the Cardinal's room. Everything has been left exactly as it was when Toria's unfortunate maid found her this morning. From what we can make out the maid only just looked round sufficiently to see what had been taken, and, as I said just now, strange to say, the pearls are still there in the drawer where Toria Woolryche put them when she was changing for dinner. But the room is in the most frightful confusion, so perhaps the burglar didn't notice them."

Angel clutched hold of the side of the chair in which she was sitting. She felt sick and faint. It was as if she could still hear the sounds the killer had made as he had padded about the large room looking for booty, opening the drawers and flinging open cupboard doors.

THERE came a knock at the door. Lady Crofton called out with a touch of impatience, "Come in!" And a young man Angel knew to be Jim Daintree, the son of the rector of Longlands, came into the room. He was on the Daily Courier, and his face was now alive with curiosity and excitement.

There swept over the girl a feeling of uneasiness, for she hadn't liked young Daintree the last time she had stayed here. But Lady Crofton was fond of him; in fact, he was her godson. He nodded curtly to Angel Tindall. If she didn't like him he didn't like her, and he was heartily glad Tom was no longer in love with her.

"I thought I'd come up and see what I could do to help," he said in a deferential tone.

"That is good of you, Jim; you can best help by putting through some long-distance telephone calls. We had a great many people coming today," and she sighed.

"Of course, I'll do anything!" And then he waited two or three seconds before he added, "I wonder if you'd allow me to see poor Mrs. Woolryche's maid?"

Lady Crofton looked surprised. "Why do you want to do that?"

"Well, you see——" and then he stopped, for he couldn't tell the truth, which was that it would be such a wonderful scoop for the evening paper, the Echo, which belonged to the millionaire owner of the Courier.

Young Daintree said earnestly: "It would be to everybody's advantage if just the simple facts—because, after all, they are simple—were published in, say, the Echo this evening—I mean before there comes a rush of reporters to Longlands." His tone was persuasive.

"I'm sure I'm right! I'm enough of a newspaper man to know that." He waited a moment and then said quietly, "From what I've already heard, it was her maid who found the poor lady, wasn't it?"

Lady Crofton nodded. "How ever did you hear that?"

"I think some one in the village told mother."

"But the maid found my poor sister-in-law less than half an hour ago! D'you mean it's already all over the village?"

"I'm afraid so."

He did not add that the underservant to whom he paid a small monthly sum to keep him informed of the names of the guests who had come or were coming to Longlands had rung him up within five minutes of the moment when the maid had come into the servants' hall screaming: "My lady's dead! She's been murdered! The emeralds have gone —O, dear, O, dear, what shall I do? Perhaps they'll suspect me!"

Wisely Jim Daintree had waited, restraining his curiosity till there had come another telephone call, this time from Tom Crofton, asking if he would come up to the manor house.

But now, to his bitter disappointment, his godmother said firmly: "After all, I don't think that it would be of any use your seeing the maid. She's a hysterical fool. What I would like you to do now is to come downstairs with me. I will give you a list of the people who were coming here this afternoon, and you can go into Lord Crofton's study. There is there, as you know, a separate telephone line, and you can put off all the people on the list, and, if you can manage it, avoid giving them the dreadful reason for our having canceled our party. They'll know why soon enough!"

After Lady Crofton and young Daintree had left the room Angel lost count of time. She was in an agony of suspense and fear and feeling more and more desperate. She knew that whatever happened, and at all costs, even if she had to appeal to Lord Crofton himself, she must retrieve her automatic from the room where Mrs. Woolryche was lying dead.

She wondered miserably where Lucy could be. It would be a comfort even only to see Lucy, and she thought of taking that dear, kind girl into her confidence. But no Lucy appeared, for, as a matter of fact, George Adair had forced her out of the house for a walk. One of Lucy's attributes was that of always being willing to do whatever she was asked to do, and that even if she didn't wish to do it.

At last the door of the old schoolroom opened and Tom came in, looking, though he had been away a bare half hour, years older than when he had left Angel. For one thing, his father had taken him into the Cardinal's room, and he felt as if he would never forget the horrible sight of his Aunt Toria lying in that great four-post bed, with none of the majesty of death about her—only horror, horror, horror.

He sat down. "Mother told you everything, I suppose?"

"Yes, and I want to do something to help."

"There's nothing to be done, my dear. We're just waiting for the Scotland Yard men, and they won't be here yet. Almost every one has gone by now, but mother wanted you and Lucy to stay on till after lunch, as Ned Carvill and George Adair have been, and still are, awfully good and useful. Carvill even helped in getting out all the cars. In fact, every one has behaved splendidly."

Then he tried to smile. "A queer coming-of-age day for me, eh, Angel?"

She stood up, and in a loud, distraught voice she exclaimed: "Tom! I want you to do something for me."

He got up, too, and looked at her in surprise. "What is it?"

"I want you to do me a tremendous kindness and never, never tell any one about it."

"Of course I will."

"I'm so terrified and miserable that I did think of telling Lucy about it. But I've changed my mind. I don't want any one ever to know about it."

Tom began to feel very curious. "No one shall know anything about it," he said soothingly. "What is it I can do for you?"

He looked at her expectantly. What could it be she wanted him to do for her? And today, of all days?

She came even closer to him than she was already. "I was in Mrs. Woolryche's room last night, Tom." Her voice had dropped so low that he had hardly heard what she was saying.

She nodded.

"Then you were the last person who saw her?"

Again she whispered, "Yes."

He looked at her gravely. "Of course I'll never tell anybody. In fact, I'm rather sorry you told me that. But I'm not likely to be asked any questions by the police, as I was actually sleeping out of the house."

"You don't understand!" she cried in an agonized voice.

"What don't I understand?" and he looked completely bewildered.

"I was fool enough to leave something behind me, and I'm so horribly afraid it may be found and that then I would be questioned. I don't want even you to know what it is. But I must get it, Tom, before the men from Scotland Yard arrive. Can you get the key of the Cardinal's room from your father without his knowing why you want it?"

"I can do better than that," and he looked at her consideringly. "As a matter of fact, there's a door leading into the Cardinal's room from the Legate's room, but it's behind a chest of drawers. On the other side, I mean, in the Cardinal's room, one of the big tapestry panels hides the door completely. It's on the left-hand side, near the bed."

"O, Tom, thank God! Thank God! Can we go there now?"

"Of course we can, and we're not likely to meet any one on the way, either. Every one is downstairs. You can imagine how excited they are in the servants' hall!"

The woman screamed, "Help! Help!"

The week ahead promises considerable opportunity along creative, constructive lines, so make plans and be ready to take steps to carry them forward. Today: Emotionally low; refrain from self-pity; be cautious with women, or if a woman yourself; relax.

Be an Optimist

Some are pessimistic about the fact that man misuses his powers. But there is plenty about which to be optimistic. For instance, the fact that we have those powers. If it is possible to misuse them, it is also possible to apply them correctly. The counterfeit always must have a genius with which to compare it. In this way man's very mistakes prove that he doesn't have to make them.

Your Year Ahead

Hails Ravinia Success; Urges Changes

By Cecil Smith

The Ravinia festival prospered in this summer of 1939. Not a drop of rain fell on any single one of the twenty-four concert nights or afternoons. Attendance figures advanced beyond those of any previous season, without a Benny Goodman fiesta to lure in several thousand outsiders for whom Ravinia's natural range of interest offers no temptation.

The program committee hired three good conductors. The Chicago Symphony orchestra played as well as it could nearly all the time. The répertoire underwent some refreshment without sacrificing many of the listenable items the audiences like best. The concerts maintained a great deal of the quality of serious musical endeavor, and yet succeeded in attracting what might almost be called a "mass audience."

Precisely because everything went well this summer, this is no time for us to sit back on our haunches and gloat over the good health of the Ravinia project. There is danger that the 1940 season may be modeled exactly upon the 1939 season. Success is a treacherous friend. An artistic venture left untouched and unimproved soon starts down the toboggan. Wherefore I make bold to suggest some revisions in Ravinia methodology for the summer of 1940.

The sorest issue at present is the rehearsal problem. It costs real money to buy the time of seventy-five players. This summer the rehearsal time, while not so restricted as it might have been, has not been enough to insure first grade performances. Every visiting conductor, confronted with the necessity of directing four concerts a week without enough time to present his viewpoint to the orchestra, is placed in an ugly spot. He can choose between a routine performance without the stamp of his real individuality and a personal interpretation at the expense of a ragged response from an insufficiently prepared orchestra.

Ravinia has a notable tradition to uphold. None of Louis Eckstein's glorious operatic performances went on the stage unrehearsed. Even the Metropolitan opera has sometimes presented unprepared ensembles, but not Ravinia. Scrupulous craftsmanship and (Continued on Page 3)

Tickets for Cornell Play Still Sell 8 Weeks in Advance

Quiet Summer Brings Desire for Comedy Hit

By Cecil Smith.

Inasmuch as tickets for "No Time for Comedy" are still on sale eight weeks in advance in New York, the Chicago première of Katharine Cornell's new vehicle is certainly far from immediate. But in these dog days when nothing is new in local theatrical circles except John Barrymore's inexhaustible fund of ad libbed japes, it is heartening to think about the diversions autumn and winter will bring.

"No Time for Comedy" has enjoyed a great deal of publicity for several valid reasons. It is Miss Cornell's first adventure into the realm of modern drawing room comedy since "Nice People," in which she appeared with Tallulah Bankhead in 1921 before either actress had become a celebrity. Furthermore it reinstates in public esteem its author, S. N. Behrman, whose lustrous reputation had lost a little of its sheen with "Wine of Choice." Its leading male rôle has provided a spectacular opportunity first for Laurence Olivier, and latterly for Francis Lederer. And it has given renewed proof that Guthrie McClintic is one of the deftest fellows in the business, when it comes to pacing a performance and giving it cohesive purpose and sureness of address.

In "No Time for Comedy" Mr. Behrman evidently is struggling with his own conscience, exposing his own quandary through the problems of his characters. With all the war and hatred, the distress and agony this lopsided modern world has created for itself, can our theater afford the superficiality and the passing diversion of comedy? Must not any playwright worth his salt try to face courageously the hideous realities of our world? Is there any justification for an author who does not weave a pessimistic fabric out of the knotted, frayed threads of our shoddy social and economic life?

As might be expected of Mr. Behrman, whose own incisive wit has always guaranteed him a sense of proportion, "No Time for Comedy" develops an effective attack upon "social consciousness" drama. The summation of his argument is reached in the last act as Linda [Miss Cornell] pleads with her playwright husband to give up his preoccupation with war and death and to return to his native gift for comedy:

"Is it more profound to write of death of which we know nothing, than of life of which we may learn something, which we can illuminate, if only briefly, with gayety, with understanding? . . .

"Millions of people know how to die—Stoics and fanatics—the insensitive and the robots. In any case it is an art that sooner or later Nature imposes on all of us. No, the difficult thing is to live. That requires skill, that requires imagination—that is the index of civilization—the ability to live, not the ability to die. Don't spin for me fantasias of death. Imagine for me variations of life. . . ."

These brief excerpts may give a hint of the mature thoughtfulness and gleaming style of "No Time for Comedy." In the sharpness of its knife-edged prose it is the year's most notable play. In permanent literary value, it is rivaled, I believe, only by Lillian Hellman's overpowering starkness of style in "The Little Foxes," and, perhaps—though I have not seen or read it—by William Saroyan's "My Heart's In the Highlands," which seemed to move so many people without succeeding at the box office.

When it comes down to Miss Cornell's individual performance in "No Time for Comedy" I am not quite so sure what to think. Though my New York colleagues were quick to cheer her as she donned the habiliments of drawing room comedy, I did not feel her to be born to the style. Nor did I feel that she had wholly acquired it. There is something so sober and zealous about Miss Cornell that she often misses the true glint of her lines. She lacks the offhand quality that lets a witty thrust, perfectly but unostentatiously aimed, find its way to the heart of the target. Sincerity she always has, and even warmth, when she reaches the scene from which I have quoted. But she cannot quite slip effortlessly into the grooves of comedy.

I am not saying that she is not good. She is not as good as she was in the sustained mood of "Saint Joan," where her own temperament could flower naturally. She is not as good as she was in "Candida," which is now a "classic" and must be played in a stylized idiom. Still an impressive intelligence makes her performance in "No Time for Comedy" important to our theater. Her acting may not give off sparks, but it does possess depth and richness.

Maybe I am all wrong. At any rate you will have a chance to check up on all this. Whenever its prosperity at the Ethel Barrymore theater abates—and for our sake may it be fairly soon!—Miss Cornell, Mr. Lederer, Margalo Gillmore, the inimitable colored actress Gee Gee James, and all the rest will strike out in our direction. And everybody will go to see "No Time for Comedy." Not only are there Miss Cornell's acting, Mr. Behrman's play, and Mr. McClintic's staging; there are also Jo Mielziner's settings — and, ladies, Valentina's clothes, which alone you may find worth the price of admission!

With Labor day only a fortnight away, the straw hat theaters of the Chicago area are coming to the end of their summer's toil. The Portage Point players, who divide their time betwen Onekama and Manistee, Mich., and the Marquette theater in the upper peninsula of Michigan have already finished their schedules. With the exception of the Belfry players at Williams Bay, all the Wisconsin theaters give their final plays this coming week-end. Likewise the Theater of the Dunes and all the Illinois groups except the Valley Summer players at Algonquin.

The summer's experience of the Lake Zurich players, where young actors and actresses from the Goodman theater are engaged in a coöperative effort, indicates that royalty free revivals have attracted larger audiences than modern plays. The forthcoming production of Oliver Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" is an unexpected dispensation, for the season had originally been announced to end tonight.

Evidently vacation folk have awakened to the attraction of summer theaters this year for the first time. Three groups—those at Port Washington, Williams Bay, and Algonquin—report that they have had to turn people away from the box office on many occasions. The two Wisconsin theaters plan to give more performances each week next year. The Valley Summer players at Algonquin already have added one night to the week, giving performances Wednesday through Sunday.

The awakening of the general public has been no more sudden than that of your drama reporter. Next year I promise to give a regular account of barnyard activities from the very beginning of the season, if the groups themselves start coöperating early, without requiring too much bludgeoning. Some of the theaters still have a great deal to learn about submitting clear, accurate, informative advance information.

"Nellie Was a Lady," by Courtenay Savage, brings to a close the season's series of six new comedies at the Coach House theater, Oconomowoc, Wis. The author will direct. The plot tells of a newly rich woman who is socially overambitious for herself and for her children. The cast includes Albert Carroll, June Meredith, Don Koehler, Barry Kelly, Emily Goehst, and Connie Wills.

Gertrude Bromberg, a kingpin in the local enterprises of the Shuberts, has returned from a month's vacation in the Canal Zone and the Caribbean. Now that she has returned, the new stage season may authoritatively be said to be in the offing. Without her the loop's theatrical zone is paralyzed.

The Chicago Repertory group had a party last night. Winfred Stracke, baritone, sang songs from the répertoire of the Theater Arts Committee Cabaret in New York. The program included a takeoff on the group's production of last spring, entitled "One-Third of a Mitten." At present the group is making ready to present George sklar's "The Life and Death of an American" in the fall.

Esther Ralston, lately a member of the repertory company at the Civic theater, was married last Sunday at Greenwich, Conn., to Ted Lloyd, New York columnist and radio commentator. Mary Ralston, 8 year old daughter of the bride, attended the ceremony.

The management of "The American Way," the historical spectacle play starring Fredric March at the Center theater in New York, is beginning to weaken in its relentless decision not to send the immense production out on the road. So many inquiries have come in from us out here in "the provinces" that Hassard Short, the show's technical expert, is mulling over the problem of constructing feasible touring sets.

First plans are now complete for the Milwaukee repertory season predicted in this column some weeks ago. Under the direction of Myron C. Fagan the Milwaukee Theater society has lined up the first three plays, to be given in the Pabst theater. The season will open Sept. 4 with "Autumn Crocus," starring Erin O'Brien-Moore and Douglas Montgomery. "Brief Moment," with Glenda Farrell, will follow for the week of Sept. 11. For a week beginning Sept. 18 Edward Everett Horton will play in "Springtime for Henry."

IN BEHRMAN PLAY

Katharine Cornell's latest production, with which she is associated both as coproducer and star, is S. N. Behrman's "No Time for Comedy." A current New York hit, the play is scheduled to tour next spring. Chicago should be one of its stops.

News of the Week in Field of Education

By the Rev. John Evans.

Purdue university at the beginning of the 1938-'39 academic year reorganized its school of chemical engineering and established the school of chemical and metallurgical engineering, placing it under Dr. John L. Bray, head of the former body. This was done because the increasing complexities in the field covered by these subjects demanded that they be completely separated from the former optional courses of general chemical engineering, organic technology, and metallurgy. The new course will eventually be housed in the new chemical engineering building now under construction.

The reorganization necessitated some changes in the curriculum. In chemical engineering all matter of doubtful pedagogical or professional utility was eliminated, some courses were rearranged to include most recent advances in that field, and other courses were expanded to utilize the increased laboratory facilities. The metallurgical curriculum was completely rebuilt and enlarged as to content.

"In both courses of study" commented Dr. Bray, "every effort has been made to emphasize the analytical approach, for ability to think is the only stock-in-trade that the engineer has to offer. Throughout his training the value of basic principles rather than collections of empirical facts is constantly impressed upon the student."

Now, for the academic year 1939-'40, Valparaiso university and Purdue university have arranged two new coöperative plans for engineering education. Plan I. calls for three years at Valparaiso and two at Purdue; plan II. stipulates two years at each university. Under the five year plan students will complete at Valparaiso the engineering courses normally completed by Purdue students in their first two years, plus the cultural courses required by Valparaiso of all candidates for the A. B. degree. At Purdue they will take the specialized engineering courses normally taken in the last two years in that field.

These plans were announced last week by Walter G. Friedrich, acting president of Valparaiso university. Under the four year plan students will take only one cultural course, in religion at Valparaiso and students completing this curriculum will receive the degree of B. S. in civil, electrical, mechanical, or chemical engineering from Purdue.

Since the conclusion of the world war, the number of accredited high schools in Illinois has increased almost 250 per cent. This was revealed last week in the report issued by the University of Illinois committee on admissions from secondary schools. In 1919 the committee reported 246, and today there are 845 secondary high schools accredited to the University of Illinois of which number 710 are public and 135 are private.

During the last year, the report states, seventeen high schools were added to the accredited list, two were dropped, two closed up, and fifteen were placed on the "suspended list." This last classification implies that those schools must reach standards required by the University of Illinois within the next year.

Registration at the University of Notre Dame indicates that education for life rather than education for a living is the prevailing influence among students entering the college of commerce. The program at this school calls for a minimum of 50 per cent cultural subjects, but increased student interest, according to registration to date, has raised this figure to better than 60 per cent.

Competitive examinations for the Donahue memorial scholarship, providing full expense for a four year course in the college of commerce at the University of Notre Dame, will be held at St. Mel's High school, Washington boulevard and Kildare avenue, next Thursday. Eligible for the examinations are honor graduates from the high schools of St. Mel, St. Ignatius, St. Patrick, St. Philip, Holy Trinity, and Weber.

The scholarship was established in 1935 by the widow of the late William E. Donahue, former advertising manager of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, in memory of his association with the university which he served as guest lecturer for many years. Mr. Donahue was at one time a member of Annunciation parish, consequently any member of that parish, who can meet the academic qualifications, is also eligible to compete for the scholarship.

Lawrence Tibbett Will Sing in Grant Park Tuesday Night

Baritone Tops Music Fare of Entire Month

By Edward Barry.

Lawrence Tibbett doth bestride the music week like a colossus. In view of the baritone's artistic and physical stature this simile is not quite as bad as it at first appears to be.

Mr. Tibbett's appearance at the free Grant park concerts next Tuesday night is to him merely another episode in a career which began [in a small way] nearly a fifth of a century ago and which shows every sign of continuing for at least that length of time into the future. To Chicago, not overly rich in big music names this month, the concert means a precious opportunity to come to grips with a class A celebrity.

Unlike so many singers [males as well as females] Mr. Tibbett has no objection to giving his exact birth date to compilers of reference books. He made his entrance on Nov. 16, 1896, at Bakersfield, Cal. His father, a sherif, was killed in the line of duty when the boy was only seven. Later the family moved to Long Beach and then to Los Angeles. The future celebrity's first love seems to have been the drama rather than music. In high school, it is true, he sang in the glee club as well as acted in plays, but after leaving school we find him a member of Tyrone Power's Shakespearean group and the Civic Repertory company of Los Angeles.

In the world war Tibbett saw naval service. At the conclusion of the conflict he obtained his first singing job at Grauman's Million Dollar theater in Los Angeles. Oscar Thompson, in "The American Singer," tells amusingly how Tibbett's fancied resemblance to Charles Ray won him this post and how he lost it a little later when he made a botch of "Eili, Eili." There followed light opera work in the Herbert and the Gilbert and Sullivan répertoires.

"Go east, young man!" was the burden of the advice which the young singer kept hearing from the more influential of his friends. He did go east, in his middle twenties, to the New York studio of Frank LaForge and to a church job in New Rochelle. He was accorded a Metropolitan Opera audition in April of 1923. Result: Nothing. Three weeks later he had another one. Result: A contract.

There began in the season of 1923-'24 a Metropolitan career which, starting quietly, reached a first great climax on Jan. 2, 1925. That was the date of the famous performance of Verdi's "Falstaff" in which the young American baritone, hardly known then outside of New York, made national news by stopping the show.

Although his importance at the Metropolitan kept growing at a great rate, Tibbett found time for movie, radio, and concert work besides. Persons who never have been inside an opera house have seen him in their own picture theaters and have heard his voice at their own hearthsides. Lawrence Tibbett is one of the three or four most widely known singers in America.

In appearance Tibbett is a great mustached giant of a man whose usual seriousness dissolves into merriment with the greatest of ease. His programs partake of his dual nature. Music of a profound sort is likely to be succeeded by a performance [with gestures] of that opus about the four and twenty blackbirds. Let us hope he has a great many light songs up his sleeve Tuesday night.

MAJOR PARK STAR

The Grant park concerts will present another major musical personality this week—Lawrence Tibbett. When he sings on Tuesday night, the baritone will be assisted by the Chicago City Opera orchestra, under Leo Kopp.

Hails Success of Ravinia and Urges Changes

polished delivery were always the evidences of Ravinia's operatic supremacy.

Until each public concert is preceded by two generous rehearsals, the quality of the symphonic music at Ravinia will continue to compromise Louis Eckstein's unforgotten ideals. Its quality also will suffer—though this is not quite so all-important—until the body of string tone is increased by the addition of several more violinists.

The répertoire, as I have indicted, proved to be fairly satisfactory this summer. Not that no grumbling took place, of course. Many oldsters thought there was too much new music, and youngsters thought there was too much old music. This may merely indicate that a happy medium was reached and maintained.

On the other hand, it may be that twenty-four concerts of assorted orchestral pieces, ancient and modern, constitute a meaningless kind of "festival." The Berkshire festival attracts interest with six such concerts, to be sure. But the level of performance by Serge Koussevitzky and the Boston Symphony orchestra surpasses anything Ravinia has yet aspired to in its wildest dreams.

The proper solution of Ravinia's difficulties may require the program committee to give up the notion of a summer of scattered divertissements. How about a Beethoven cycle, or a Brahms cycle, or a Strauss or Stravinsky cycle? Instead of forcing each guest conductor into a general répertoire, why not let him devise some schedule with a unified aim? Such a procedure would help Ravinia to seize upon the public imagination. It would give each conductor a chance to test his powers in a musical undertaking close to his own temperament.

And, extending the idea a little farther, is it idle to dream of the restoration of opera and ballet? Ballet first, perhaps, because it is cheaper. Certainly the mounting of an interesting ballet program would not have to cost much more than this summer's lifeless "gala" concert decorated with singers most of whom never would be missed.

Opera, to be sure, is more expensive. I think that the public would respond well, however, to concert performances of certain operas—operas in which the stage picture is less vital than the music. With some foresight, extremely good singers can be found whose price is miles below that of the top "name" artists. Some of these, I might whisper, are better than some of the leading celebrities.

It is not my business to suggest ways of financing an expanded régime at Ravinia, and I must confess I am glad it is not. I only know from the history of other summer music projects that a static institution quickly loses public respect and support. Ravinia must move forward. The men and women who work for it are possessed of miraculous loyalty and generosity, however, and they will find the way.

Notes of Music and Musicians

Residents of the North Shore will get their own special concert series next season. For a North Shore series committee first made sure through a poll that such a plan was a desirable one and then went ahead to secure the necessary hall and artists.

Fritz Kreisler and his violin will open the set of five concerts on Oct. 7. Two opera singers will be heard from next—Hertha Glatz, contralto, on Nov. 22, and Donald Dickson, baritone, on Dec. 12. Both have appeared with the present resident opera company. Argentinita and her ensemble will present a program of their fascinating Spanish dances on Feb. 14, and Arthur Rubinstein, Polish pianist, will bring the series to a close on April 2.

All concerts will be held in the Highland Park High school, 300 Vine avenue. Subscriptions can be ordered from the North Shore Series, Box 584, Highland Park.

Four programs will conclude the summer quarter series of organ recitals at the University of Chicago's Rockefeller Memorial chapel this week. The concerts begin at 7 o'clock and last for approximately a half hour. Andrew Wherle will play tonight, Harold Cobb on Tuesday, S. E. Gruenstein on Wednesday, and Roxane Breen on Thursday.

Hans Muenzer, for many years concertmaster of the Chicago theater orchestra, returns to that theater this week to appear in the stage show. Recently he relinquished his position as violin instructor at the University of Iowa's school of music to prepare for a European concert tour. His selections during the current engagement include Mendelssohn's "On Wings of Song," Kreisler's "Tambourin Chinois," and the Kreisler arrangement of de Falla's "Danse Espagnole."

The American Opera society will award the David Bispham Memorial medal to Edward Collins, Chicago pianist and composer, at its first meeting in the fall. He merits the honor for his as yet unproduced opera, "A Daughter of the South." An aria from it was premièred at Grant park by Olive Arthur, soprano, and the Bainum band on July 26.

The Illinois Symphony orchestra will play its next to the last concert in the Washington Park amphitheater, Wilmette, on Wednesday night. Albert Goldberg again will conduct, the soloist for this week being Bernice Rickman, soprano. A widely assorted program includes the following items: Sinigaglia's Overture, "Le Barruffe Chiozzote"; Dohnányi's Suite for Orchestra, opus 19; "The Last Spring," by Grieg; Dance of the Buffoons, from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "The Snow Maiden," and Tschaikowsky's "Capriccio Italien." Miss Rickman, who is heard weekly on W-G-N broadcasts, will sing two selections, Micaela's aria from Bizet's "Carmen" and "Una Voce Poco Fa" from Rossini's "The Barber of Seville."

In three of the local park bandshells free concerts will be given as usual this week. Itemized as succinctly as possible, they include one by Glenn Cliffe Bainum and his band in Lincoln park tonight, with Olive Arthur, soprano; Robert Speaker, baritone, and Earl Payne, trombonist, as soloists, and two by Oscar Anderson and his band—in Jackson park tonight and Garfield park Friday, with Marian Carlisle, soprano, and Dan Baker, tenor, as soloists. All concerts start at 8 o'clock.

Another opera will be offered tonight by the American Opera company in Ilgair park, 6200 Touhy avenue. This time it is Verdi's "La Traviata." The featured singers will be Esther Block as Violetta, Irwin Burrichter as Alfredo, and Martin Boughan as the elder Germont. Other singers in the cast are Alma Bedrit, Frank Lakowski, Dan Wheeler, Charles Hax, Julia Skrzydil, and Benjamin Miller. Next Sunday the group will present an Operatic Album — excerpts from "Aïda," "Faust," and "Madam Butterfly."

For the benefit of those who did not see the announcement, these columns repeat the news about the Chicago City Opera company's public auditions. The first resident opera company to sponsor such an event, the organization has appointed an auditions committee, with Mrs. William Cowen as chairman, to manage it.

Any singer in the United States is eligible. Candidates will be required to sing an operatic aria of their own choice from the stage. The public will be invited to the auditions, but judging will be by an impartial committee from which all vocal teachers have been barred. At least one male and one female singer will be selected for appearances during the coming season.

Those who wish to apply for a hearing should write immediately for an appointment with Mrs. William Cowen, care of the Chicago City Opera company, 20 North Wacker drive. All applications must be in her hands by Sept. 23.

A Negro choral organization of forty voices, "The Exclusive Sharps and Flats," will provide the musical program for the Lundy Memorial services to be held today in the Quaker cemetery near McNabb. The program commemorates the 150th anniversary of the birth and the 100th anniversary of the death of Benjamin Lundy, pioneer abolitionist editor, who is buried in the cemetery.

"DARK EYES."
Produced by Milo Films.
Directed by V. Tourjansky.
Presented at the World Playhouse.

THE CAST.

Ivan Petrov .... Harry Baur
Tania .... Simone Simon
Karpof .... Jean-Pierre Aumont
Roudine .... Jean Max

The dark eyes to which the title of this absorbing new French production refers are those of Simone Simon, as you have already guessed. Piquant little Simone is here discovered in the troublesome business of growing out of adolescence into maturity. At the beginning of the picture you rub your eyes at the sight of her, for she looks not a day over 15. Within a brief space, however, she bumps into Life [decidedly to be spelled with a capital L], and emerges from the collision much, much wiser—though, fortunately, no sadder.

Simone lives in Moscow with her doting papa [Harry Baur]. Surrounded by every sort of luxury, she believes her father to be engaged in a legitimate business. How little she knows of his double nature, alas! In reality he is maitre d'hotel [head waiter to you and me] in a super-elegant café. His luxurious income he receives from supervising the use of a private dining room, where elaborate seduction scenes—with a background of champagne and a Russian gypsy chorus and band—are evidently a nightly routine.

Mr. Baur keeps his home life neatly separated from his professional activity until—well, you can guess how it would be when Simone is so enticing, and when a fabulously wealthy banker is ready to spend a few thousand rubles on her behalf at her father's establishment. [Only he doesn't know who Simone's father is.]

Popping in and out of the story comes Jean-Pierre Aumont, handsome and vivacious young heart throb. Nominally it is his duty to teach Simone to play the piano. His attention is easily distracted, however, and Simone doesn't have time to learn much music, beyond the ability to play "Dark Eyes" just before the final fadeout. But at least she finally comes to see the advantage of young love, once the true nature of the banker's character has slowly dawned upon her.

It is a compelling story, though the telling of it is rather jerky. The characters are all sympathetically presented, even the banker being attractive enough to make Simone's misstep a plausible one.

All the principals are splendid. Simone is a poised and winning little actress. M. Aumont is an especially fine actor, making subtle use of communicative facial expressions and gestures. The young music teacher might have been a frightful sap, but M. Aumont makes him wholly likable. Jean Max's banker is a skilfully presented cosmopolite.

And, of course, Harry Baur tops all the rest. Here is one of the important artists in today's movie world. There are so many sides to the character he builds, and he projects them so movingly, that I can only urge you to see for yourself.

Farewell Tour.

Yvette Guilbert, famous diseuse, will make a farewell tour of America during the coming season. A similar trip planned last year was postponed owing to engagements abroad. The celebration of Mme. Guilbert's fiftieth year on the stage late in 1938 was one of the highlights of the Parisian season.

Machine Verse

A recent outgrowth of the Oxford Festival of Spoken Poetry is the scheme to compile a gramophone anthology of English verse. The idea came from a nun in New Zealand, who, having read Wallace B. Nichols' "The Speaking of Poetry" [dedicated to Edith Evans], wrote to the publishers regretting that no living example of Miss Evans' speaking of verse was available in the antipodes. Following up the suggestion, the Oxford festival produced an experimental volume of records some time ago. In it Miss Evans recited mainly lyrics and sonnets. The success of this volume is responsible for the preparation of a second, wherein the performer will be John Gielgud. When the anthology is complete the festival hopes to have recorded all types of poetry from all centuries.

English Premiere.

In the garden of Pollards, Loughton, Gluck's opéra-comique, "The Pilgrims of Mecca," was given its first performance in England not long ago. The libretto, which tells a story similar to that in Mozart's "Abduction from the Seraglio," was translated by Geoffrey Dunn. Mr. Dunn staged this al fresco production, assisted by Iris Lemare in the conductor's box, and Marjorie Whyte as concert master.

Three Choirs Fete

England's famous Three Choirs festival will be held in Hereford this year, the 219th of its kind. The event derives its name from the meetings of the choirs of the three cities of Gloucester, Worcester, and Hereford, held annually in the three cathedrals in rotation. The oldest festival of its kind in Europe, it was originated around 1715 and has continued with but a single interruption—the war years, 1914 to 1919.

Each festival begins on the first Sunday in September, making this year's opening date Sept. 3. This is followed by four days [Tuesday to Friday] of concerts, most of which are given in the cathedral, some elsewhere. The conductor is the cathedral organist of the town serving as host. A professional orchestra is recruited from London.

While the earliest festivals were limited to works by such English idols as Purcell and Handel, new music by contemporary composers is now annually premièred during the event. This year, for example, two choral works written especially for the festival will be heard, George Dyson's "Quo Vadis?" and A. Brent Smith's "Elegy." There will be new works by Gerald Finzi and William Henry Reed, and Ralph Vaughan Williams' Variants on "Dives and Lazarus" for harp and strings will be given its English première.

Stage's Three Queens Work Dutifully In Hot Manhattan

Gaines Is Doing Creditable Job in 'Abe Lincoln'

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK [Special].—The three queens of Broadway's summer season continue successfully with their theater engagements and refuse to let the heat get them down. Queen Katharine Cornell has made but one concession. She has extended her week-end holidays through August, running away after the Friday night performance of "No Time for Comedy" and making Marthas Vineyard next day, where she stays until Monday.

Queen Katharine Hepburn goes on selling "The Philadelphia Story" with consistent gusto, and dodging autograph gals in the theater entrance alley as best she can.

Queen Tallulah Bankhead worked herself into a slight fever last week over labor circles at Atlantic City. There is one thing about Tallulah—when she starts a fight she goes directly to the center of the ring. Both Miss Cornell and Miss Hepburn wrote protests and announced a determination to back their embattled actor associates to the last ditch. But they stayed at home. Miss Bankhead packed herself a bag and a makeup kit and left for the front with her war paint on and her eyes flashing. She needed the makeup kit so she could get herself into her 1890 getup on the way back to the city and be ready to step out on the stage of the National theater as the heroine of "The Little Foxes" when her entrance cue was spoken.

There is a tendency on the part of theater-minded visitors to the world's fair, I find, to overlook one of the more satisfying exhibits in the prevailing Broadway theater because the actor whose name has been associated with it from the beginning of its run is just now on a leave of absence. The actor is Raymond Massey and the play is Robert Sherwood's "Abe Lincoln in Illinois."

This, I think, though a natural and quite human reaction, is a mistake. The young man who is playing the Lincoln rôle is not only doing a particularly good job of understudying Mr. Massey and giving a finely tempered and dignified reading of the Lincoln character, but the real hero of this play happens to be its author, not its chief actor.

The Sherwood text is definitly the impressive part of any reading of "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." This fact permits Richard Gaines, who has taken over the rôle, to create practically the same illusion that Mr. Massey creates and build much the same historical and sentimental interest in the story. Physically he offers as perfect a picture of the ungainly one as Massey, and in reading he has copied the Massey intonations and inflections with such care that, with your eyes closed, it would be difficult to tell which of them was speaking.

Mr. Gaines is several years younger than Mr. Massey. He therefore is somewhat advantaged in the early scenes of the play in being better able to suggest Lincoln's youth. By the same token, Massey's Lincoln takes on stature and maturity with easier grace than Mr. Gaines' Lincoln.

But any visitor who has been passing the play by because of a fear that he would not be getting its full value with an understudy in the rôle is denying himself an inspiring evening in the theater without just cause. Which, I gather, is the way the members of the Playwrights' company feel about it, too. They announced last week that this fall a second company would be organized, with Mr. Gaines at its head, to take the Lincoln play through the south and such parts of the southwest as Mr. Massey will find it impossible to play next season.

If that assignment comes true it should be a stirring experience for Richard Gaines. He comes from the south, from Texas, in fact, and played his first parts with the Fort Worth Little Theater. He has done a little bit of a number of things during his combination career-hunting and job-hunting days. Once he thought he was going to be a pianist. Once he was afraid he was going to be a school teacher. Once he had an idea he would like to be a soldier, because he had an uncle who was a West Pointer. But he always came back to acting in one way or another.

Of all the tall youngsters who tried out for the understudy job he was the best. But he did not get a chance at the part until Massey went up to Toronto to have lunch with King George VI. and Queen Elizabeth and missed his plane home. That night very few in the audience walked out on Gaines and the crowd that stayed gave him something like an ovation at the play's end. The same thing has been happening every night since. Not only because, as I say, he gives an exceptionally convincing performance, but because "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" is sound and eloquent drama.

Among its other minor incidents and irritations the world's fair has been struggling along for three months without a theme song. Doesn't sound reasonable, but there it is. Nobody, I'm pretty sure, cared greatly except song writers. Anyway, last week announcement was made that a theme song had been chosen and had received the endorsement of Grover Whalen through Thomas J. Donovan, a presidential aid in charge of such matters.

The selected melody is one called "Yours for a Song," and has been the feature of the Aquacade program ever since Eleanor Holm first dove into the tank last spring. Martin Downey sings it and Miss Holm swims it. It wasn't written as a theme song, but it appears theme songs never are. They just happen.

One of the first commissions issued by the world's fair directors two years ago was assigned the late George Gershwin for a theme song. Mr. Gershwin obliged with a more or less weighty number entitled "Dawn of a New Day," with words by his brother Ira. Nothing much came of it.

Out in San Francisco there have been several theme songs written and endorsed, I'm told, but the crowds insist on clinging to "Hello, Frisco," which was something of a popular hit long before Treasure Island was filled in.

At the St. Louis fair years back they tried to popularize a number of properly accredited theme songs, but the crowds insisted on singing something called "Meet Me in St. Louis, Louis; Meet Me at the Fair." Chicago tried several, but finally settled for "Chicago, Chicago," unless my western informants have deceived me.

And now our own little circus starting with a Gershwin "Dawn of a New Day" winds up with a Billy Rose "Yours for a Song." Theme songs appear to be selected through a fusion of the old democratic spirit and a likable tune. "Yours for a Song" has a lilt, a swing, a rhythym which, when accentuated by the poetry of motion inspiring the swimming stars, easily catches and holds the fancy of the crowds.

To give "Yours for a Song" official standing two lines were inserted in the chorus. "Yours for a song, a song of romance," runs the lyric. "Yours for a song, if song has a chance—I've seen New York and I've seen the fair; no one but you could top the wonders there. I'm yours in the glow of the low handing moon," etc. No sillier than most popular songs. But it's the tune that caught them. That was written by Dana Suesse, the words by Billy Rose and Ted Fetter.

Incidentally, they fêted Gertrude Ederle at the Aquacade the other day. It was the thirteenth anniversary of her English channel swim. Now her contribution to the tank show is to dive in at one end and swim swiftly, powerfully, to the other end, turn, bow, and disappear. Due to an accident, her hearing is seriously affected. She follows the timing of the band leader's baton rather than the swing of the music. "But, I can always hear the applause," she assures Mr. Rose.

Contract According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

[Copyright: 1939: By Ely Culbertson.]

Last Sunday, I discussed the philosophy of, and requirements for, penalty doubles. Also, I explained that a "light" double was one which if unsuccessful, would still not give the doubled opponents a game. [One spade doubled, two diamonds doubled, etc.] Now we come to the procedure of the doubler's partner.

When partner has made a light double, the opener should usually pass when his hand is of balanced distribution [containing no void or singleton]. He will then have at least two cards in the opponents' suit and will be able to lead trumps, preventing declarer's making his small trumps separately by ruffing. The only time the double is taken out on balanced hands is when the opener has a strong six card major suit and the minimum in honor tricks.

For example, partner's light double should not be left in when the opening bid was made on

♠8 6 5 ♥A K Q 7 4 2 ♦6 3 ♣K 8

A rebid of two hearts is preferable.

The opener should usually take out the double with a void or singleton in the opponents' suit, for in those cases his distribution is unbalanced and aided by two and one-half honor tricks in partner's hand is likely to produce a game.

The greatest opportunities for paying doubles occur when partner has made an opening bid of one no trump and an opponent is so foolish as to overcall. The no trump bid gives so much information that the responder can gauge the defensive possibilities of the combined hands with precision never known before the Culbertson no trump bid was introduced.

Consider the following case:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 no trump	2 clubs

East holds ♠K 4 2 ♥10 7 5 3 ♦K J ♣10 6 5 4

He knows that West has at least four honor tricks and at least three clubs. Therefore, East-West have between them five honor tricks to their opponents' three, and seven clubs to their opponents' six. A big penalty is almost sure, whereas with only five honor tricks and no long suit, a no trump game for East and West would be unlikely. So East doubles.

The no trump bidder does not take out a penalty double of this type, for he has already given exact information on his hand and must assume that the doubler knows what he is doing.

A tight double announces that the doubler is convinced the opponents can be defeated enough to compensate for any makable contract, and is willing to assume the risk on the basis of his own hand and what information he has already received about his partner's hand.

A tight double is based upon an actual count of defensive winners.

1. Count your honor tricks, exclusive of trump tricks.
2. Count as winners guarded honors in the opponents' trump suit and whenever they are sure to develop ruffers.
3. Add the minimum number of honor tricks shown by partner's bids.
4. Subtract the total from thirteen, the difference being the trick-taking limit of the opponents. If this limit is at least two tricks short of the opponents' contract—and if you cannot expect a greater gain at a bid of your own—make a penalty double.

A tight double should rarely be taken out by partner, even though his hand is a blank. The doubler has not asked for any assistance other than that which his partner may previously have guaranteed by bidding.

But the tight double should be taken out when the doubler's partner has seriously deceived the doubler by a previous bid—such as making an opening bid with only one or one and one-half honor tricks in his hand—or when his distribution is freakish and his previous bidding has not revealed this fact. Holding a freak hand may justify taking out a penalty double in one of the following cases:

1. When a more advantageous trick score can be made, but the doubler was not aware of it.
2. When the doubler is evidently counting on tricks which his partner knows he cannot win.

An opponent's three no trump contract should be doubled when the defenders hold four honor tricks, but rarely will they have this opportunity. Three no trump is a contract seldom attempted without at least six honor tricks in the combined hands of declarer and dummy, leaving only two and one-half or three honor tricks as the portion of the defenders.

The bidding [East-West vulnerable]:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	4 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

West opens the heart king. Can South fulfill his contract? If so, how?

Answer: Yes, the four spade contract can be fulfilled as follows: South ruffs the opening lead with a high spade, then leads a low spade and covers whatever card West plays. The heart jack is then returned and South discards a diamond or a club. West wins and knocks out one of South's aces. Dummy is again put in with a trump and the heart ten is allowed to ride, declarer again discarding. West wins and can knock out South's other ace, but now the heart nine is established in dummy. South reënters dummy with a trump and discards on the heart nine.

If South fails to ruff opening lead with an honor or the nine spot, he can be prevented from gaining the necessary three entries to dummy. Suppose South ruffs the opening lead with a low trump and leads another low trump to dummy. West, by putting up the ten, can hold dummy to two entries, because South will now have only one trump that is lower than the eight and seven.

A player should not double an adverse three no trump contract, as a rule, unless he holds [or knows from the bidding that his partner holds] a leadable long suit and sufficient stoppers and entries to establish and cash it before declarer has time to win nine tricks.

When such a suit is available, value the defensive power of the hand as follows:

1. Decide upon the suit to be opened and estimate its combined length and strength in the partnership hands.
2. Determine how many stoppers declarer's side probably holds in the suit.

You will need as many entries as the number of declarer's stoppers, plus one.

The opening lead may be counted as one of the required entries. The other entries must be honor tricks which the doubler holds or which he can safely assume that his partner holds. Also counted as an entry is a guarded honor in a suit which is one of declarer's strongest and which he will therefore have to establish.

Neither a count of honor tricks nor accurate valuation of a long suit may be entirely relied upon in doubling a no trump bid. When declarer's side has a long established suit, he may be able to run off nine tricks before the defenders ever get the lead to make use of their own long suits or honor tricks. When there is a wide open minor suit, whether it has been bid by declarer's side or not, the prospective doubler must consider the fact that it may be the basis of a no trump contract.

No matter how good a chance you seem to have of defeating the opponents' no trump contract, unless you have the opening lead yourself you must take your partner's expected lead into consideration. If he is likely to make a lead which will nullify your chance of defeating the contract, you must refrain from doubling.

In the absence of any bidding information your partner will probably open his best suit against the doubled no trump contract, but if he has no fairly good suit of his own he will open some suit which has been bid by declarer's partner. His reason for doing this is that you would not have a safe double if there were great danger of dummy's long suit being run against you; therefore, you must have strength in that suit. In doubling you must therefore anticipate the danger or the possibility of a lead through dummy's suit and should refrain from doubling if you cannot stand that lead and yet defeat the contract, but should double more freely if that is the lead you most desire.

When dummy has bid two suits, partner's obvious choice will be the weaker of these two suits—usually the one which dummy bids second.

A penalty double, like an opening bid, is based largely upon defensive honor tricks. With nothing but length and strength in the opponents' trump suit one should almost never make a penalty double, particularly a light double. Partner may take the double out, and will be crucified at his own contract because your only strength is in the suit in which he is not interested.

Porter Revival

"The Two Angry Women of Abingdon," sole surviving known work of Henry Porter, a sixteenth century dramatist, was presented as part of the 1939 edition of the Oxford Summer Diversions, whose guiding light is John Masefield, England's poet laureate. The Elizabethan comedy had Judith Masefield and Désirée Stevens in the title rôles. Also programmed on the English university's presentation were three ballads based on Russian, English, and Mexican folk tales: "Russlan and Ludmilla," "King Marc of Cornwall or the Love-Gift," and "Donna Marina or the King and Queen of Paynala." Mme. Nadine Nicolaeva-Legat was the choreographer. In the interval between the ballets Mr. Masefield gave a first reading of his recently completed "Lines in the memory and honour of Lascelles Abercrombie and William Butler Yeats, two poets lately dead."

Fats Waller on Sherman's Swing Throne

"Fats" Waller, rotund living definition of swing, has established himself as the Hotel Sherman's patron saint of boogie-woogie rhythms. Carrying on the Krupa-Basie tradition of jumping jive in the Panther room, Waller illustrates perfectly the reason for such explosive interest in swing music—a fundamentally sound musicianship dressed up for public showing in a highly personalized and equally sound and exciting showmanship.

This is a midwest debut for Waller, and he clinches his success with an amiable microphone personality. He is admirably supported by the best floor show of the Panther room season. Another illustration of expert musicianship turned into swing channels is the hilarious harp playing of Casper Reardon. Considering the traditionally celestial nature of the instrument, Reardon makes it seem probable that the song title should be "And the Angels Swing."

Equally novel is the adagio work of the tiny Tryon sisters, a dance team with an entertaining difference. The other contribution from the feminine contingent is the singing of beautiful Dale Evans.

Frank Payne emcees the show in the voices of many radio and show notables; Carl Marx, the clown, carries on as usual, and Muggsy Spanier continues to provide the popular river boat ragtime music.

This is farewell day at the Trianon ballroom for Griff Williams and his orchestra. Another south side favorite, Bill Carlsen, comes back on Thursday for an engagement of a number of weeks. Dancing today will start at 5:30 p. m.

Bill Carlsen.

Dick Jurgens, who is establishing himself more firmly each week at the Aragon on the north side, is busy plugging the product of another composer in his band. First it was Eddy Howard's "My Last Good-by." Now it is Pianist Ronnie Kemper's "It's a Million to One You're in Love."

A familiar, but altered Chez Paree will open Aug. 31 for the new season, with Harry Richman and his orchestral sidekick, Abe Lyman, heading the reception-entertainment committee. Redecorations during the summer have given the Chez a new dress without pointless alterations. One innovation that will answer the requests of a good many patrons is the Elbow Inn, a swank little "conversation grill." Finished in turquoise and fawn, with white foliage decorations, the room will provide a quiet and intimate room for diners who seek a calm pace between shows. The main café will have a new indirect lighting system, new murals, and new colors.

In the show will be De Angelo and Porter, dance team, and Rose Blane, singer. Fred Evans has the Adoreables well trained in their new ensemble numbers.

"Musico" goes around and around and now it is at Old Heidelberg. The midevening show on Tuesday and Friday nights is devoted to the musical guessing game. Other entertainment at the inn includes Les Summerfield and the octette, Eleanor Lutton, soprano, and Old Heidelberg ensemble.

The "slide" music of Will Osborne's orchestra will be the new attraction at the beach walk of the Edgewater Beach hotel, starting Friday night. Osborne's band replaces Lawrence Welk. The new floor show will be called the Dude Ranch revue, with Dick Rogers, Lynn Davis, Elaine Howard, and the Harriet Smith Lovely Ladies featured.

Cardini, the artist of legerdemain who specializes in the odd activities of cards and cigarets, will bring his tricks and his English accent into the Palmer House Empire room again Thursday for the new edition of the summer revue. Joe Reichman, first man to apply the St. Vitus principle to the pianoforte, continues his popular reign on the bandstand.

Returning also for this show are Harrison and Fisher, dancers. Peter Higgins, Irish tenor; Gertrude Simmons, specialty dancer; the Abbott girls, and Phil Dooley's swing band fill out the program.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Unofficially, but certainly, it will be Hal Kemp's southern drawl welcoming Drake patrons to the reopened Gold Coast room on a night early in October. . . . That Wayne King comeback may be at a spot much farther north than the Drake. . . . And Duke Ellington's loop debut is being negotiated for a later-than-planned date, probably New Year's Eve. . . . Doc Lawson, an unknown here but a magnet in the ballroom circuits of the midwest, may get a fall chance at national fame in Chicago's Trianon and Aragon. . . . Henry Gendron's popular orchestra has shifted to Villa Venice. . . . The Colony, which opens Sept. 15 with three weeks of Dwight Fiske, the old King Lear, may be the midwest debut spot of a Cuban dancer currently sensational in New York. Nick Dean, co-manager of the Colony with Golfer Sonny Goldstone, spotted her on a recent vacation tour. . . . Al Nicholas is back at the piano with Milt Herth in the Blue Fountain room of the La Salle, Bernie Leighton, schoolboy pianist, having returned to Enric Madriguera's orchestra at the Bon Air country club. . . . The Embassy boys are continuing at the Balinese room, where specialty acts will be resumed at the time the Drake reopens its Gold Coast room.

BEACH WALK TEAM

Vaudeville

A violin virtuoso, Hans Muenzer, will appear as headliner on the stage of the Chicago theater, where he once used to play as concertmaster of the theater orchestra. The stage bill also presents Rudy Wagner, pianist; the dance team of Wally and Verdyn Stapleton; Owen McGiveney, famous protean performer; Whitey Roberts; the Oxford Boys, a novelty trio, and the Evans ballet. The feature picture, "Stanley and Livingstone," is being held over from last week.

The unusually fine vaudeville bill at the Palace theater is playing a second week there. It consists of Clifford Fischer's elaborately staged "Folies Bergere." The new screen feature is "I Stole a Million," starring George Raft and Claire Trevor.

Verne Buck, his orchestra, and the Dancing Sweethearts are staging another spectacular production based on selections from a famous musical show at the Oriental theater. This week it is Victor Herbert's "The Red Mill." Among other vaudeville acts are Joe Besser, comedian; Dolly Kay, "Empress of Song"; Jans and Lynton, dancers; Barry, Breen, and Wyler; Stanley Greene, and many others. The double feature screen attractions are "Tarzan Finds a Son" and "Maisie."

At the State-Lake theater the vaudeville acts on display are Edio Rio and Brothers, Paul and Pettit, Flo May, the Novak Sisters, Chick and Lee, Billy Farrell, and the Keller Sisters. "Five Came Back," with Chester Morris and Lucille Ball, is the current film.

Ada Leonard stars this week at the Rialto theater in an exotic new production, "Cairo Nights." Other beauties appearing with her include "Peaches," Marie Voe, Louise Miller, and Nancy Adams. On the screen is "It Could Happen to You," with Stuart Erwin and Gloria Stuart.

Italian Festival.

The Accademia Musicale Chigiana has organized a festival in Siena which will present exclusively the works of Antonio Vivaldi. Alfredo Casella, the contemporary Italian composer, will direct the series of performances to last from Sept. 16 to 21.

Berkshire Fete to Sponsor a Music School

During the recent Berkshire Symphonic festival announcement was made of a musical academy that is to become a part of the eastern project next summer. The school will be situated at the festival site, Tanglewood, Mass., and will open in July, 1940.

Designed "for living and working in music" the academy was conceived by Dr. Serge Koussevitzky, conductor of the Boston Symphony orchestra, as neither a "conservatory or a summer school, in any accepted sense." "A large student body will have the opportunity for a life in music, not only by discussion and example, but through participation, and in association with a great orchestra and its conductor." A smaller group will devote its time to particular fields. "An intelligent interest in the subject involved" is the chief entrance requirement.

In its first year the academy will continue for six weeks, culminating in the festival concerts, played by the Boston ensemble. It is planned in two sections, the first of which includes advanced instruction to a limited number of specially qualified students. A class in orchestral conducting under the direction of Dr. Koussevitzky will be the main feature, but there will also be available individual instruction in vocal or instrumental study under a faculty which will include thirty members of the Boston Symphony.

A second section of the academy is described as a "general session for a larger school." Each student will belong either to the festival chorus or to the school orchestra. General sessions, compulsory for all, will be held twice a day except Saturdays and Sundays, and will extend through the festival period. These will be devoted to lectures on broad phases of musical development, form and style; classes in folk dancing and choral singing under the direction of G. Wallace Woodworth, conductor of the Harvard Glee club and Radcliffe society. All students will be admitted to the festival concerts and to "a certain number" of rehearsals. The chorus will participate in the festival after a period of preparation under Dr. Koussevitzky.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
AUGUST 20, 1939.

Below: Little Barbara Knowlson may not have understood the finer points of the game, but she certainly was enthusiastic about a recent polo match at the Oak Brook Polo club, near Hinsdale. She may be among the spectators again this afternoon, as matches are held every Sunday at 4 o'clock.

Above: Mrs. Norman B. Johnson is a busy young mother of two. The little girl is Lucia, and the baby is Norman Stirling. The children's paternal grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. William B. Johnson of Evanston. The young Johnsons also live in Evanston.

Below: Judy Atwood looks just like a dressed up walking doll as she strolls down a Glencoe sidewalk. Her mother, Mrs. Philip T. Atwood, is an active member of the Kenilworth center of the Infant Welfare society. Undoubtedly some day young Judy will follow in her mother's footsteps.

Below: Mrs. Albert O. Snite and her infant daughter, Elizabeth Osborne Snite, who was named both for her mother and father, live in Highland Park. The baby is the Snites' first child. Her maternal grandfather is Wallace E. Peirce of Plattsburg, N. Y.

Below: Tiny Alden Richardson Campbell gets plenty of attention from his pretty mother, Mrs. William Oberne Campbell, and from his devoted great-grandmother, Mrs. Clarence B. Waite of Evanston. The baby was named for Mrs. Waite's father, the late Robert Richardson, who was the youngest colonel in the Confederate army, as well as for another of his forbears, John Alden.

It's Vichy, and Travelers Ask Where Next?

By Cousin Eve.

VICHY, FRANCE.

Paris was heart-breakingly fair this summer. One kept thinking, well Babylon was beautiful, too, yet look at her now! And such a Paris season! Ball and garden parties without end and the crazy midnight races at Longchamps, where the geegees run under spotlight and international society goes en masse.

It doesn't make sense, or does it, with a terrific European war buzzing about like an angry horsefly, that this should be the gayest and most lavish Paris since the war? That women should drag their divinest tulle ball gowns over muddy lawns. That the president of France, his ministers [who all much need sleep], the foreign envoys and visiting princes should sit there in the rain, watching faraway horses tiny as mice, when they might be comfortably tucked up in bed?

But unreasonable things are usually the most popular, specially when followed by cabaret dancing and supper. Probably the French are right. They try to forget life's disagreeables, among which are the white war, or economic war, now waging, with red war, or war of annihilation, hovering in the offing.

One missed the gay times in Paris by sampling the more imposing routs of London. London with its aura of royalty, its mundane magnificence. Londoners take themselves seriously, and how! But one admires them much after seeing how they live down their climate.

There are people who say that if only the British had a sense of humor there wouldn't be any European war. No need for all the steel dugouts, airplanes, superdreadnaughts, and cannon fodder.

Great numbers of English are racing over to France this year, and the French, instead of singing the old song, "Here Are the Englishes as Flat as Sandwiches," were most cordial, and the union jack is hanging here, there, and everywhere. Paris never looked lovelier. Some big beauty expert had certainly done a good job. There, too, at my venerable Hotel Wagram that has faced the Tuileries gardens for 200 years I was lucky and got my small room under the roof. Most people would find it shabby and prefer some pink suite at a more flamboyant inn. But I think it perfect with its gray wood paneled in flowers, set-in mirrors, and huge dressing room. It's exciting, too, with a phone that clucks like a hen and a clock up high in the wall that squeaks like a mouse. And when it rains one hears it at night rushing melodiously down the mansard.

The outlook is beyond anything. Off on the left lies the great mass of the Louvre, town house of ancient French kings. Across the gardens gleams the dome of Napoleon's tomb, with Eiffel tower raising its slim waisted figure. On the far right is the Arch of Triumph, a high and noble gateway at the "Etoile," or Star, formed by many wide, tree shaded avenues on the threshold of the Bois de Boulogne. Arriving by night, I saw from my balcony a sight of sights. There was the full moon sailing across a luminous sky. And keeping her company was a boy friend, Mars, the evening star, huge, red as blood and flaming nearer the earth than for many thousand years.

And as I gazed at hoary old Lady Moon dancing across the night with an angry gigolo and shedding her silver impartially over all the earth, a vast flotilla of black bombing planes passed over the sky between Mars and me. It was like a dark old Chinese print of wild swans flying somewhere with terrific energy and power, and one quailed at the thought of the death and destruction carried by those black wings.

But on the whole, one hears almost zero of war in France. After hearing nothing else in England, it is decidedly restful. The French have paraphrased Senator Borah's remark and say that "Great Britain expects every Frenchman to do his duty." But as a rule they accept the situation in a sporting manner with the usual shrug and: "It's all politics."

Where to go for August and not be trapped or interned? One's friends in the various foreign offices say that it's fifty-fifty. Quite a few Americans are in Switzerland, which is neutral, and over the grapevine one hears that Arthur Heun is at Murren, high up in the Alps, where he has gone these many years. Mrs. Parmalee McFadden and her girls are regulars, too, at Murren, 6,000 feet above the sea.

I decided on Vichy. The train buzzes down in four hours, the Parc is one of the best hotels in Europe, and I love sitting out in front on the narrow sidewalk in wicker chairs. At one end is a little, low drinking fountain with a sign above, "Dog's Bar." The town is bubbling with people as well as water, and every other person drags a nice little bow wow on a leash.

Even comtesse de Chambrun, wife of the famous general, ex-governor of Morocco, leads a little Japanese spaniel. Mme. de Chambrun [she was born a Longworth of Cincinnati] is a brilliant writer and student of Shakespeare, and tells me that her successful play, "The Great Will" reopens at the Paris Odeon in September. The comtesse went on an American lecture tour in March and was much amused at the literati of Baltimore who wanted to hear her Shakespeare lecture and felt they couldn't afford it. When told that it would cost them only one dollar they revived and engaged the celebrated Parisian blue stocking.

The life of Vichy is orderly and fascinating. The town itself is a solid aggregation of hotels and shops with a few villas, set among beautiful trees on the banks of the rushing, murmuring Allier river. The hotels are of every size, sort, and quality, for every purse, and some of the tiny ones in back streets, with neat little graveled gardens and courts, make one wish for the stamina to go try one of them.

Down the center of everything runs the park, with six wide, flower-edged walls, lined with tall plane trees. At the top is the casino with its opera house, its theater, and its salles de jeu, or gambling rooms. Spaced in the park are several springs. And these potent waters of Vichy can only be sipped by order of a medico, and precious little at that. At the foot of the park lies the bath establishment, one of the finest in the world. There, much of this "too, too solid flesh" seems "to melt, thaw and resolve itself," etc., and women of fashion by its aid are able to keep their "figgers."

My first call was to poser une carte, as the French say, at the bureau of M. Ivan Loiseau, the charming executive who runs the company that runs the affairs of Vichy. M. Loiseau has more people waiting in his outer office than any Chicago doctor; people from the world over. It is in his power to make one's stay at Vichy delightful, to call one's attention to this and that, to happily pass the time of day.

For there are golf clubs at Vichy. There is a race track which draws thousands. They give opera magnificently, for they have the cash to carry on, and one hears great novelties that aren't given in Paris, New York, or Chicago. Thus I am going to Lara's "Messalina," to "Boris," with Kipnis singing the title rôle, and last week I heard Gluck's "Orpheus and Eurydice," beautifully arranged and orchestrated. The rôle of Orpheus was sung by Mme. Maria Powers.

It's exciting to go to the opera here. First you array yourself as opulently as possible. Upon arrival you step into the tax department and pay your considerable taxes which seem to include a war tax. Then you proceed until a stout usheress seats you, whereupon you pay her. She then puts a footstool under your and your guest's feet, showing the world thereby that your tip was some tip. [Six cents in our country.] The French like their opera in small doses. Thus, Orpheus was given in three acts and six scenes, which seems reasonable. But between each scene, and between each act, the entire audience dribbles out and plays Boule for twenty minutes. Then it dribbles back again. So when the second act is over and you have seen all the goings on in hell with the dashing red ballet, etc., it's then half after eleven. There still remains another hour of Orpheus followed by a glorious finale with Ravel's "Bolero," which puts your bedtime story off until 2 a. m. If the French didn't string their opera out so much, Americans would go more, perhaps.

Bruno Walter comes soon to lead the symphonic concert, and there will be some marvelous ballets as well.

One night this week we went to hear Ray Ventura and his Collegians, a group of twenty-two frolicsome Frenchmen giving an evening of jazz. The house was absolutely packed and in the stage box sat His Excellency Giaoli the Pasha of Marrakech, the head of one of those Mohammedan black races one hears of in Morocco, so handsome and of such ancient lineage.

The entertainment was full of clowning, but not lacking in interest, although French jazz hasn't the honeyed cadences of ours. The top of the evening was a drole fellow, master of clog dancing, who portrayed with his feet the activities of a French railroad train racketing merrily along. Interspersed with ear splitting whistles, it was as good a number as I've seen for a long time [for those who know train travel in France].

We haven't been driving much this season, as nobody has brought a motorcar along. Motors are the first things they grab in case of war. And the owner gets paid when and if the war is won on this side.

The drivers are enchanting in this part of the world, if one can spare the time for caring. Dr. Biner, who is the medico for most Americans, keeps his patients walking all over the place for two hours daily. Violet, Lady Hardinge, one of London's beauties and a god-daughter of Queen Alexandra, trots with me, and we go antiqueing and inspecting new fall frocks. The great houses in Paris have small shops here and do a lot of business. Money burns holes in one's pockets and there's no denying that taking the waters of Vichy somehow frazzles up the nerves. For that reason there are three open air orchestral concerts daily, and the strains of this music can be heard from afar, bursting out from the thick trees of the park.

French people of all classes predominate this year. Sitting in groups all over the park they bring their babies, their dogs, their sewing and thrill with the excitement of it all. The allées are dotted with picturesque figures, sheiks from Tunisia in white bed sheets, African clerics in the heavy cowl, dark skinned African natives from France's far flung colonies.

At the park are all the Americans and British and that handsome couple, Prince and Princess Aly Khan, he the only son and heir of the Aga Khan, she the daughter of a hundred earls, tall, slim and fair. The Aga Khan, head of a great sect in India, one of the world's richest men, is a tall old fellow, fine looking, and supposed each year to return to India and have a sacred swim in the Ganges. That holy river of India isn't what it used to be, and its yellow waters flowing to the sea are afloat with the bodies of cattle and dogs and not so inviting. They say that nowadays Aga Khan has water of the Ganges brought to Paris and put in the bath tub where he can immerse even better and not travel so far.

The maharajah of Kapurthala is another potentate of vast wealth who likes the high spots of the western world, London, Paris, Deauville, New York, and seldom goes home. His son, Prince Amarjit, is at the Parc and so are Peter Pleydell Bouveries, Lord Abdingdon, Arthur Dewar, Michael Hennessey, Mr. and Mrs. Simon Guggenheim, the Chilean minister to France, Mrs. McKay LeRoy of Chicago and Mrs. Henry Clews of New York.

Evenings at the Parc are quite amusing as dinner is late and dancing begins at half past nine. There are two new gigolos this year under M. Vigo, the chief of the service, and the same pretty blonde gigolette, Miss Betty. She prefers her Vichy career as a professional dancer to life with her people in the country in England.

Several American dowagers, who are regular visitors in August, subsidize the service and are ballroom belles. Only they have to pay for it, but not after each dance as the casuals do.

Lady Hardinge and I find that the golf club has lots of charm. We walk down to the banks of the Allier, step on a ferry boat and in five minutes are pushing through high reeds to the club pier. Here at the tea hour daily you meet the Harry Whighams, Chester Beattys and Mrs. John Converse of London, and innumerable French people. The place is beautifully floral, with varied views of the Bourbonnais mountains seen through tall poplars.

TO WED IN SEPTEMBER

Miss Eileen Marjorie Kelley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph D. Kelley of 5555 Sheridan road, whose engagement to William Wheeler Stark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Willliam S. Stark of Evanston, has been announced. Miss Kelley, a graduate of Lake Forest college, and Mr. Stark, a graduate of Northwestern university, will be married on Sept. 16.

Little Theater Wave Grips All of New England

BEVERLY, MASS.

With the little theaters now firmly established, the north shore is proving more popular than ever. This season leading stage and screen stars have played at Marblehead, Bass Rocks, Gloucester, Rockport, and Newbury. It seems like a revival of the old stock company days for one company to play week stands on the north shore, then go to the Cape or to Maine or reverse the programs.

This week "The Best Dressed Woman in the World" was the offering of the North Shore players at Marblehead with Norma Terris in the leading rôle. Next week Libby Holman, who has been playing on the Cove, comes to Marblehead in "Burlesque." At the Bass Rocks, this week Estelle Winwood was the star in "Susan and God." Anthony Ross and Natalie Farmer, who have played on the north shore in other seasons, also had leading parts in the production. For next week Norma Terris will be seen in "We Three" a new play by Reginald Lawrence, director of the Bass Rocks theater. All of the summer theaters have had good seasons.

Yachting has been one of the most popular of sports along the north shore this season. The peak was reached during race week at Marblehead when 2,769 boats started in the various classes, covering classes ranging from schooner yachts to sailing dories. The largest fleet in one day was nearly 500. All of the clubs, The Eastern, Corinthian, and Boston, cooperated in offering programs. Miss Nancy Leiter and John Clay Jr. of Chicago were among the winners. The racing along the north shore will continue until after Labor day.

One of the largest dog shows in the country will take place Saturday, Aug. 26 at the Myopia Hunt club at Hamilton under the auspices of the North Shore Kennel club. More than 2,500 entries are expected.

The annual midsummer flower show of the North Shore Horticultural society at Manchester this week was one of the most successful in years. All of the colonies were represented and among the principal winners was Mrs. William H. Moore of Rockmarge, Pride's Crossing, and Chicago.

After winning honors in the eastern championship at Rye, N. Y., and in other New York and New Jersey tennis tournaments, Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan is at her Manchester home and this week played in the annual tourney at the Longwood Cricket club in Brookline. Mrs. Fabyan is the second in national ranking among the women players of the country. Later on she will play in the Essex county club tourney at Manchester where Alice Marble, Helen Jacobs, Dorothy Wightman, Katherine Winthrop and many nationally known stars as well as players from abroad will take part.

Senator and Mrs. Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. are at their Beverly Cove home for the season.

Thomas Leiter of Chicago, who is passing the summer with his mother, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, at Edgewater House, Beverly farms, returned today from a cruise along the Maine coast in his yacht, the Valiant.

Miss Evelyn Lilly, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Clay Bartlett of Chicago and Beverly Cove has returned from a visit with friends in New York and Newport.

Mr. and Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris of Chicago have returned to their north shore home at Eagle Head, Manchester, after a trip to New York. The Morrises plan to be on the north shore through the late season.

Mr. and Mrs. W. W. Hale of Chicago have been enjoying a midsummer stay at the Hawthorne Inn at East Gloucester.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED

Miss Geraldine Seidel, whose parents, Dr. and Mrs. Sol W. Walder of 8217 Evans avenue, have announced her engagement to Philmore Brown. Mr. Brown is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of 1546 South Central Park avenue.

Doll Collection Taxes Space in Colborn House

By Ruth Billheimer.

PASADENA, CAL.

Hobbies may be fashionable, but that of two Chicagoans-turned-Pasadenans, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Colborn, has sentimental associations that make their collection of dolls among the most cherished of their household gods.

Mrs. Colborn is the former Miss Julia Rounds, daughter of Mrs. Frederick Childs Rounds, who also lives in Pasadena.

The doll collection had its beginning soon after Mr. and Mrs. Colborn were married. Mrs. W. O. C. Englar of Altadena, who was Mary French Field of Chicago, daughter of the late Eugene Field, presented to them a number of her father's famous collection of fifty dolls with the original markers they bore when exhibited at the Chicago World's Fair. On their wedding day, too, she had given the young couple the beloved poet's original manuscript of "The Gingerbread Dog and The Calico Cat."

The Colborns have added to the doll collection with pairs, families, and even tribes of dolls. Now they repose in open cases at one end of the living room and threaten to overflow even those commodious quarters.

Hollywood Bowl is popular these warm summer evenings. At the Friday night symphony last week when Artur Rodzinski of the Cleveland orchestra conducted, Mrs. Robert A. Millikan occupied her box and had as her guests Miss Louise Kellogg, formerly of Chicago, and Dr. Carl D. Anderson, Nobel prize winner. The Alson Clarks were guests of the Edwin C. Harwoods.

Other box holders for the season include the John L. Mothersheads, Carrie Jacobs Bond, Mrs. George Ellery Hale, Miss Margaret Rountree, Miss Grace T. Walker, Henry W. Dakin, and Dr. Raymond Mixsell, all Chicagoans of past years.

Friends of Mrs. Paul K. Richter of San Marino, who was aboard the ill-fated train wrecked last week in Nevada, were relieved to know that she was unhurt. She was returning alone from a trip east.

The John H. Hellwegs and their daughter, Patricia, left here Wednesday for Chicago and will make their headquarters at the South Shore Country club. Miss Hellweg was to take some of her water colors east for exhibition. The family will be away from their San Marino home until early November.

Dr. and Mrs. Wesley J. Woolston have just completed a summer home at Emerald bay, Laguna Beach, and are there for the month of August. With them are their children, the Harold S. Jurgensens, Sue and Bill Woolston.

Enjoying several weeks at Catalina is Miss Virginia Hannah, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Hannah of Highland Park, Ill. She is the guest of her cousin, Mrs. D. M. Renton [Isabel Cline of Kenilworth], after a trip west by way of the Canadian Rockies and Alaska.

Interest across the country attends the coming marriage of Miss Elinor Louise Evans of Santa Monica and Tulsa, to Norman Williamson Jr., grandson of W. K. Kellogg of Battle Creek, Mich., and Pomona, Cal. They will be wed in Tulsa Sept. 9.

Catholic Club Party to Assist Tubercular Poor

Saturday evening, Oct. 28, is the date selected by the Illinois Club for Catholic Women for its fourth annual tombola. This year the party will be a "dude ranch and barn dance" at the Morrison hotel, with "many novel features in the way of games and entertainment" promised by the organization.

Miss Violet Kilbane.
[Underwood & Underwood.]

Named for Mrs. Lewis, president of the club since its organization nearly a score of years ago, the fund provides milk, cod liver oil, clothing, and furniture to destitute tubercular patients of all creeds throughout the city. Last year 40,182 quarts of milk and 1,124 pints of cod liver oil, as well as large quantities of furniture and clothing, were distributed.

Die-Hards Keep Chicago Social Charter Alive

By Judith Cass.

With August drawing to a close and many Chicagoans out of town until after Labor day, summer activities are in the hands of a few die-hards who do not feel the need of a breathing spell before the onslaught of fall and winter affairs.

Among these are the members of the Inland Lakes Yachting association who will hold their big annual regatta this week, starting tomorrow, at Lake Minnetonka. The races will draw many contestants from Lake Geneva.

Aug. 20 to 26 is likewise the annual race week of the Sheridan Shore Yacht club, whose headquarters are at the Wilmette harbor. Richard Barnes is commodore of the club.

Today also marks the start of the national polo championship tournaments which are to be played through Sept. 4 at the Oak Brook Polo fields in Hinsdale. The intercircuit and the 12 goal championships will be determined during the three weeks, and the award will be made by the United States Polo association. The Huisaches from Houston, Tex., who won the national championship at Oak Brook two years ago, have qualified again this year by winning the southwest circuit championship. Other contenders in the intercircuit will be the Oak Brook team, winner in the central west circuit, and an eastern team.

Paul Butler, chairman of the Central Polo association, has been in charge of arrangements, which included obtaining accommodations for the visiting players and their ponies. He has been assisted by James A. Hannah, president of Oak Brook; Capt. Roy D. Keehn Jr., secretary, and William Calhoun, tournament manager.

At 1:30 o'clock this afternoon the Fort Sheridan team will play the Meadowbrook Polo club of Milwaukee at Fort Sheridan.

Of a more effeminate nature will be the events scheduled for Thursday. Miss Sally Jane Crowder, Miss Margot Webbe, and the Misses Nancy and Jean Wolcott will give a dinner-dance at the Indian Hill club for Miss Marilyn Martin and Miss Priscilla Blackett, who will make their debuts in the early part of September.

During the afternoon the faculty and present students of the Immaculate Conception academy in Davenport, Ia., will welcome new students and their mothers at a tea to be held in the Ivory room at Mandel Brothers'.

A sheet of brown paper covered with clever illustrations in red ink is the invitation to a barn dinner-dance to be given at 7 o'clock Saturday evening by Miss Linda Meyer and Miss Muriel MacChesney. The party will be held on the estate of Miss Meyer's mother, Mrs. Robert Tieken, and Mr. Tieken of Libertyville, and the drawings give complete directions of reaching the barn.

Saturday is the day of romance, with four weddings taking place at 4:30 o'clock. Miss Elizabeth Williamson Crawford, daughter of the David Anderson Crawfords of Golf, will become the bride of Nathaniel Edward Duval, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Duval of Philadelphia. The wedding will be attended only by members of the families, but a large reception will follow at the Glen View club. Miss Dorothy Warner will be Miss Crawford's only attendant, and Joseph Duval Jr. will be his brother's best man. After three weeks in the east Mr. Duval and his bride will be at home temporarily in Chicago.

At the same time the Church of Holy Spirit in Lake Forest will be the scene of Miss Dorothy Cameron Young's marriage to John Fielding Mercer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mercer. Miss Marjorie Mercer, the bridegroom's sister, will be maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaides will be Miss Louise Blossom, Miss Ann Loeber, Miss Lily Fleming, and Miss Phyllis Peter.

Bernard Gutman Jr. of St. Louis will be best man. Ushering will be John Harvey Dingle Jr. and S. Parker Johnston Jr. of Highland Park, William Keen of New Haven, and Fielding Mercer of Winnetka, the bridegroom's cousin.

Mrs. Midgley Beggs and Edward Z. Lewis have picked 4:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon as the time for their wedding. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Arthur T. Clark in the First Methodist church, Evanston, and will be followed by a reception at the Country Club of Evanston.

Mrs. Beggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Midgley Jr. of Worthington, O., will have her sister-in-law, Mrs.. Thomas Midgley III. of Birmingham, Mich., as maid of honor. Mrs. Harry Cody Jr. of Ripon, Wis., and Mrs. DeWitt Davis III., will be bridesmaids.

Mr. Lewis, the son of Edward Zuver Lewis of Evanston will have Dr. Clifford Grulee Jr. as best man. Sharing ushering duties will be Mr. Midgley, Mr. Cody, Mr. Davis, and William Adams. Mr. Lewis and his bride will be at home in Niles Center after a two weeks' wedding trip in the east.

The last wedding for 4:30 on Saturday is that of Miss Helen McCall, daughter of Richard McCall of Mount Carroll, Ill., to Frederick R. Colvert of Chicago. The Rev. Allan Zaun will officiate at the ceremony in the John Timothy Stone chapel of the Fourth Presbyterian church.

Miss Margaret Turley will act as maid of honor. Serving as bridesmaids will be Miss Ethel McCall, sister of the bride, and Miss Louise Colvert, sister of the bridegroom.

Mr. Colvert, the son of Mrs. Bertha R. Colvert of Attica, Ind., will have John Curry Hover of New York as best man.

Girls' Flying Club to Have Air Meet Today

By Betty Browning.

While the late Amelia Earhart was doing social work in Boston, she learned to fly. In Chicago, some thirty young women — housewives, secretaries, nurses, teachers, switchboard operators, an accountant, and a theater cashier—are following in her footsteps.

Mrs. Frances Anderson.

Today is their big day, the day that tests their mastery in flying. The annual air meet of the Chicago Girls' Flying club will be held at 2:15 o'clock this afternoon at the Palwaukee airport, on Milwaukee avenue near the River road.

Stunting by members and guest pilots, an air parade, a race from the airport to Naperville and back, "spot" landing, bombing, a pylon race, parachute, and several surprise events will be on the program.

For the benefit of non-flyers Miss Martha Jankun, president of the club, explained that a "spot" landing means setting one's plane down as near a given line as possible. Bombing calls for landing a sack of flour within a circle.

This type of program demands skill comparable to that of the best men pilots. In fact, the only soft moment in the afternoon will occur during the race to Naperville, when the flyers will pass low over the Edward sanatorium to let the patients share in the interest of the event.

"We've practiced for months for this show. We don't let any one fly who hasn't a good, safe margin of flying hours," was Miss Jankun's comment on this schedule. Then she added with a little smile: "So far no member ever has crashed—knock on wood!"

Miss Martha Stadler and Miss Lyda Christensen will make parachute jumps this afternoon. Both are nurses. Miss Stadler also will fly in several events.

Flying, too, will be Mrs. Alice De Witt, who runs Ashburn field airport with her husband; Miss Dorothy Ring, a secretary, who once was the youngest transport pilot in the country; Miss Helen Welch, a switchboard operator; Mrs. Helen Budwash, a theater cashier; Miss Jerry Truesdell, a secretary; Miss Janet Mayhercy, a secretary, and Miss Mabel Sherman, artist and art instructor.

Mrs. Frances Anderson, who also is flying in the show, is chairman in charge of all arrangements. This pretty, blonde woman conducts a flying school with her husband at Elmhurst airport.

This is the fourth show the girls have put on by themselves. In 1932, soon after they organized the club, they held the first all-woman air exhibition ever given in the country. There were only eight members then. Not a year since has passed without a public exhibition by the club.

In 1933 several members flew in the American air races at Chicago, and the following year they took part in an air meet at Fort Wayne, Ind. In 1935 the club sponsored a treasure hunt with clews planted at various airports along the 105 mile course.

A second all woman air meet, called a "Rod-Air-O" was sponsored by the club at the Curtiss-Reynolds airport in 1936, and the club held its third show, an air carnival, in 1937. Last year five members stunted, raced, and tried for spot landings in an air show at Lansing, Ill.

At first the club limited its membership entirely to flyers. In that it resembled the famous Association of '99ers, to which the country's most famous women pilots belong. Then the girls put on their own air shows.

While the flying members perform at the show this afternoon, the non-flyers will handle the gate, the tickets, and other indispensable arrangements. For the last few months, while the flyers have been practicing stunts, the non-flyers have been no less busy with the practical details.

Flyers and non-flyers alike are interested in the talks by noted aviators and experts in various phases of aviation who are presented at the club's monthly meetings at the Blackstone hotel. They all share in another activity, the Christmas baskets for families connected in some way with aviation. Members distribute these baskets as Tribune Good Fellows.

Miss Jankun, now president, was one of the original eight members who flew in the club's first all-woman show in 1932. Her job as accountant for an airline supplements her contacts with aviation through the club. Mrs. Anderson is vice president.

Mrs. Emily Tyner, a housewife, who does not fly, is corresponding secretary. Miss Adela Adamec, a school teacher with a student pilot's rating, is treasurer. Miss Elizabeth Gairing, a secretary, who also is a student pilot, is recording secretary. Miss Welch is social secretary. Miss Bess Kobernis is publicity chairman.

All these members have played an important part in plans for the show. Miss Mary Sim, Miss Helen Sweer, and Mrs. Lois Bartling are among others assisting with arrangements.

TO BE WED NEXT MONTH

Miss Hope Sparrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Fred Sparrow of Evanston, will become the bride of Robert James Beda, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Beda of Glenview, on Sept. 2. Mr. Beda, a graduate of Northwestern, and his bride will be at home in Evanston following a wedding trip south.

Miss Dorothy Peloquin Married on Aug. 19

The marriage of Miss Dorothy Peloquin, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy H. Peloquin of 4835 West Roscoe street, to Dr. William E. Howell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar J. Howell of 3044 Logan boulevard, took place at 4:30 o'clock on Aug. 19 in the Faith Presbyterian church. A reception followed at the Edgewater Beach hotel. Dr. Howell and his bride have gone to the West Indies on their wedding trip and will return to Chicago by way of Quebec and Montreal.

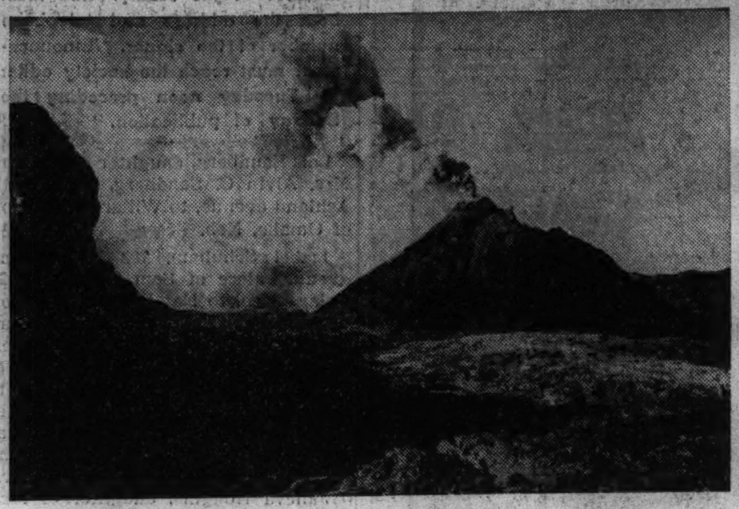
Buried City of Pompeii Comes Out of Shadows

By Frederic Babcock.

NAPLES, ITALY. On Aug. 24, 79 A. D.—1,860 years ago next Thursday—occurred one of the great disasters of history. Vesuvius exploded. The explosion destroyed three towns and their inhabitants. In Pompeii alone the loss of human lives was 20,000. Thus one of the smallest volcanoes in the world became the most notorious.



Inside Vesuvius' crater, with one of the cones in action.

Today Pompeii is one of Europe's foremost tourist attractions. It is visited annually by hundreds of thousands. It took on added appeal this summer, when batteries of giant arc lights, each of 150,000 candlepower, were turned on the buried city. In that way the Palm Beach of the ancient Roman empire assumed a fourth dimensional effect as its ruins were brought out of the shadows and highlighted in white, amber, red, and violet.

The setting itself is one of almost incomparable splendor. Pompeii lies not far from Naples, and the Bay of Naples is one of those things that can be described only in superlatives. Poets and artists have been picturing it for centuries; visitors never cease reacting to its enchantment.

Nearly everybody knows about Pompeii by this time. Bulwer-Lytton and other writers have told everything there is to tell, and the movies have supplied the illustrations. But they can't supply the thrill of personal experience. It is only by visiting the place, and roaming through the remarkably preserved avenues [paved with lava] and among the villas, shops, and palaces, that one can get an idea of the picture as a whole. It is only by entering the crater of Vesuvius, and watching the fantastic drama as it has been played for thousands of years, that one comprehends the terror that must have settled over the people when the eruption took place nearly two thousand years ago.

For many centuries prior to the beginning of the Christian era there was no major eruption. Monte Somma [that's what it was called at the time] was so nearly quiescent that no one thought of it as a volcano. The mountainside was covered with vineyards and villas. Pompeii was the gathering place of the rich people and the celebrities. Many Roman nobles—among them Cicero—had villas there. As a pleasure resort it would have ranked with Palm Beach or Miami or Cannes or Deauville.

Then a string of disasters set in.

Volcanic energy began to show itself in a series of earthquakes. In 63 A. D. these culminated in a tremor that badly damaged Pompeii, along with the other cities near the foot of the mountain. But, with all that wealth available, it was an easy matter to restore the city and replant the vineyards. The rebuilding job was still going on when, sixteen years later, the final calamity came along.

For some time the convulsions had been growing more violent. On Aug. 24 they reached their climax in the eruption of Vesuvius. The story of this disaster has been handed down to posterity in two letters from Pliny the Younger to the historian Tacitus. He was visiting nearby at the time.

Aug. 24 was a holiday. The amphitheater was jammed with people watching a fight between gladiators. Without warning Monte Somma woke up and began shooting off its fireworks. Clad in woods and vines, it had been peaceful enough before, but now it was a mountain of fire. The riven summit, some 4,000 feet above the city, started spitting out ashes, lapilli, and scoriae. The outpouring blotted out the sun before sweeping downward with all the fury of the inferno from which it came.

The panic stricken people in the amphitheater scurried home to collect their valuables and make their escape. Most of them fled before the storm, only to meet their death on the roads leading to Stabiae and Nuceria. Some 2,000 others, hoping to find refuge in their cellars, were choked to death by the sulphurous fumes.

Three towns were destroyed: Herculaneum, at the western base of the volcano; Pompeii, on the southeast side, and Stabiae, lying farther south, on the site of what is now Castellamare. But, contrary to popular belief, the destruction was not accomplished by lava. Pompeii was merely covered with a layer—from 17to 23 feet thick—of lighter substances, such as ashes, cinders, and small stones. These were dry as they fell. At Herculaneum the same substances, drenched with water, hardened into a tufa which in some spots reached a depth of 65 feet.

Historians and other authorities differ on some points, but most of them agree that no lava was emitted at the time and that some of the people might have escaped had not the huge clouds smothered the sun and brought on an ebony darkness. It is also agreed that a torrential rain fell throughout the eruption and that the rain water, mixed with the fine dust, formed a river of mud. The river sloshed down the mountainside, swamping everything in its path. How Pompeii escaped this flood is not clear. The ashes that buried that city either descended directly or were carried there by the wind. The lava came later.

For nearly 1,500 years Pompeii lay underneath the débris that had overwhelmed it. Its existence was all but forgotten. Then, in the sixteenth century, land reclamation was begun in the Sarno valley, and in the course of the building of an underground canal through the "Civita" hill the workers discovered several inscriptions, along with a number of buildings with frescoed walls. The first explorations took place in 1748. They have been going on ever since, but even today only about three-fifths of the original city has been brought to light.

There have been other eruptions from time to time. The latest one occurred ten years ago. In 1631 the mountainside villages were wiped out, with a loss of some 18,000 lives. Great havoc was wrought in 1871 and 1872. But after each disaster the people, undaunted, have returned to their devastated homes and fields and started life anew. The fertile soil provided by the lava has been an irresistible attraction.

The destruction of Pompeii was terrible enough, but it had one virtue—if tragedy can be said to have any virtues. It preserved for all time a complete and authentic picture of the life and customs of early Christian times. The excavations have enabled scientists to recreate an entire city. The structures, decorations, furniture, and inscriptions stand just as they did 2,000 years ago. Streets, temples, houses, shops, theaters, and baths have been restored.

Even the victims have been recreated. In the museum near the entrance to the city, skeletons have been placed in the exact positions in which they were found. Plaster of Paris wrapped around the bones gives the bodies an air of verisimilitude. Some of the skeletons were discovered with their faces buried in their arms, as if they were trying to ward off the dust and smoke. In one house were the remains of eighteen seated adults and children. One of the women still wore an engraved necklace. Even the dogs have been given their place in the museum.

The new illumination by night brings out a side of Pompeii impossible to conceive by daylight. Statues, pillars, and monuments stand out in bold relief. Shadows cast an aura of mysticism in arches and crevices of the only city [except the other two blotted out at the same time] that ever disappeared almost instantaneously from the face of the earth. Colored lamps light up Porta Marina, the Temple of Apollo, the Temple of Venus, and all the other historic places.

Most fascinating of all, however, are the graffiti—scratched inscriptions on the walls. Writing materials were scarce and costly in those days; so papyrus was reserved for the more important documents. The lesser things were entrusted to the point of the stylus and the face of the wall. School children scribbled their A B C's. Business men kept their accounts and jotted down their engagements. Idlers drew caricatures and wrote insults. Lovers did what lovers have always done—put it in writing. And, just as naughty boys have done throughout history, naughty boys scrawled ribald sayings. [A large part of the decorations, in fact, indicate that the moral code of Pompeii was anything but strict.]

And all these trivialities inspired one man to inscribe this facetious comment on the walls of three different buildings—the basilica, the theater, and the amphitheater: Admiror, paries, te non cecidisse ruinis, qui tot scriptorum tedia sustineas. [It is a wonder, O wall, that thou hast not yet crumbled under the weight of so much writers' nonsense.]

Vesuvius is about seven miles from Naples. It is reached either by funicular or autostrada. For our ascent we chose the former. Our path lay through almond trees, olive trees, acacia trees, stone trees, grapevines, blackberry bushes, and broom corn. As they have done after each disaster, the farmers had cultivated the land two-thirds the way up the slope. The view of the bay and the coast towns was magnificent. The funicular grew steeper and steeper, until at the end it seemed to be going almost straight up.

A short walk from the terminal brought us to the rim of the immense crater. Another walk, and we were down in it. We stood enthralled. A yellowish green cone [there are two of them, but the other is inactive] was shooting skyrockets of red hot lava high into the air. The lava turned to pink as it fell, and then to blackish gray as it started creeping toward us. It worked itself into grotesque and hideous shapes, as if its wriggling masses were still in the agony of creation. Here was nature's show in the raw. It was safe enough, and yet terrifying—terrifying because it couldn't be understood.

The lava moved in on us in a manner baffling description. All we could think of was acres of thick molasses. On second thought we decided it was more like taffy. Standing on the edge of the flow, with the heat like that of a July day on Chicago's west side, and with clouds of sulphur all around us, we were duly impressed, but not particularly happy.

We gave our guide an American coin. He poked a stick into a mass of the eerie taffy, brought out a burning chunk of it, placed our coin in the chunk, and waited for it to cool. Then he handed us our newly made souvenir—an ash tray, with the coin for the base and lava for the walls.

With the regularity of Old Faithful, but only about two minutes apart, the mountain trembled and the cone began its performance all over again. Except for that, there was no sign of life. The scene was one of awesome desolation.

We stood there until Vesuvius vomited an unusually heavy load. Stones of fire fell all around us. We decided to get out of there—in a hurry. It seemed to us we were a bit too close to Hades.

Plenty of Lemonade.

In Sicily there are vast orange groves where the best oranges are bought for a penny each and where lemons sometimes tip the scale in excess of 2 pounds.

'Lost' Pictures Being Sought for Art Exhibit

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Art institute writes to enlist our aid in the search for a number of paintings which it wishes to include in the Retrospective American Paintings and Sculpture exhibition planned for this fall. The institute is experiencing difficulty locating many of the pictures which it wishes to hang. They are eager to make the exhibition as representative as possible and to include in it as many artists as the fairly limited exhibition space [the familiar east wing galleries] will permit.

Only paintings that have actually been exhibited in previous American annuals are to be hung in the retrospective exhibit. The list of artists whose works the institute has not been able to find runs: Walter MacEwen, William Elmer Schofield, Bruce Crane, Gardner Symons, J. Francis Murphy, Frank C. Peyraud, Wilson Irvine, John F. Stacey, Anna Lee Stacey, and Charles Francis Brown.

Then follow pages of titles of paintings and the year when each was exhibited by these several painters. The letter asks if any of the readers of this column know the whereabouts of some of these pictures would they please communicate with the museum? The lists are fairly long and some of the dates go back as far as 1888, which, by the way, saw Bruce Crane's "Deserted." Mr. Crane's most recent entry was "Land of the Mohawks," 1918.

John F. Stacey made the American exhibition twenty-eight different years between 1894 and 1926. His last painting to pass the jury was "Summertime, Connecticut," in 1925. Anna Lee Stacey satisfied twenty-three American juries from 1895 to 1925, when her last picture, "Queen Anne's Lace," was admitted.

Frank C. Peyraud pleased nearly every jury from 1891 to 1927 when his "Sunshine and Showers" was exhibited. W. Elmer Schofield was a consistent exhibitor from 1900 through 1927 and is the only member of the group who was successful in the 1930's, having "English Village" admitted 'n 1936. Charles Francis Brown showed from 1894 through 1900 when his paintings were "Summer Sky," "River Road" and "The Hillside."

There is not space to print the Art institute's full lists of the American exhibited works of these various artists, but those who are interested and may own or know of some one owning an exhibited painting by some one of them or several of them should get in touch with the institute, which will furnish them the list of titles or tell them if their picture is the one desired.

The Retrospective American exhibition will open Nov. 16.

The All-Illinois Society of the Fine Arts held a summer exhibition of paintings at Peoria, Ill., and is now showing a representative group of paintings at Carthage, Ill. Mrs. Edwin N. Johnson, president of the organization and director of exhibitions, was recently awarded the Josephine Hancock Logan medal in recognition of her work for the artists of Illinois, as a patroness of art.

"Don Quixote," by Richard Aberle Florsheim of Highland Park, Ill., has recently been purchased by the ministry of fine arts of the French government for the Musée du Jeu de Paume, the museum of contemporary foreign art, for their permanent collection. The picture was painted last September in Chicago by the young artist [he is 21]. It is one of the few paintings bought from an American artist by the French government, and Mr. Florsheim is one of the youngest artists to have ever received this honor in the entire history of such purchases.

The painting shows a huge cliff rising from a sullen sea. Perched on the brink is the thin figure of Don Quixote on his even thinner steed. The solitary horseman is more of a token than a man, a token that imagination is still potent face to face with solitude, melancholy and danger.

William H. Mosby, Chicago artist and teacher, has just returned from a two year trip in Europe. He will teach at the American Academy of Art, 25 East Jackson boulevard, with the opening of the school's fall term, Sept. 5. Frank H. Young is director of the school. Mr. Mosby will conduct classes in illustration and life drawing in both the day and evening schools.

Mr. Mosby was awarded a scholarship at the Royal academy in Brussels, which he attended during his student days many years ago, and he spent most of his time there this summer. He also made a six weeks' sketching trip through picturesque Brittany. Three of his paintings were exhibited last year at the Antwerp exhibition.

There is a change announced in the schedule of evening classes at the academy. Friday night classes will be discontinued, so as not to interfere with student week-end activities, and the classes which met formerly on Wednesday and Friday evenings will now be held on Monday and Wednesday evenings.

Jay Datus has dropped a note stating that his new studio is at 154 E. Superior street, and reminding us that his wife, Martha Berry, is a painter, too. Their work is more or less complimentary as Mr. Datus does portraits and Mrs. Datus chiefly figure compositions and landscapes. They are welcome additions to Chicago's art colony.

A complete suit of Japanese armor composed of fourteen separate pieces, has been given to the department of anthropology at the Field Museum of Natural History by Frank Watkins of Chicago.

"THE BEE" BY TED VOGNILD

Amateur Show Is High Spot at Watch Hill

WATCH HILL, R. I. One of the high spots of the Watch Hill season was the sophisticated amateur musical show "Whee the People" which was given at the Misquamicut Golf club through the efforts of two Yale undergraduates, George R. Nichols III., of Chicago, and his classmate, Wally Herrick of New York. Calling their group of a dozen young college boys and girls "the yearlings" they put on a series of skits that were enjoyed by the big audience of summer colonists. One of the songs, "Great Lady" was written by George Nichols, who sang it.

Mrs. Nichols entertained a party at dinner preceding the show, her guests including Mr. and Mrs. Hunter S. Marston of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gardner of Detroit, Mr. and Mrs. Clement A. Griscom III. of Philadelphia, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Fletcher, and Mr. and Mrs. Walter E. Herrick of New York. Mrs. Nichol's older son, Frank Billings Nichols and his bride, the former Miss Kathryn Murtagh Anderson, of Fairfield, Conn., have returned from their wedding trip to Honolulu.

Mrs. Louise de Koven Phelps of Chicago, and her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard Phelps, are visiting Mrs. Phelps' mother, Mrs. Joseph T. Bowen, in Bar Harbor. On her return from Maine, Mrs. Phelps will captain the Watch Hill women's golf team for the final match of the triangular series between Watch Hill, Narragansett and Fishers Island.

Ambassador Joseph E. Davies, and his wife, the former Marjorie Hutton Post, cruising on their yacht Sea Cloud with their guests, Senator and Mrs. Millard Tydings of Maryland, were recent visitors at Watch Hill, playing golf and lunching at the Misquamicut Golf club.

Mr. and Mrs. Truman Newberry of Detroit will give a large dinner at the golf club Saturday night in honor of their son-in-law and daughter Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Lord of New York. Mrs. C. Bal Lihme, formerly of Chicago, Mrs. George D. Eustis, of Cincinnati, Mrs. Ellery Husted, and Mrs. Walter E. Herrick of New York will be hostesses at the third of the August teas at the Misquamicut Golf club this afternoon.

Mrs. William J. Chalmers is much improved in health and has been enjoying drives in her car.

Miss Margaret Grimmer, Lester Rogers to Marry

The marriage of Miss Margaret Grimmer, daughter of Otto Grimmer of New York and New Jersey, to Lester W. Rogers of Evanston will take place on Aug. 26 in New York. After a wedding trip to Bermuda, Mr. Rogers and his bride will be at home in Evanston.

International Notables Visit Town of Evian

By May Birkhead.

PARIS. Among the places where the French themselves, as well as temporary sojourners in Gaul, seek midsummer health and recreation is the charming town of Evian, in the Haute Savoie. While Evian is on French soil, it touches the southern shore of Lake Geneva and faces Lausanne. To drink or bathe in the waters of bicarbonate of soda and magnesium forms a well known cure, and many celebrities are to be seen there at the height of the season.

Recently noted there were the Maharajah of Kapurthala, quite a figure in the social doings of Paris and London; Theodore Rousseau, American banker who lives in Paris, and his wife, of the de Broglie family; Comte de Chambrun, not the general but the ambassador, who has represented France, among other places, at Ankira and Rome; and Mme. Paul Dupuy, widow of the former owner of the Petit Parisien and the Excelsior, who rests at Evian from her executive labors in connection with these two newspapers and with many other enterprises.

Also to be seen at Evian, at the moment, is Jean Giraudoux, the prolific author whose highly personal style and whose achievements in the novel, drama, and essay have made him one of the outstanding personages of French letters today. Those who have seen his plays or read his romances will recall that he was educated at Harvard, although born in the ancient province of Limousin, the country surrounding the porcelain center of Limoges. He began his career in the diplomatic service and has seen how the wheels work from the inside, for he has long lived right at the Quai d'Orsay, in an apartment that forms part of the French ministry of foreign affairs, and he can look out over its spacious gardens.

After his share of war wounds and decorations he returned to the Quai d'Orsay, and from there often left for travel to French legations and consulates all over the world. He already has had as much literary success as even the gifted could legitimately aspire to, although his public rather looks upon itself as an élite.

At any rate, he now seems destined to have his name become almost a household word, not only to Frenchmen but to those of many countries, for he recently was named to the newly created post of propaganda chief of France. That his head is pretty level and that he can see facts in a robust common sense manner is shown in his latest work, "Pouvoirs Public," or "The Powers That Be," in which he gives his idea of the vital problems that confront France. He finds that they are not so much external as internal. The first one, to him as to so many Frenchmen, is the question of maintaining the numbers and quality of the French race. He says that he is "entirely in agreement with Hitler in proclaiming that a national policy cannot reach its highest aims unless it is racial and that this also was the conviction of Colbert and Richelieu."

France, he remarks, can solve its population problem if it pursues thoroughly several courses that will prevent criminal abortion and will make hygiene a necessity for every one. In 1810, France had 15 per cent of the total population of Europe; today, the figure is less than 9 per cent. In 1876 the yearly birth rate in France was a million; last year it was 617,000. A few simple measures of hygiene, rigorously enforced, would give the country that reasonable advance of births over deaths to put it on the way to salvation.

It would not be surprising, after reading Giraudoux's latest book, if he would, as propaganda chief, direct his great talents more to domestic than to foreign consumption.

Miss D'Vera Joseph and Norman Rothschild to Wed

Mrs. Morris Joseph of 1737 South Green Bay road, Highland Park, announces the engagement of her daughter D'Vera to Norman Rothschild, son of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice L. Rothschild of 528 Cornelia avenue. Miss Joseph attended De Paul university.

When Chicago Was Young: J. Ogden Armour's Engagement Is Announced.

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, April 15, 1891.

Dear Julia: I have news to impart! Martha and Sandy are the surprised and happy parents of twins! They had been discussing names for the baby, but to be faced with the problem of naming two at once quite takes them off their feet. The names must match. At least, it is usual to have them bear some relation to one another.

The babies were born in St. Luke's hospital and the nurses are all excited over them. They suggest names for them and each day brings new ideas. Sandy has offered a prize for the most suitable.

Our old coachman, Michael, came over from the west side, where he now stays, to inspect the newcomers. He idolizes his "Miss Martha," and, though he no longer drives us, he's just as much interested in us all as ever. His call gave Will the idea of names for the new grandchildren—Michael and Michaeline. I suggest Oliver and Olive. What would you think of that? Or Gay [for the girl] and Gaylord. My mother had an uncle named Gaylord. We welcome suggestions.

Little Esmond and Julie, your namesake, are full of curiosity about their tiny brother and sister. Sandy, hoping to forestall the nose-out-of-joint feeling that some children have at such times, made quite a ceremony of giving the baby brother into Esmond's care, telling him he must be the kind of boy he wants the baby to become. Julie, similarly, was made sponsor for her sister. I wonder if the elder children may take their responsibilities too seriously and try to hold and tend them. But besides the excellent trained nurse who will go home with them, Martha has Janet, the children's nurse, whom they love, and she will keep order, I think.

Do you remember meeting lovely Mrs. P. D. Armour last year in New York? She told me today that her son, J. Ogden Armour, is to marry a charming young woman from Suffield, Conn., Miss Lola Sheldon. I haven't met her, but Sandy and Martha know her, as she has visited here a good deal. She is a friend of Mrs. Charles Schwartz, who for the last three years has had a summer home in Suffield. Mr. Schwartz has a racing stable there of twenty horses, the famous Oliver K. being one of these steeds. The Schwartz tallyho is often seen on the quiet streets of the little New England town. Mr. Schwartz and Arthur Caton are the chief exponents of coaching here and I saw Mr. Caton yesterday holding the reins on his coach, near the Massacre monument, at 18th street and Calumet avenue, the coachman and groom standing at attention in grand style.

Dear Mrs. Edson Keith, too, has a new daughter-in-law, for her son, Edson Keith Jr., has just married Miss Nettie Keener in Denver. She is an attractive girl and we are all glad she is coming to live in Chicago. Her young husband is a graduate of Columbia and a lawyer by profession. So life goes on . . . marriages, births, deaths. How brief is our existence!

You will not quail before the heavy responsibility of being godmother to the twins, I know. The christening will not occur for a month, but I hope you can come any time now.

With love,
MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Foot Notes.

We offer readers of this column a chance to participate in naming the twin grandchildren of Martha and Will. What are your favorite names for boy and girl twins? For the most appropriate names for these little strangers—the names, that, in the judgment of the editor of this column, are best suited to twins born in the nineties—we offer an autographed copy of "Dear Julia." For the two next best twin names, we will send the "When Chicago Was Young Scrapbook." Please help!

The Missing Whistler.

Col. H. A. Musham, Chicago, suggests that this column try to find the lost Whistler drawing of old Fort Dearborn. We quote the paragraph from a manuscript in the Chicago Historical society, in which Col. Musham, a student of early Chicago, found the reference to the artist's work, now lost.

"Whistler [i. e., James A. McNeill Whistler] was intended for the profession of arms, but left the United States Military academy without being graduated, to become an artist. While at West Point he presented me" [Dr. John Cooper] "with an interesting drawing of the first Fort Dearborn erected by his ancestor which to my great regret was many years later lost, or stolen by some admirer of the gifted painter."

It's an Active Vacation Up in Door Peninsula

EPHRAIM, WIS.

With the summer season at its height on the Door county peninsula, those summer residents who prefer an active vacation are finding a variety of events in which they can be either participants or spectators as they choose. The Peninsula Arts association flower show, which will be held tomorrow in the Ephraim village hall, is giving an opportunity to both groups. Among the many exhibitors who have been planning displays during the last week are Mrs. George Apfelbach of Chicago and Fish Creek, Mrs. George Spiel of Chicago and Ephraim, and J. Arthur Friedlund of Chicago and Sister Bay. One of the features of the show will be a formal garden exhibited by Mrs. W. H. Ryan of Appleton and Fish Creek. Plans are also being made to display many of the native flowers and plants, for which the peninsula has become so well known. Mrs. William J. Wilson is finding time in the midst of her duties as chairman of the flower show committee to entertain her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hirvin of River Forest, who are her house guests this week.

The Ephraim Yacht club, following another successful annual regatta, and in addition to its program of sailing races each week-end, is enlarging its scope to provide further entertainment for its members. Under the direction of the organization's social committee, Mrs. C. Barshall Rogers, Mrs. Malcolm D. Vail, Mrs. H. W. Sanborn, Miss Martha Hachmeister, and Miss Kate Lou Vail, a benefit recital was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hachmeister last evening to raise funds for furnishing the new clubhouse. Miss Helen Worrall of Kirkwood, Mo., guest pianist with the St. Louis Symphony orchestra, and Miss Betty Linsay of Evanston, soprano, provided the program. Parties in the clubhouse are being planned for the near future. New memberships in the club include Mr. and Mrs. Horace Capron and their daughter, Miss Connie, of Winnetka, who have spent their vacations in Ephraim for the last several seasons.

Miss Worrall is not only an accomplished musician, but also is a golfer of ability, having been a finalist in the women's championship class in last week's annual golf tournament, though it was not until the second hole carryover that she won her first match with Mrs. Robert Bentley of Evanston. Another St. Louisian, Mrs. Spencer Gould, tournament winner, in the women's division, eliminated Miss Jessica Hambleton of Chicago in the quarter-finals.

John Brann Jr., son of Prof. and Mrs. John Brann of the University of Wisconsin, again distinguished himself by establishing a new Peninsula park tournament record of three consecutive victories in the men's championship flight, having won first honors in 1937, 1938, and 1939. Alex Maltman, Bob Bush, Fred Crawford, Spencer Roesing, and John Heffernen were among the Chicagoans who qualified for the tournament, but were not listed among the winners.

Col. and Mrs. W. W. Yaschenko have enjoyed entertaining the Nickolas Starosselskys and their young son the last couple of week-ends. Prince and Princess Golitzine were also their house guests, having left Monday for a week in Canada before returning to Chicago.

Dr. and Mrs. Ralph R. Bengston returned to Chicago this week for a brief stay. Miss Courtney McGrath of Chicago has been visiting their daughter Marilyn during the last month. Dr. and Mrs. G. Hewett have also been guests at Claushaven, where the Bengstons have their summer home.

Although many summer residents hope to prolong their stay on the peninsula for several more weeks, these are unmistakable indications that the season will soon be closing for most vacationists.

At Camp Meenahga in Peninsula State park the canoe, tennis, and swimming meets have already been held.

THE VOICE OF THE TRAVELER

WIVES AND CATTLE.

Chicago, Aug. 2.—To the Travel Editor: I read with interest the article in THE TRIBUNE entitled "Bantu People Barter Cattle for Helpmates." As I lived in Africa for more than thirty years, I am acquainted with this method of marriage among the Bantu.

There are other topics which are also interesting, such as their language, which connects the tribes of the Bantu race through the vocabulary, the sound of the words, and the construction of the grammar. Although a primitive language, it is regularly constructed and is capable of fine shades of meaning. Bantu itself means people, and all nouns beginning with ba refer to people. Banana is the word for children, babasati means wives, banuna, husbands.

Another timely subject is the emergence of a new language in these times. This new langauge is being made today in South Africa and used by the South Africans and called "Afrikaans." It is a mixture of Holland Dutch with Kafir and other languages. Its use is being pushed by the authorities in South Africa, and books and translations are being rushed to press daily. Many words are being constructed which never saw the light of day before.

The witch doctors of Africa is another fascinating and picturesque subject about which volumes could be written.

Meanwhile, here's some more information on the subject of your recent article:

"How many cows does a white man have to pay for his wife?" queried the Bantu man when he learned that his American teacher was about to be married. The African has been accustomed to bartering cattle for his helpmate and cannot yet think of a man getting a wife without paying for her. Especially for the purpose of buying wives the Zulus and other Bantu tribes kept herds of cattle, sheep, and goats. Only on the rarest of occasions and the highest holidays was an ox or a cow slaughtered for eating purposes, and in general when any of the herds changed owners it was at the time of the marriage of a female member of the family.

After the contracting parties to the marriage—that is, the parent, uncle, brother or guardian of the girl and the representative of the groom—had come to an agreement as to the number, size, and other details of the cattle, sheep, or goats which should be given in exchange for the girl, the animals, each one carefully examined and scrutinized, were turned over to the family of the bride-to-be. This exchange or barter is called "lobola" or the "bride-price" and forms the basis of one of the most mooted questions among those interested in African sociology.

Should brides be paid for? According to western or civilized [God save the mark!] standards, the system savors too highly of selling or barter. To the native mind the underlying principle is one of protection and safety for the bride and compensation to the family for her loss, not only of herself, but for the children she might have, which under the lobola arrangements will not belong to the mother's family.

Lobola also insures the husband-to-be a good, virtuous wife and a family. The price of a wife varies with the importance of her connections [a chief's daughter brings four to five times as much as an ordinary girl], her beauty according to African standards, her ability to dig a garden and cook food, and her generative qualities [a girl born feet first invariably, according to tales, causes her husband to die]. Girls with no particular standing can be had for a pound [$5.00] or two, or for the asking.

As an investment lobola is a good risk. Often a man with an eye to the future buys for a few pounds a small, immature girl who becomes a member of the family, ostensibly a helper for his head or chief wife. She is a "slavey," to carry and care for the latest baby, to mind the fire, shell the peanuts for the evening meal, or do any of the hundred and one little odd jobs. Later this girl becomes his wife and bears him children, some of whom are sure to be girls who will bring cattle into his fold.

On the other hand, lobola is supposed to serve as a protection to the wife. If Rasi or Kuji is ill treated by her husband she has a legal right to leave him and return to her father or guardian, in which case the husband loses all he has paid for her. But when the man can prove that he has not mistreated his wife or the father is angered, the girl has no recourse. If she leaves her husband, and her father will not have her, she becomes a wanderer and a harlot.

When a wife does not produce an offspring or show signs of being able to do so within a year or two, severe lashings both by tongue and by "sjambuk" [hippo hide whip] are her reward. Then it is not long before she is returned to her father or guardian as useless and the husband demands another girl in her stead or the return of the cattle which he had paid for a wife.

Prior to the invasion of the white man with his superior methods, cattle were the most staple article to represent wealth known to the black man. But in South Africa since the opening up of the mines, gold, copper, tin, diamonds, and coal—which industry is built upon native labor—the "boys" [male natives] are paid in money, which is a more portable and convenient form of wealth. In addition, coins are immune to fire and rot and rodents and termites. This has simplified the lobola transactions in the southern part of the continent, and money has become legal tender when a man wants to buy a wife.

The use of money for lobola is changing the form of native shrewdness—used especially in bartering for a helpmate and comparable to horse trading in this country—to a more subtle battle of wits between the father who wishes to obtain the maximum number of pounds for his daughter and the would-be husband who wishes to cut the price.

Once the money is paid for the girl, there are more chances for the husband to get a "rain check," in the form of another wife, than there are of getting his money back. If the father gets the pounds in his hands, the hard cash goes quickly to pay some of the ever pressing debts, or it is conveniently ready to buy a wife for his son or a new one for himself. Thus it is impossible for him to return the cash, and he excuses himself to his son-in-law with the oft repeated phrase: "I have eaten the money." But the pressure put on him compels him to find some female relative over whom he has authority to act as the refund.

Africa is rapidly changing its customs and ways and its modes of thought are being metamorphosed by its contact with the white man.

Pioneer Imprint Still to Be Seen in the Catskills

By Alden Powell.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

Hendrik Hudson, exploring for the Dutch, sailed up a river in search of a short route to the orient. The river now bears his name.

The charm of the Catskill mountains, the richness of the Taconic countryside on the east side of the stream, and the majesty of the Palisades just north of what is now New York City won over the thrifty Dutch. They remained, and settled these communities. The imprint of these pioneers is still seen and felt in this valley.

It is the land of Rip Van Winkle, Washington Irving's hero who lived and slept around Palenville. Here the visitor finds colorful scenery, historic sites, bridle paths, hiking trails, boating, bathing, picturesque golf courses, and a splendid system of motor parkways.

The Hudson may be viewed from either bank or from the decks of steamers that ply its waters daily. Ferry boats and bridges link its east and west shores. Fine views may be had from the George Washington, Bear Mountain, Mid-Hudson, and Rip Van Winkle bridges.

On the west side, Route U. S. 9W leads to Palisades Interstate park, with its 11 miles of shore front, parking and picnicking areas, boat basins, and bathing beaches. Northward the traveler comes upon the United States Military academy at West Point, with its halls and armories and beautiful reservation, five miles long. Next is the Storm King highway — an engineering feat — a road cut out of solid rock, 200 feet above the Hudson. At Newburgh, Washington's headquarters, is a mecca for history-minded tourists. The Old Senate house, first state capitol, built at Kingston in 1676, is now a public museum.

The route on the east side of the river covers alternate stretches of urban and rural communities, with rolling farmlands in between. Interesting points on this side include: Philipse Manor hall at Yonkers, built in 1682, now a museum; near Peekskill, Camp Smith, summer training camp of the New York National Guard; at Beacon, Clarence Fahnestock State park; Vassar college at Poughkeepsie; at Hyde Park, President Franklin D. Roosevelt's home; near Staatsburg, Margaret Lewis Norrie State park; at Rhinebeck, the Beekman Arms, oldest hotel in America, and at Kinderhook, Lindenwald, the ancestral home of President Martin Van Buren.

The Catskill section offers a forest preserve of 231,000 acres, forever set aside for the enjoyment of the wilderness camper, fisherman, and hunter. Hundreds of summer hotels dot the area.

Catskill, Saugerties, and Kingston, all on Route U. S. 9W, are generally considered the three gateways to the Catskills. Here numerous side trips draw the tourist to such places as Haines Falls, Woodstock, artists' colony; Ashokan reservoir, and Pompey's cave and underground lake.

The visitor may enter the Catskill region from the west through Oneonta on either Route 23 or 28. He may then travel through some of the wilder sections of the mountains.

Indians' Folklore Pageant Planned

Keshena, Wis., Aug. 19.—The third annual pageant dramatizing the folklore of the Menominee Indian tribe will be presented Saturday and Sunday evenings, Aug. 26 and 27. The setting will be staged in the wooded amphitheater at Keshena.

Conceived three years ago by Ralph Fredenberg, superintendent of the Keshena Indian agency—himself a Menominee—as a means of perpetuating the legends of his people, the pageant has attracted widespread attention among tourists and vacationists.

This year it will be held in conjunction with the annual harvest festival and tribal fair.

A Night's Stay in Chamber of Haiti Horrors

By Anson Brown.

CAPE HAITIEN, HAITI.

It was midnight, and a chilling fog swirled around the battlements and the tomb of Christophe. Sleep was impossible at first, but that was not unnatural. Transpose yourself to a deserted ruin on the top of a mountain, with the jungle spread out below and bats and rats for company. Build a small fire in the doorway of your cell and set the time for midnight. Who could sleep?

Such a hairbrained situation was of my own making. With my color camera I was attempting to capture the magnificence of the Haitian sunrise and of the Citadel of Christophe gradually bathed in varying color of a misty Caribbean dawn. To do this I would have to spend the night with all the ghosts, with all the memories, with all the bones that Christophe left behind in 1823.

I hadn't asked permission from the authorities in Cape Haitien, for fear it might be refused. And when I loaded my straw mattress, food, and photographic supplies in an old car and told the driver to take me to Dundun he looked at me in dumb surprise, shrugged his shoulders, headed his erratic vehicle through the jungle road. Dundun is the closest village to the Citadel mountain. After a bumpy hour's ride I was unceremoniously dumped by the side of the road in that settlement of little huts.

It was already 4:30 in the afternoon. I would just make it to the ruined fortress by sundown if I hurried. The three black boys I hired, at 20 cents apiece, to carry the equipment liked the idea not at all. They have a superstitious dread of the Citadel after dark. Nor did they relish the return trip in the night through the jungle. But 20 American cents is a whole dollar in Haiti.

We paused occasionally to rest, and then slipped on up the side of the mountain over a path that was more often than not completely swallowed up by the jungle growth. One of the trekkers killed a long snake. After that they chattered incessantly in their Creole French, looking first up toward the distant ruins and then back at me. Snakes are bad omens, and the lengthening shadows and growing darkness around us wasn't helping to increase their courage. I thought they might break away any moment, but, at last, at the huge door of the Citadel, they helped me gather firewood and then, with their pay in hand, fled on down into the jungle once more.

It was almost dark now. The heavy walls around me were beginning to grow cold as the fog swept in from the surrounding hills. I tried the main door. It was barred. But where were the guards? Two of them lived in the Citadel and certainly would not turn me out into the jungle for the night. I called and called again. Each time the echoes faded away in the dungeons as they gray fog whipped around the towers.

I made my way to a broken dungeon entrance and clambered over rotted boards into the deepness of the fortress. Bats swooped out over my head as I crawled up the slippery steps. My flashlight was all that saved me. It disclosed pitfalls and sloping rocks which might have skidded me away into the depths. What a sensation—climbing around in a chamber of horrors where the wind sucked at your clothes and every stone felt like a clammy body!

In the courtyard at last, even the chalk white tomb of Christophe was a welcome sight. I unlatched the main door and brought in my supplies, dispelling the gloom with a blazing fire in the doorway of my sheltered cell. The fog, as the night grew darker, reflected dancing figures from the fire and swept odd shadows from wall to wall. I spread out my thick straw mattress and sat on it as I munched at a few sandwiches and a whole pineapple. Where were the guards? This idea of a solo nocturnal siesta certainly was not mine.

The answer came as I stretched out under the blankets by the fire. There was the noise of the crackling flame, the whirr of countless bats' wings, the moan of a foggy wind. Yet above it all another sound, and when it started I almost crawled into the masonry. Voodoo drums! Far off in the surrounding valleys the rhythm started, drifting through the crannies of the ruined Citadel, beating incessantly, and as fast as my own heart was pounding. So! The guards had deserted their posts to attend the ceremonies. And I was supposed to sleep with those mad drums booming.

The hours crawled onward as the tomtoms beat out the minutes. My nerves untangled themselves to some extent, but by midnight I had opened another package of cigarets.

I left the comfort of the fire and rested against the tomb. I looked upward at the old towers almost enveloped in the mist. A little rain fell. When it stopped the clouds took on a peculiar glow. Then of a sudden they swept completely away, leaving a moon so full that its light was almost blinding. At the same time the drums stopped. The effect was completely unreal—the absence of sound, the wall bathed in soft light so that each turret, each stone stood out distinctly. La Citadel under a full midnight moon! How white the tomb of the dead king! How dark the shadows of the cells and corridors! What a setting for Peer Gynt!

I climbed the old stone stairs to what once had been the "Ferriere" bedroom. The outer wall long since had fallen away, exposing bits of the moonlit valley and, farther away, the fog bumping among the hills. I was above the clouds—rolling, undulating billows of ghostly white sweeping toward the sea. It was like a nightmare or a weird dream—one of the twisted scenes you may grasp at for a moment, before it dashes beyond in your troubled sleep and then comes back next day to haunt you in an unexpected moment.

Even a damaged mind of a surrealist painter could scarce conceive a scene to match this one of pale clouds, black depths, a dark sea, heavy, silhouetted, deserted walls, and towers.

I pulled my mattress and blankets from the cell and made a new bed in front of Christophe's final resting place. There would be no more rain or dampness now. I brought the fire over, too, moving it brand by brand until it flamed again a few feet from my graveside bed. Then I lay on my back and gazed skyward.

The wind no longer moaned. The Citadel was silent except for the intermittent hissing of the fire. Stars there were above, and what stars! Like the bursting lights of a roman candle suddenly fixed and frozen in the heavens, each, it seemed, was sending its finger of light to only one spot, the tomb of King Henri Christophe.

1 a. m.—I rolled over and pillowed my head on my arm. No ghosts yet.

2 a. m.—I slept. The moon moved westward, lengthening the black shadows around the tomb. The fire flickered down around the coals.

3 a. m.—I leaped up and grabbed the flashlight. What was that? Something pulling at the blankets! I guided the circle of light around until it was on my food basket by my feet. A five pound rat, with my last piece of bread, galloped across the mattress and melted into the blackness. Phew! I rekindled the fire, placed the basket on the tomb, and tried to sleep. Bats circled in the path of moonlight and settled down in the towers.

4:30 a. m.—No more sleep. The last of the firewood was gone. I wrapped a blanket around my shivering frame and climbed another tower to the east. There I settled down with the movie camera to await the dawn. A wind sprang up and clouds rolled in anew. But fifteen minutes later every brick and stone glowed pinkish, the clouds lifted, and the sun appeared. It looked like a hazy, huge orange.

As I perched there in the wind, grinding away at the camera, beneath a pale, cold sky yet 3,000 feet higher than the warm Caribbean, I knew that all the jittery tortures of the night before had not been experienced in vain. Wisps of colored clouds like a rainbow in shreds, the velvet dark green of the foliage below, the deep brownness of the ancient walls—all like an animated kaleidoscope gone loco in technicolor.

And yet, darn it all, when I try to put it down on paper the words don't seem to fit. So you will have to take my word for it that I've seen no sight more breath taking than the sunrise over the Citadel of King Christophe.

A breakfast of grapefruit and cheese ended my visit with Christophe. He had failed me utterly, as far as a personal appearance was concerned—thank heavens! No voodoo magic had poisoned me during the night. No earthquake of revenge had brought the walls down upon me. Only a lone rat, stealing my food, has disturbed the tranquillity of the night. Maybe that was Christophe come back. Who knows? In his day nearly all his subjects considered him a rat, anyway.

Illinois Hitting the Oregon Trail

Salem, Ore., Aug. 19.—[Special.]—The number of Illinois folk pouring into Oregon on vacation trips has shown a noticeable increase in 1939. Figures compiled by the travel department of the state highway commission reveal that Illinois cars registering in the first six months of the year totaled 853, a jump of nearly 14 per cent over the corresponding period of 1938.

The state's 400 miles of ocean beaches, skirted by the Oregon Coast highway—part of U. S. 101, which runs from Canada to Mexico—is a favorite region for visitors from the middle west. Others are the mountain lakes sections. These include Crater Lake National park, where cars from Illinois are among the top in number registering.

Invitations have gone out to all of the glider pilots in this country to attend. Last year there were twenty-seven motorless ships and sixty pilots.

Ottawas to Give All-Indian Revue

Petoskey, Mich., Aug. 19.—Resorters in this region will see an unusual show when the Ottawas put on an All-Indian revue Tuesday, Aug. 29.

For many years the Indians have presented the pageant of Hiawatha for the visitors. Their plans were changed this year because their leading man, George Cooper, is in Washington, D. C., employed in the bureau of Indian affairs of the department of interior.

Harbor Springs Holds Fashion Show at Club

HARBOR SPRINGS, MICH.

A week ago Friday night the Little Harbor club was the scene of one of Harbor Springs' loveliest fashion shows. The show was given on a warm night with not a breeze to ruffle the leaves on the miniature trees around the club pool. Tables were set there for 214 guests. The lovely models, among whom were Mrs. Louis Sudler, Miss Nancy Otis, Mrs. Lincoln S. Harris, Mrs. L. Edward Hart Jr., Mrs. Robert Wheeler Jr., and Mrs. Henry McIntyre, walked around the edge of the pool, with true professional ability, displaying the last word in daytime and evening fashions for this fall.

The whole scene, the flowers and lights on the tables, the delightful music, and the reflection of the models mirrored on the water's surface as they strolled around, was a really gorgeous spectacle. Mrs. Richardson, the club's manager, reported that the number served was the largest in the club's history.

Among the many hostesses were Mrs. Robert Wheeler, Miss Virginia Waller, Mrs. Louis Sudler, Miss Joanna Fortune, and Mrs. Joseph Hunter.

The Little Harbor club is also in the midst of a lot of athletic activity. A tennis tournament has been running since the seventh of August, with Mrs. William Waller, Judy, Virginia, and Thatcher Waller, Mrs. Robert Wheeler Jr., and Mrs. Henry McIntyre, and Mrs. H. V. O'Brien, up into the semi-finals. There are matches being played off nearly every day in men's and women's and mixed doubles, and men's and women's singles.

The Women's Exchange of Chicago held its annual exhibition at Mrs. William Renshaw's beautiful home on the Point last week.

Next Saturday will see the culmination of great artistic effort at a dinner-dance at the Little Harbor club. Amateur talent was gleaned from among the younger set for a floor show to be given during dinner that night. Those rehearsing at Mrs. Robert Wheeler's house every afternoon are Josephine Carpenter, Judy Waller, Barbara Pierce, and Gloria and Eveline Johnson. Miss Virginia Waller and Teddy Russell, Mrs. Robert L. Curtis' son, each has a specialty act.

Mrs. Lincoln Harris left this last week for Chicago, where she will help select the costumes.

Along about this time of the summer the countryside is the scene of several Indian pow-wows. Last Sunday the most interesting of these was held at the little settlement of Cross village. Aside from the tribal dances the village itself is of great interest. It was here that Pere Marquette held a council with the Indians of L'Arbre Croche and planted on the shore a large white cross. The cross, of course, has been replaced many times on what is believed to be the original site, but from this first missionary venture has sprung a picturesque little Indian mission presided over by a young priest, Father Julian.

There have been several visitors from Chicago on Harbor Point during the last week. Miss Lucy Harrison spent a few days at the Harbor Point clubhouse. Charles Fitzmorris, his son, Jim, and his son-in-law, Jack Brittingham, drove up to spend last week-end in the Fitzmorris cottage on the point. Nelson Barnes Jr. is spending a few days with his family in their cottage across from the Little Harbor club.

Invitations are out for Miss Nancy Otis' marriage to Frank Bremond Johnston on Labor day. Nancy is in the midst of a last minute whirl before their attendants and out of town guests arrive. The first of the bridesmaids will probably arrive on the 28th and from then until the Saturday before Labor day the reminder of the six bridesmaids and eight groomsmen will arrive. Miss Cynthia Cleveland, Nancy's maid of honor, and Mr. Johnston's best man, Charles English of Philadelphia, are expected the Friday before the wedding. Already the list of parties to be given before the wedding has grown so that over Labor day week-end hardly a minute, from noon on, is free.

The wedding and reception will be held on the beautiful lawn beside Nancy's grandmother's, Mrs. Joseph E. Otis', home.

Grandmothers Are to Attend Second Annual Conclave

An invitation to grandmothers to attend the second annual convention of the National Grandmothers' club has just been issued by Mrs. Marie K. Brown, president. The meeting will be held Sunday and Monday, Oct. 1 and 2, at the Morrison hotel. A tea and fashion show, with grandmothers as models, will be held on Oct. 1.

Mrs. Brown, Mrs. Grace A. Gray, secretary of the club, and Mrs. Ora H. Snyder, treasurer, were among the Chicago grandmothers, all prominent in the business world, who founded the Grandmothers' club several years ago. The organization now has members in all parts of the country. Its headquarters is at 105 West Adams street.

Sept. 9 has been proclaimed Grandmother day at the New York World's Fair. There will be a luncheon and program, with prizes awarded to the youngest grandmother in attendance, to the oldest, to the one who has come from the most distant city, the one who has brought the largest number of grandchildren with her, and the one who appears in the most interesting authentic costume worn at the Chicago fair of 1893.

'Old Maxwell Place' a House with a Past

By Rose Cour.

LAKE GENEVA, WIS.

One of the oldest houses in Lake Geneva and probably the most interesting from an historic point of view is the summer residence of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Lord of Evanston. It is still referred to as the "old Maxwell place" by the older inhabitants of Lake Geneva, although no Maxwell has lived in it since Mrs. Doctor Maxwell, as the villagers called her, died in 1875.

When it was built in 1855, its owner, Dr. Phillip Maxwell, named it The Oaks because of the grove of splendid oak trees that surrounded it. That name for the place had been forgotten until very recent years when the present owner, while having the lovely border garden planted, came upon the remains of a gatepost entrance to what had been the carriage drive and imbedded in the post was a brass plate bearing the words, The Oaks. Now the old plate, refurbished so that its sign is plainly readable, has been affixed to one of the new fence corner pieces, near one of the many 200 year old white oaks.

While there has been a recognized kinship between Chicago and Lake Geneva since the 1870s when those first wealthy Chicagoans, Shelton, George, and Buckingham Sturges, N. K. Fairbank, R. T. Crane, and others began to erect their summer mansions on the shore of the lake, probably few city people are aware of the fact that one of Chicago's first "fathers" was also a parent of Lake Geneva.

This was none other than Dr. Phillip Maxwell, whose name figures as prominently in the early history of Chicago as it does in the early history of Lake Geneva. In 1832, one year before the incorporation of Chicago as a village, Dr. Maxwell, an army surgeon recently graduated from West Point, was transferred to Fort Dearborn. In 1836, some seventy miles northwest of Chicago, a battle raged over the rights to the water power and dam site at the outlet of Big Foot lake, later known as Geneva lake, into White river. That war, between John Brink, the government surveyor, and Christopher Payne, frontiersman and famous as Lake Geneva's first settler, was settled by Payne's men collecting $2,000 and paying off the other group. Most of this money was procured from Dr. Maxwell by Robert W. Warren, a member of Payne's band, who made a remarkable two day trip on foot through an untracked wilderness from Geneva to Chicago.

As a result of this transaction, Maxwell became one of the six original owners of the village of Geneva, first known as Big Foot settlement. Dr. Maxwell himself visited the place the following year, 1837, when he went with the government troops to Fort Howard at Green Bay and from that date on we find occasional mention of him as being in the village, giving instructions to the surveyor, etc. When the village was platted one broad tree-lined avenue was named Maxwell street in honor of the doctor. Almost at the same time a Chicago street, now famous the world over as a trader's paradise for everything from pickled fish to oriental rugs, was also named for Phillip Maxwell.

Another curious story told in connection with the Maxwell family is the fact that Augustus Kinloch Maxwell of Chicago, president of the Lake Geneva Country club, was not, until a few years ago, aware that Dr. Maxwell was his father's great-uncle and that Maxwell street in Chicago as well as Maxwell street in Lake Geneva had been named for his family. [The Maxwell summer home, Jerseyhurst, is on the north shore of Lake Geneva and is part of the R. T. Crane estate. Mrs. Maxwell was formerly Dorothy Crane.]

As early as 1838 Dr. Maxwell reserved the choice five acres of wooded knoll, in the southeast part of Geneva as a summer home site although he did not build the house until 1855. That he built well The Oaks today can testify, as the sturdy walls, over two feet thick, are as stanch and true after eighty-four years as they were when first erected. Originally the exterior was of red brick with heavy paneled wooden shutters. Now the brick walls are white, in pleasing contrast with the green shutters. While the building has been somewhat enlarged, it still retains the simple dignity of its original early New England type of architecture with spacious rooms, high ceilings, massive doors, broad high windows, and many fireplaces.

The present owners, Mr. and Mrs. Lord, have done much to restore the charm of the old mansion by means of skillful decoration and furnishings, even to tracking down and bringing back fine old pieces of furniture that graced the rooms during the Maxwell régime. Dr. Maxwell's own desk, of satin smooth mahogany, each drawer and panel bound in brass, has been given a place of honor in the living room. A small melodeon, over a hundred years old, is only one of the antiques that stand in the broad main hall. In true colonial style the hall runs the width of the house, its rear windows and glass door opening onto terrace and lawn.

The staircase is most attractive with slender spindles and silky black walnut balustrade. In the large upper hall stands a majestic highboy made of heavy mahogany inlaid with brass, also a Duncan Phyfe table and two small antique chairs. There are many such treasures in the house, fine old clocks and lamps, chests, and two unusual ancient brass beds with niches for statues in the headpieces.

Yet with all its flavor of antiquity The Oaks is also an ultra-modern dwelling and has been referred to as "the house of yesterday and the house of tomorrow," because while the building and much of its furnishings are old, all the latest kinks in lighting, heating, and plumbing have been installed.

The large grounds, while beautifully landscaped with velvety lawns and gorgeous gardens, have received the same sympathetic treatment so apparent in the house. The great trees have been cherished seemingly down to the smallest leaf and throughout the five acres as in the house the aim has been to restore rather than to remodel.

LIVES IN OMAHA

Mrs. George Veseley, a bride of last June, is the former Miss Helen C. Jaques, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Robert Jaques of River Forest. Mr. Veseley, son of Mrs. May Veseley, and his bride are at home at the Happy Hollow Country club, in Omaha, Neb.

How British Empire Grew

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

MAJ. JOHN PITCAIRN was an officer of the royal marines and as such perhaps was not greatly skilled as a horseman. Nevertheless upon this occasion he rode a horse, as the day promised to be warm and he had far to go.

He rode his horse at the head of six companies of light infantrymen, stolid fellows marching in bright red coats. Out upon the village green of Lexington he rode, straight at a handful of American minute men strung out in a single line, leaning on their muskets and wondering what to do now.

Major Pitcairn brandished his shiny sword and shouted, according to an American version of the affair: "Lay down your arms, you damned rebels, or you are dead men!"

Absolute proof as to who fired first, the British or the Americans, is wanting, but evidence puts most of the blame for what happened then and there upon the British. Eight minute men were killed and nine wounded, and Major Pitcairn's horse was shot twice.

In this manner on April 19, 1775, began the American war of independence, precipitated when Major Pitcairn, who a few weeks later lost his life at Bunker Hill, flourished his sword and ordered the Yankee militiamen to disarm. The launching of this war was Great Britain's major blunder in an otherwise extremely successful colonial program. The British by their nearsighted policy in 1775 thus lost their richest colonies, the country which soon was to be and still is the United States of America.

Stupid as were King George III. and his ministers at home and his officers in this country in permitting America to find reason for breaking away from the mother land, the British colonial plan as a whole over the years has been well managed. As a result the British empire today is the greatest empire of all time. It (with the lands it controls) covers more than thirteen and a quarter million square miles and contains a half billion people.

Vast as is this empire upon which the sun never sets, it had its beginning relatively only a short while ago. While Spain was busily colonizing the Americas in the sixteenth century the English were only beginning to think of imperial expansion. Three generations of Spaniards were born, lived, and died in Mexico, for example, before the British moved to establish their claims to North America. And so it was that when Queen Elizabeth died in 1603 the English did not actually possess one square foot (Continued on page four.)

Looking at Hollywood with Ed Sullivan

Charlie Chaplin's greatness has been due largely to his remarkable talent for combining pathos and comedy. A scene from "The Gold Rush."

Bette Davis, as "The Old Maid," scores a hit that tells us the "tear jerker" is back with us to stay for a while.

Mary Carr in "Over the Hill" and similar sad pictures became famou because of tear appeal.

The Movies Will See That You Don't Weep Alone

By ED SULLIVAN
Hollywood.

THAT NOISE you hear from the west coast isn't thunder across the bay; it's the lamentations of those attending the previews of the new pictures. In other words, the tear jerkers are back in favor. As a specialist in movie trends who can spot a trend as far away as you can see your Aunt Minnie on a foggy day, your reporter avers that the current trend is to movies of substance lachrymose. The movie palaces shortly will be resounding to such wailing and sobbing as has not been heard since Simon Legree chased Liza across the ice with a covey of bloodhounds.

Regard the pictures that have been released recently and you will see that the studio bosses intend to wet the country with tears from millions of feminine tear ducts. "Dark Victory," "On Borrowed Time," "The Old Maid," and "Goodbye, Mr. Chips" are the advance guard of the tear jerkers. In preparation or completed already, awaiting shipment to the world exchanges, are other tearful documents—Paul Muni's "We Are Not Alone," M-G-M's "Remember," Zanuck's "Grapes of Wrath," and "Our Town."

At the preview of "Old Maid," held in the Beverly Warner theater, I have never heard such sobbing. Joan Bennett and Paulette Goddard sat near us, and these two were wrecks when the picture ended. Joan Crawford, sitting with Charlie Martin in our aisle, was red-eyed from crying. It was the same with every other girl in the theater. The scene in the bedroom, when Bette Davis went in to kiss Jane Bryan good night, knowing full well that on the morrow the daughter would be married and forever out of her life, precipitated the sobbing, and from then on the handkerchiefs were soaking wet.

What made it worse for the movie stars was that when they emerged from the theater the glaring arc lights of the preview were blazing down on the lobby. As a result the reddened orbs of the criers were obvious to all beholders. "It is the first time the stars have cried this way since they heard about income taxes," said Walter Wanger, who was with Joan Bennett. She looked at him coldly, or at least attempted to register coldness, but it didn't quite come off. It is difficult to register any emotion when you are blinking tears back.

Producers of the big pictures will tell you that the appearance of the tear jerkers on the movie schedules is a good sign; that they always appear on the screens when times are good and getting better. In bad times the public demands slap-happy slapstick, gay romances. When times are improving the same public goes most enthusiastically for vicarious suffering.

Women, who make up the solid core of movie theater attendance, always have liked to cry. The lady of legend who emerged from a movie house, sobbing lustily and declaring that she had had the most wonderful time of her life, is a sister of all the other ladies of the country. The emotional exhaust of tears is a great release valve. The success of "Camille" was predicated on the audience's eagerness to cry. "Romeo and Juliet," with hero and heroine dead in the vault, indicated the dramatic shrewdness of Will Shakespeare, who not only knew what the public wanted but served it at all times.

It has been thus ever. "Over the Hill," "'Way Down East," "The Old Homestead," and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" were hugely successful. Their receipts were in direct proportion to the tears they stimulated. I could list at least twenty other famous box office hits all built on sad or tragic themes, but it is unnecessary.

The mightiness of Charlie Chaplin has been due to his remarkable talent for combining pathos and comedy. The forlorn little figure has made 'em cry and laugh within the same reel, and as a result Chaplin won a ranking that is bestowed upon few performers.

There is no mystery in this phenomenon to doctors. "A good cry," says a famous movie colony doctor, "is a fine thing, particularly in this high-voltage era. People are subjected to so many stresses that their insides are a seething mass of emotions. A moving picture or play that permits people to release all of this pent-up emotion through tears is an excellent thing. People cry in theaters because they have a certain degree of privacy They'd hesitate to betray weak ness in public, or even at hom with their families, but a diml lighted theater is differen While I wouldn't recommend steady diet of tear-jerking play or pictures, an occasional one i the best prescription in th world for taut nerves."

Hollywood sobs an affirmativ to this diagnosis.

Gems of American Eloquence

● American eloquence has played an important part in the history of our country. From a long list of famous speeches The Tribune is selecting gems of American eloquence which are being presented in this, the Graphic Section, every Sunday. The content of these speeches is important both historically and politically. Men and boys learning to speak in public will find in them helpful lessons. Speakers and writers can learn a great deal from studying their style. This is the eleventh of the series.

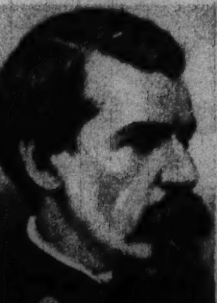
IN CONNECTION with the unveiling of Louis T. Rebisso's famous equestrian statue of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant in Lincoln park, Chicago, the Society of the Army of Tennessee held its twenty-third annual banquet in the Palmer house on the evening of Oct. 8, 1891. Among the speakers were Gen. Horace Porter, Gen. Edward S. Bragg, Charles M. Sherman, Col. Augustus Jacobson, Henry Watterson, James L. Blair, and James Whitcomb Riley. Joseph Medill, editor of The Chicago Tribune, was scheduled to speak, but, being unable to attend the banquet, his address was read by Judge Richard S. Tuthill. General Porter's eulogy to Grant on this occasion is one of America's finest examples of this type of oratory. An excerpt from it follows:

"If there be one single word in all the wealth of the English language which best describes the predominating trait of General Grant's character, that word is 'loyalty.' Loyal to every great cause and work he was engaged in; loyal to his friends, loyal to his family, loyal to his country, loyal to his God. This produced a reciprocal effect on all who came in contact with him. It was one of the chief reasons why men became so loyally attached to him. It is true that this trait so dominated his whole character that it led him to make mistakes, it induced him to continue to stand by men who were no longer worthy of his confidence; but, after all, it was a trait so grand, so noble, we do not stop to count the errors which resulted. It showed him to be a man who had the courage to be just, to stand between worthy men and their unworthy slanderers, and to let kindly sentiments have a voice in an age in which the heart played so small a part in public life. Many a public man has had hosts of followers because they fattened on the patronage dispensed at his hands; many a one has had troops of adherents because they were blind zealots in a cause he represented; but perhaps no man but General Grant had so many friends who loved him for his own sake, whose attachment only strengthened with time, whose affection knew neither variableness nor shadow of turning, who stuck to him as closely as the toga of Nessus, whether he was captain, general, President, or simple private citizen.



GENERAL PORTER

"General Grant was essentially created for great emergencies; it was the very magnitude of the task which called forth the powers which mastered it. In ordinary matters he was an ordinary man. In momentous affairs he towered as a giant. When he served in a company there was nothing in his acts to distinguish him from the fellow officers; but when he wielded corps and armies the great qualities of the commander flashed forth and his master strokes of genius placed him at once in the front ranks of the world's great captains. When he hauled wood from his little farm and sold it in the streets of St. Louis there was nothing in his business or financial capacity different from that of the small farmers about him; but when as President of the republic he found it his duty to puncture the fallacy of the inflationists, to throttle by a veto the attempt of unwise legislators to tamper with the American credit, he penned a state paper so logical, so masterly, that it has ever since been the pride, wonder, and admiration of every lover of an honest currency. He was made for great things, not for little. He could collect for the nation $15,000,000 from Great Britain in settlement of the Alabama claims; he could not protect his own personal savings from the miscreants who robbed him in Wall street.

"But General Grant needs no eulogist. His name is indelibly engraved upon the hearts of his countrymen. His services attest his greatness. He did his duty and trusted to history for his meed of praise. The more history discusses him the more brilliant becomes the luster of his deeds. His record is like a torch—the more it is shaken the brighter it burns. His name will stand imperishable when epitaphs have vanished utterly and monuments and statues have crumbled into dust; but the people of this great city, everywhere renowned for their deeds of generosity, have covered it anew with glory in fashioning in enduring bronze, in rearing in monumental rock that magnificent tribute to his worth which was today unveiled in the presence of countless thousands. As I gazed upon its graceful lines and colossal proportions I was reminded of that childlike simplicity which was mingled with the majestic grandeur of his nature. The memories clustering about it will recall the heroic age of the republic; it will point the path of loyalty to children yet unborn; its mute eloquence will plead for equal sacrifice should war ever again threaten the nation's life; generations yet to come will pause to read the inscription which it bears, and the voices of a grateful people will ascend from the consecrated spot on which it stands as incense rises from holy places, invoking blessings upon the memory of him who had filled to the very full the largest measure of human greatness and covered the earth with his renown."

In one way General Porter did not make a typical eulogy, for he avoided to a great extent the florid language which is the bane of many eulogists. This speech deals professedly with an ordinary man who became great only when he had to. It speaks an everyday kind of language which any one might use or understand. It seems to have no hidden implications, as so many similar speeches do. Take this speech, then, as a fine type of eulogy—a straightforward, sincere expression of admiration for a great man.—Comment by Martin Maloney of the Northwestern university school of speech.

AMAZING NEW HARD-WATER SUDS

Keep Color in Stockings Longer!

Every woman knows how tough it is on stockings to wash them in water so hard, it shows a ring of ruinous soap-scum around the bowl. For soap-scum gives stockings that "cottony" lifeless look. So suds your stockings with Vel, marvelous new hard-water suds made by Colgate for fine fabrics. Vel is not a soap. Contains no alkali to fade delicate colors. Now see stockings keep their delicate sheerness and fresh color, amazingly longer! See woolens and underwear regain bride-like freshness and color. Colored prints sing with radiant sparkle! Results are startling because science has found a wonderful new hard-water suds, called Vel, which contains no alkali to fade colors. Neither can Vel form ruinous soap-scum, even in hardest water. You can feel this slippery, slimy scum in any soap suds. But these amazing new Vel suds feel soft and pure. That's because Vel is not a soap. It's a special new hard-water suds perfected by Colgate. It makes as much as 5 times more suds than expensive soap flakes in hardest water. And it makes hardest water act soft as rainwater. You can see why Vel is better than soap flakes for fine fabrics, because Vel does not form a ring of soap-scum around the bowl. That proves Vel can't leave ruinous soap-scum in your stockings, underwear and woolens, to dull the sheerness and cause a "cottony" look. The most thrilling proof is the radiant freshness, the soft newness, and lovelier color of anything you wash in Vel. So easy on hands, too, because Vel is neutral—contains no acid, no alkali to irritate the skin.

For a free 25c package of Vel, paste this paragraph on a penny postcard with your name and address and mail it to Colgate, Dept. N795, Jersey City, N. J. Free offer expires August 31, 1939.

America Has the World's Best Airlines!

Flying Tourist Abroad Finds Aviation Techniques Vary as Do Languages

London.

By WAYNE THOMIS

AN AMERICAN traveling by European airliners after having flown extensively over airways within the United States quickly discovers that aviation techniques can vary as greatly as languages. He also gains an appreciation of the high quality of American transport airplanes.

Within the last month I've flown in Imperial Airways, Air France, Ala Littoria, and Lufthansa airplanes in the course of short journeys. My view of airline operations necessarily has been superficial, but I have seen a fairly representative cross section of European commercial air lines.

My general conclusions are that American airliners are faster, more comfortable, quieter than European ships; that American airports with their paved runways or large paved landing areas are superior to the sod fields almost universally used over here. And in general I believe that American air trafic control methods are superior and pilots of American airliners fly more conservatively than those of European lines.

One blessing of American flying that generally is unappreciated at home is the absence of customs and passport requirements. We can fly for 2,500 miles east or west and for 1,800 north and south and need never look a customs officer in the eye.

Over here a 500-mile flight in any direction from any capital city in Europe with the exception of Moscow will take you to a border, where you go through the inspection routine, having your baggage examined and your passport scrutinized.

First of all let's consider flight technique.

In general the European pilots tend to treat their airliners with less respect than do American airmen. The machines are whipped into steep banks close to the ground immediately after takeoff. Frankly, my hair stood on end several times watching the apparent disrespect with which the German Lufthansa pilots maneuvered the Junkers Ju-52 trimotored planes.

I must admit that accidents do not seem to result from such maneuvers. The crashes over here for the most part, like our own, occur in conditions of poor visibility.

The Junkers ships, though, habitually are banked beyond 45 degrees into climbing turns immediately they are off the ground. I've repeatedly seen the German pilots make a complete reversal of direction—180-degree turns—while still within boundaries of airports no larger than Chicago's municipal field—and this with a heavy trimotored plane carrying fifteen persons, mail, and express.

The Ju-52 has a light wing loading and a relatively low stalling speed. It's probably true that the pilots know their machine perfectly and are able to do these things with the utmost safety—but to my eyes it looked like dangerous piloting and unacceptable for air line work.

An Italian airliner captain sent cold chills down my spine in a trimotored Savoia-Marchetti S-75. This is a big and heavy machine, wing span 98 feet, 32,000 pounds gross weight (larger and heavier than our familiar Douglas DC-3 planes). We were landing at Le Bourget field on a trip from Rome.

The weather was bad, ceiling under 500 feet, and we came in through rain squalls and beneath the cloud layer, throttled back and obviously flying not much over 100 miles an hour.

When the field showed up through the general gloom the pilot slid down to a height of 200 feet and began his circle. The wind was very light but was definitly from the east. We straightened out and began our final approach. At that moment the wind shifted to the north. I was watching a wind cone and saw the change occur.

Diagrammatic drawing of German Lufthansa Junkers Ju-52.

Apparently unafraid of stalling his machine, the pilot immediately made a steep turn to the right, seeming as he did so almost to dip the right wing tip into the rooftops below us. The motors were opened up and the plane made a wide swing to the south and then swung around in another violent turn until it headed north into the wind.

All this took place within an area not more than a quarter mile from the field and at a flying speed that was breath-takingly slow. There was obviously no thought on the part of the pilot of making any second complete circuit of the airport, as an American pilot almost certainly would have done.

Another practice that always frightened me a little was the universal one of not testing the motors of airliners before takeoff. What happens over here is that the passengers are loaded aboard a ship, the motors started and allowed to idle until requisite temperatures are reached.

Then the machine is taxied out to the takeoff point and the pilot pours the coal to his engines and you are off. In the United States it is universal practice to open up each of the motors, be it a twin, tri, or four-motored machine, just before takeoff, in order to be certain that they are delivering full power and every pressure indicator shows proper fuel and lubricant flow. But not here.

One result of this neglect was apparent in another Ala Littoria plane at Rome. We taxied out, the motors were opened up, and we staggered into the air. Our progress remained sluggish. There wasn't the usual acceleration to cruising speed. The pilot kept the plane in a straight gradual climb, then made a slow circle of the field and brought the machine back to a landing.

There were little beads of sweat on his brow, although it was not a hot day, when he walked back from the cockpit and addressed the passengers. "The center motor went phutt," he explained in English. We had maintained our height on the two wing motors while getting into position for the landing, but the pilot had been worried. A test run-up of the motors just before takeoff probably would have showed the malfunctioning of the motor.

Opening up engines before takeoff has another important function. The modern blind-flying instruments, turn and bank indicator, giro-compass, artificial horizon, and the giros of the automatic pilot are driven off suction pumps on airliner engines. Unless the motors are functioning somewhere near normal cruising revolutions the suction pump cannot deliver its normal suction to the gyroscope rotors. And if the rotors are not turning at rated speeds their indications on the dials of the turn and bank indicator, the giro-compass, and horizon will not tell the truth.

In other words, the indicators may say your progress is in a straight line while actually your machine may be turning.

It is the practice over here to take off in conditions of exceptionally poor visibility, sometimes when the ceiling is less than 100 feet and visibility less than a quarter mile. The pilots follow a predetermined line of direction that takes them over the least obstructed route and climb above the fog.

But in the last eighteen months a number of accidents have occurred during such takeoffs. In virtually every instance the crashes came at points that were off the line that should have been followed—indicating that the planes turned from the intended line of flight apparently without the knowledge of the pilots. It is now believed that the giro instruments mislead the pilots by not telling the truth.

Blame for such disasters, however, rests on the pilots. They know how the blind-flying instruments operate and their limitations. Because the pilots failed to open up their motors on the ground and allow the rotors to reach operating speed, the instruments couldn't tell the truth. Every pilot who does any instrument-flying training in the United States learns that he must get his instruments up to working speed before takeoffs in conditions of poor visibility.

Very few airports in Europe or England have any paved runways, while hard-surfaced areas for takeoff and landing are considered essential in the United States for airdromes where large and heavy airplanes are to be flown. Pavement for runways obviates troubles with mud and soft ground, facilitates the cleaning of snow from landing areas, and generally is regarded as highly beneficial and worth its cost.

Many of the European fields are as large as or larger than American airports, but this added size is needed because heavy airplanes accelerate to flying speed much more slowly on sod than on pavement. One of the largest fields over here is Tempelhof at Berlin. It is now some 450 acres in area and is being enlarged to 750 acres, considerably more than a square mile in extent.

Le Bourget field is nearly a mile square, and has buildings on only one side. The other three—east, north, and south—are encircled by cultivated fields. But Croydon at London is in the midst of thousands of exactly similar workmen's cottages and is unpleasantly small as well. Furthermore, it has a roll in the land, so much so that from the passenger station airplanes landing from the east pass almost out of sight as they enter this dip.

As to distance from centers of population, the European traveler has the same complaint as the American—the fields are all too far from town. At London, Paris, Brussels, Vienna, Madrid, Warsaw, and Rome from forty to fifty minutes is required to travel from mid-city to the flying field. Berlin is fortunate in that Tempelhof can be reached from the main business and the main hotel sections by a ten-minute drive even in the busiest hours.

Now for the airliners. American machines actually cruise at between 175 and 210 miles an hour, the Douglas DC-2s and DC-3s being in the 175 to 185 mile an hour class. The Lockheed Electras do 175 m.p.h., and the Lockheed 14s actually hit off 210, even at an economical throttle setting.

Most of the European planes are cruising at slightly slower speeds. The Junkers Ju-52 is supposed to do 145 miles an hour. The French machines are averaging 165 to 175 miles an hour. The Italian Savoia series cruises at 175 to 180 miles an hour, the British flying boats at 165, the De Havilland Albatross planes at 170, and the new Ensigns at 165.

Here is the way I would compare a DC-3 with the various machines in reference to comfort. In each case the comparison is from actual flight experience:

Ensign—More room, more comfortable furnishings, but more vibration. Noise level about same as DC-3.

Junkers Ju-52—Much noisier, less room. Reminds one of the old Ford trimotors.

Junkers Ju-86—This bimotored ten-place machine is about like the old Boeing 247D airliners that United Air Lines flew for so many years. The cabin is smaller and noisier and not so comfortable as the Douglas.

There were two items I liked very much about the European airways. You can buy a drink of any beverage from beer to wines and whiskies and brandies aboard their planes. In spite of the presence of alcoholic drinks on the planes, I saw no drunkenness or disorderly conduct by passengers, or, indeed, anything at all that would justify the ban placed by the federal government on the serving of drinks in American aircraft. Further, passengers gather at a downtown ticket office and are carried to the airports in motor buses as at home. Your ticket here, however, entitles you to the ride from the downtown terminal to the airport and a similar ride at your destination. They do not charge you an extra 75 cents to a dollar at each end, as they do in America.

The Story Behind England's Mighty World Empire

of soil outside the British Isles.

The whole growth of the empire, therefore, has been a matter of modern history. Although Newfoundland, commonly termed the senior colony of the British empire, was claimed by Sir Humphry Gilbert in the name of the crown in 1583, it was not until 1623 that British rights were established there by the planting of a colony by Sir George Calvert, afterward Lord Baltimore. British settlements in what is now the United States of America, principally those in Massachusetts and Virginia, formed the nucleus of what later became the thirteen original colonies. But these, as pointed out, rebelled and broke away from the empire—to the everlasting discredit of the British statesmen of 1775 and their colonial policy.

The varicolored map of the world that appears on page one is rich in red. These red sections, some tiny, some extensive, all represent lands that are part of the British empire of today or under British control. Approximately one-fourth of all the land in the world is British. Apparently no one knows exactly how many square miles of land are British or what is the exact total population of the empire. It is impossible to take reliable censuses in remote lands inhabited by savages, and the British possess some such lands. No two authorities, therefore, agree exactly as to the area and population of the empire. The figures previously given are approximately correct, corresponding closely with those of a majority of the authorities.

Having noted the vastness of the British empire, as shown in the colored map, let us now consult the map of the world of 225 years ago (1714) which appears on this page. On this map we see that the British then had only begun their imperial expansion. We see as British territory Newfoundland, Nova Scotia, a thin strip of Labrador, the American colonies, Jamaica, Honduras, and a sprinkling of islands in the western world. We see in the eastern hemisphere the British Isles themselves, a few more islands, some settlements on the coast of India, other settlements on the west coast of Africa, and, most important of all from the standpoint of imperial security, the rock of Gibraltar. By this time the British had gained a foothold in that part of Canada that touches on Hudson bay, but only in the name of the Hudson's Bay company and not in the name of the crown.

Of all the colonial territories possessed by the British government before 1714 and still owned by it, only two were taken by conquest, the other being acquired by colonization. The island of Jamaica in 1655 was captured from the Spaniards by the British admirals Penn and Venables and finally recognized as British property by the treaty of Madrid of 1670. Gibraltar was taken from the Spaniards by the British in 1704, and later successfully defended by them through several important sieges.

Gibraltar appears on the map merely as a tiny red spot, yet for many years it has been vital as a defense position of the British empire, a means of helping to hold the empire together. It commands the eastern gateway to the Mediterranean, and the Mediterranean provides Great Britain with a route to the orient by way of the Suez canal.

As it slowly was gaining a foothold in the west in the eighteenth century, Great Britain was planting the seeds of empire in the east. Through the East India company British settlements were being established in India at Madras, Bombay, and in Bengal. Before 1714, however, the British held no part of India as crown territory. Before that year they had no part of the great continent of Africa except as covered by insignificant trading posts at isolated spots on the west coast. Moreover, they had no part of the vast island continent of Australia.

The richest part of Canada became British as the result of a series of bloody wars with the French, in which American colonists played an important part. When Maj. Gen. James Wolfe defeated the Marquis de Montcalm on the Plains of Abraham just outside Quebec on Sept. 13, 1759, the power of the French in Canada was broken. By the end of the year both the province of Quebec and the province of Ontario were in the hands of the British. In 1763 Prince Edward Island, Quebec, and Ontario were ceded to Great Britain by France.

The British empire as it was in 1837.

As we have disclosed, by discussing a map of the world of 1714 (the year Queen Anne died), how meager were Great Britain's territorial holdings 225 years ago, let us now consult the accompanying map of the world of 1837—the year Queen Victoria came to the throne. This map shows nearly all of Canada—all except the far north and a strip on the west coast adjoining Alaska—in British possession, many more islands than in 1714, British Guiana in South America (annexed in 1803), the greater part of Australia and all of Tasmania, and the major part of India, the last named still held, however, through the offices of the East India company. It was not until after the Indian mutiny that India formally was transferred to the crown in 1858, and it was not until 1877 that Queen Victoria, through the plan engineered by her prime minister, Benjamin Disraeli, was proclaimed empress of India.

The British had laid the foundation of the present Union of South Africa in the occupation of the Cape of Good Hope in the years from 1795 to 1806, taking it from the Dutch, who had settled there as early as 1652. They had settled in Sierra Leone in 1787. But still as recently as 1837 the British were without sizable holdings in Africa—it still was the dark continent.

There is no particular credit redounding to the British so far as the early history of Australia is concerned. This great island, approximately the same in area as the United States, and one of the major units of the empire, may have been discovered by a French navigator, Binot Paulmyer, in 1503. His claim never has been proved. The Dutch arrived and landed there 103 years later. Capt. James Cook, the British explorer, landed on the shore of Botany bay, an inlet on the coast of New South Wales, in 1770 and took possession in the name of the British crown. Eighteen years later a shipload of criminals was landed on the very spot and a penal settlement was established. The prisoners of the settlement some time later were shifted to the present site of Sydney. Thus Australia got its start as a place of banishment for undesirables. It has long since, however, lived down the stigma, if any.

M. J. SAVAGE

The last century has been one of marvelous expansion for the British empire. Since 1837 there have been added to it the vast collection of islands in the Arctic ocean to the north of North America, British Columbia, Yukon territory, huge territories in Africa, a wide addition to India on the northwest, Burma, a sizable chunk of land in north central Australia, the Straits Settlements, British New Guinea, New Zealand, and a scattering of minor possessions. From Egypt, which now is a semi-independent kingdom under British military control, to the Cape of Good Hope, Great Britain today possesses an unbroken stretch of the most desirable land in Africa. This is in addition to its numerous possessions on the west coast of the continent. The British are the biggest landholders of Africa. As a result of the World war they took from the Germans the fertile territory of German East Africa (Tanganyika territory), German Southwest Africa, and parts of Togoland and the Cameroons. They also took from the Germans a number of islands in the South Pacific.

From the beginning of the empire in the seventeenth century to the present day Great Britain has annexed approximately a hundred separate and distinct territories, a surprisingly large number of which were won by conquest. In all that time it has lost, by war, formal cession, or exchange, only the American colonies, territories that now are parts of Dutch and French Guiana, Java, Reunion Island, Pondicherry in India, Helgoland, St. Pierre, and Miquelon. Unproved British claims to the northwestern corner and parts of the midsection of what now is the United States of America were relinquished in the period from 1763 to 1846.

Outside the innumerable small wars with native tribesmen in Africa, Australia, and elsewhere the British have fought several really important campaigns to conquer alien peoples. Among these were some of the earlier wars in India, the Indian mutiny, the Afghan wars on the northwest border of India, and the Boer war in South Africa. The last named came dangerously close to being a successful war of independence for the Boers and another major blunder on the part of the British, but finally, through a preponderance of men and supplies, the British managed to vanquish the valiant Boers.

The twentieth-century colonial policy of the British is far different from that of 1775. Today the Boer citizens of the Union of South Africa enjoy most of the privileges and liberties for which they fought the British in 1899 to 1902.

The British empire—or, to give it its latest name, the British Commonwealth of Nations—today is divided into the following political classes:

1. The United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, consisting of England, Wales, Scotland, and northern Ireland. It possesses full sovereignty, external and internal, but is limited in action as regards the dominions by certain recognized conventions. Northern Ireland has a parliament and a government responsible to it for local matters. The Channel Islands and the Isle of Man are in an anomalous position, inasmuch as they have independent legislatures and semi-independent executives subject to the supremacy of the British parliament.

2. The self-governing dominions, possessing membership in the league of nations and therefore a quasi-international status. Though still subject to the supremacy of the British parliament, they possess the same independent status as Great Britain, with which they are equal members of the British imperial conference. The dominions are Canada, Australia, New Zealand, the Union of South Africa, and Eire (Ireland).

(The British imperial conference consists of an association of component units of the empire meeting every four years, in which the prime ministers of each are on a footing of equality with the British prime minister.)

3. A dominion with its status temporarily reduced to that of a colony. This is Newfoundland. Directly after the World war Newfoundland was made a self-governing dominion with membership in the British imperial conference but without membership in the league of nations. By 1933 it had drifted into such a desperate financial state that it became necessary to revert its position to that of a colony until such time as it again should become self-supporting. By the Newfoundland act, passed Dec. 21, 1933, by the British parliament, the island's representative government was replaced by a commission government. The commission consists of six members, three appointed by the British government and three by Newfoundland.

4. Two self-governing colonies, with wide but not unrestricted autonomy, and not entitled to representation in the imperial conference. These are Malta (taken from the French in 1800) and Southern Rhodesia in Africa.

5. Crown colonies, or colonies not possessing responsible governments—that is, colonies in which the executive governments are controled by the British government through the secretary of state for the colonies. The legislatures in these cases may be entirely independent of the executive, as in the Bahamas, Bermuda, and Barbados, with their nominee upper houses and their elective assemblies, but normally are, either in case of emergency or regularly, subject to control, either because there is an official majority or because the governor alone constitutes the legislature. To the Australian commonwealth are attached, as dependencies administered on crown colony lines, Papua and Norfolk Island; to New Zealand, the Cook Islands and the Ross Dependency.

6. Protectorates administered on colonial lines. These differ from colonies mainly in that they are not annexed to the crown, and their inhabitants are not British subjects. Protectorates normally are annexed when they arrive at the proper state of political development.

7. Protected states. Some of them, such as Sarawak, possess internal autonomy, while others, like Zanzibar, are administered by British officers.

The famous bridge that is a landmark in Sydney harbor, Australia.

8. India, including British India and the native states. The former is administered under a governor general and his executive council, appointed by the crown. The latter possess various degrees of internal autonomy. India as a whole has membership in the league of nations and representation in the imperial conference.

The mandated territories, held under league of nations mandate by Great Britain, Australia, New Zealand, and the Union of South Africa, are not, strictly speaking, part of the empire, yet they are governed by the British. Among these mandated lands are Tanganyika territory, Palestine, Southwest Africa, and Western Samoa.

All the dominions, all the colonies of the empire, whose subjects of the king prize liberty above all else, are held together in the main by a single tie, the crown. Take away the revered figure of the sovereign, abolish the age-old tradition of loyalty to the king, and it is more than likely the empire quickly would fall apart. Its insurance against enemies from within is the crown. Its insurance against enemies from without is its superb navy, the might of which is portrayed numerically in a drawing on page one.

While the crown holds the empire together, it is the riches and the resources of the great dominions that make the empire so impressive, so dangerous an enemy with which to tangle in war.

These dominions stanchly supported Great Britain during the World war with men, guns, money, and flaming patriotism.

"Would they do it again?" is a question that has been asked repeatedly within recent months.

So far as New Zealand and Australia are concerned, for example, the answer to that question comes emphatically from the heads of the governments of the two dominions. Prime Minister M. J. Savage of New Zealand, who has been outspokenly critical of the British course in the past, said recently:

"Let no one imagine that if Britain were involved in conflict we would stand idly by."

And Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies of Australia in a similar declaration said his country would support Great Britain in any conflict.

The governments of these two dominions today are helping Great Britain prepare for the next war, according to an article from The Tribune's correspondent at Wellington, N. Z., Quentin Pope. Only last year, for example, the dominion pilots formed one-third of the 1,500 postings to the British air force. The people of the two dominions know how important to them is strength at the center of the empire, and that so long as Great Britain is unconquered they may expect military and naval aid against possible foes.

Both Australia and New Zealand today frankly admit that Japan is the power they fear. For many years these southern dominions were cautioned by London to avoid irritating Japan, but now the situation is different. No one today pretends that Australia's quarter billion dollar armament program is aimed at any nation but Japan.

During the World war home defenses in these two countries did not present an extremely difficult problem, as the enemy was largely bottled up in central Europe. But now the military plans of the two antipodean democracies, according to Mr. Pope, are being laid primarily not to supply expeditionary forces but to give protection at home.

In principle the dominions in the event of war are free to choose their individual courses. But in actual fact this freedom, which came from the statute of Westminster, is largely a front. In practice the British government, while keeping the dominions informed as to the progress of events, always can make its own decisions and justify them. Britain can commit herself to a course and pledge at least two of the dominions to it. Canada may insist on putting the question to her parliament, South Africa may consider the idea of neutrality, but for Australia and New Zealand, as in 1914, there is only one course. That is with the home government. The remoteness of the two dominions and the constant threat from Japan make it imperative for them to be with Great Britain for self-preservation if war comes.

There's No Quarantine on Beauty Rituals

After an illness, convalescence is much more comfortable—and maybe it will be faster—if you make your beauty aids do sickroom duty. After your bath, for instance, you'll enjoy a light dusting with a fragrant body powder.

When the weather is muggy and the invalid's head is heavy, saturate cotton sponges with cologne in a light, dry fragrance. Place one on either side of her head right on the pillow. The scent will buoy her up wonderfully!

How to solve the problem of all that hair that is so hot and heavy at the back of her neck: Swish it all up under an elliptical shaped net held in place by pretty ribbons that tie in a bow at the front.

An ideal beauty kit for the patient has a removable tray fitted with beauty and makeup aids. Tie the compact bag to the side or the top of the bed. The patient herself, even when lying flat, can make use of it whenever she likes. (Tribune Studio photos.)

Charm Tricks Can Help Speed Convalescence

By ELEANOR NANGLE

ENJOY ill health? Well, up to a point it can be done. And should be done.

Not in the sense that you actually welcome illness or think that there is no topic in the world quite so fascinating as your own ailments. That sort of thing makes Jill a very dull girl indeed.

But if you do have the bad luck to be ill it's only sensible to make yourself as comfortable as possible and look as pretty as possible. Why not? You know down in your heart that it always makes you feel better to know you're looking lovely. Wouldn't you much rather have the visitors to your sickroom say you're looking too cute for words than to murmur piteously over your pallor? Of course you would!

You can enjoy convalescence—and it's our belief that you can even speed it up a bit—if you make some well chosen beauty aids do sickroom duty. Whether at home or in a hospital, you'll think of good-looking nightgowns and fluffy, flattering bed jackets. But we urge you not to forget delicately scented soap, dusting powder, cologne, and a beauty kit. No matter how ill you are, there will come a day when you'll want some lipstick on—and that day marks the beginning of recovery!

Comfort, of course, comes first. If you're bedridden for a long period, that gradually lengthening hair at the back of your neck is going to bother you. It will feel hot and messy. There's a tricky little hair net that will solve all that. It's elliptical in shape, on a light wire frame, and it comes in pretty colors and ties in the front with perky bows. You simply swish all that hair up from your neck, hold it up with the net, and tie the bows in front. All the hair is held quite casually on the top of your head and you lie on your pillows in cool, little-girl comfort.

Cologne is awfully important. Make the scent a light, dry one and keep the bottle handy. Have a rub with it after your bath and use it on hands and forehead whenever you feel the need of refreshment. A good trick if the weather is muggy and your head feels heavy is to saturate cotton sponges with cologne. Put one on either side of your head on your pillow. The clean fragrance will buoy you up wonderfully.

Dusting powder helps banish that sticky feeling, too. This also should be in an airy fragrance and should be used generously not only to make you comfortable but to foster that luxurious feeling. Fluff it on with a puff, or, if you want the ultimate in body powder luxury, use the one that comes in a brush and filters down through the petal-soft bristles.

You'll want a bland soap and lots of lubricating cream; illness, unless you're being stuffed with fattening foods, will usually leave your skin dryer than you like it. This is often true of hair, too. If you can't brush your hair yourself, get some good Samaritan to brush it for you. That will encourage the healthy luster and aid the cause of cleanliness. If you have to do without shampoos you'll find a good hairbrush a great help in keeping your locks presentable. A little cologne now and then will subdue the surface dust and make the hair pleasantly fragrant.

Then there is your beauty kit. It should be small, compact, and light. One of the best we've found for the invalid is an inexpensive pouch bag with a removable tray fitted with the beauty and makeup essentials. Everything you might need is compactly handy in this bag—powder, rouge, lipstick, removable mirror, creams, hand lotion, face powder. All the jars are plastic, light as feathers, and the little tray can be lifted out and moved very easily. You can make up your face while you're flat on your back if this bag is within reach. Tie it to the side or the top of your bed and when not in use just flip it out of sight.

The thing to remember if you want to "enjoy" your illness is to give your beauty bag—and all your beauty aids—plenty of use. Primping pays big dividends, psychologically at least, when sickness catches up with you!

A Pretty Picture, Good Enough to Eat

Fruit Has Palette as Well as Palate Appeal

By MARY MEADE

NO FOOD makes a prettier summer picture than a gay platterful of fresh fruits, attractively arranged to make the most of shapes and colors.

The fresh raspberry season has gone, of course, but there still are lusciously fat blueberries to be had, and these will look perfectly beautiful sitting in the center of such a plateful of fruit as the one pictured.

Many are the fruits to choose from—there are all of the melons, peaches, gold-fleshed and juicy, and mellow-ripe pears. Plums, all kinds and colors of them; apricots, nectarines, grapes, apples, oranges, and bananas are available, too. However many fruits you select, get them together with an eye for color contrast, texture variation, and differences in flavor. Chill them until very cold before you prepare them for the salad platter. And serve with them this wonderfully good fruit salad dressing:

A fresh fruit salad plate with fruit salad dressing, hot rolls, and a beverage is food enough for a hot-weather luncheon. Choose ripe, juicy fruit and have it very cold.

Something new in summer-time drinks—wine coolers. They are beautiful, sparkling, and refreshing, and they're coming into popular favor with both men and women.

FRUIT SALAD DRESSING
(One cup)

3 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
½ cup milk
¼ cup egg yolks
¼ cup orange juice
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon prepared mustard

Melt butter, blend in flour, and add milk; cook over direct heat, stirring constantly, until sauce thickens. Add beaten egg yolks and cook one minute longer, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and add fruit juices and seasonings. Chill thoroughly and serve with fresh or canned fruits.

A combination fresh fruit salad with this dressing might be accompanied by cream cheese balls rolled in mint and served with hot rolls, devil's food cake with butter pecan icing, and coffee. How welcome a supper on a warm August evening!

And how welcome a beverage any hot afternoon or evening are "wine coolers," something new and delightful in summer drinks! The happy idea of wine coolers originated on the Pacific coast, where red and white California wines have their origin. Both sweet and dry wines are used for these refreshing glassfuls.

Here's the way they are made:

WINE COOLERS

Pour tall glasses half full of any table wine. Fill the glasses with seltzer. Sweeten to taste with sugar or sugar sirup and add a twist of lemon peel to each glass. Serve very cold for afternoon "tea," bridge party, or buffet supper.

Wine lemonade is another fashionable yet quite economical summer-time drink. Make lemonade by your favorite recipe, add 6 tablespoons red or white table wine to each glass, and sweeten to taste.

These new and different drinks are rapidly finding favor with both men and women. There is evidence of revived interest in wine cookery, too, which reminds me to mention the fact that my department has a neat little bookful of ideas in "Cooking with Wines and Spirits," which you may have for 5 cents in stamps.

Joseph Henry, Inspiration for Morse and Bell

● This is the last of three articles on artificial light, electric rays, and one of the outstanding American pioneers in electricity.

By GREER WILLIAMS

JOSEPH HENRY, first secretary of the Smithsonian institution, was rather an idle boy. At the age of 16, however, he read a book which inspired him to a career which by general agreement made him America's foremost physicist.

Henry had been disinclined to study until he stumbled on this book, "Lectures on Experimental Philosophy, Astronomy, and Chemistry, Intended Chiefly for the Use of Young Persons," by the Rev. George Gregory. Years later Henry wrote on the flyleaf:

"This book, although by no means a profound work, has under Providence exerted a remarkable influence on my life. . . . It opened to me a new world of thought and enjoyment; invested things before almost unnoticed with the highest interest; fixed my mind on the study of nature, and caused me to resolve at the time of reading it that I would immediately commence to devote my life to the acquisition of knowledge."

Henry did just that, and so spread important knowledge to others. In the seventy-nine years in which he lived Henry shared with the great Michael Faraday of England the discovery of the electromagnetic generator, established the principles of the electrical transformer, supplied Samuel Morse the way to perfect his telegraph, inspired Alexander Graham Bell to invent the telephone, organized one of the world's greatest centers of scientific research, developed a system of free publication and international exchange of scientific reports, and created the United States weather forecasting service.

Joseph Henry, whose grandparents emigrated from Scotland, was born in Albany, N. Y., on May 13, 1797. His father, a poor laborer, died when he was 9. He attended a rural school until he was 13 and then was apprenticed to a watchmaker. When his master failed in business Joseph was left with nothing to do. He joined a group of young persons interested in amateur theatricals and for a time hoped to become a professional actor. The Rev. Mr. Gregory's book changed his mind and he enrolled in the Albany academy, supporting himself by teaching a country school and by tutoring at the academy. He concentrated on physiology and chemistry with the hope of becoming a physician. He was diverted by his appointment to a party surveying a road from the Hudson river to Lake Erie. The next year, 1826, however, he was elected to a professorship of mathematics and natural philosophy in the Albany academy.

He at once set himself to study the relation of electric currents to magnets. The only known means of creating an electric current at the time was with a battery. But by 1829 Henry was inducing a strong current in an iron bar from a coil of wire wrapped around it and connected to a battery. The bar became on electromagnet. William Sturgeon had done this before, but produced only a weak current.

Henry discovered that the way to intensify the induction of electricity from wire to bar was to insulate the wire with silk and wrap layer upon layer around the core, like a spool of thread. In 1829 he built the first electromagnetic motor with an automatic pole changer, producing the effect of an alternating current. The next year he used his electromagnet to produce the first telegraphic signals.

Professor Henry stretched one mile of copper wire around a room in the academy. To one end he attached a horseshoe electromagnet with the end of a pivoting bar magnet between its poles. At the other end of the bar was a bell. When a battery current was sent along the wire the bar swung toward the opposite pole of the electromagnet and the other end struck the bell.

Faraday announced his discovery of electrical induction in 1831, before Henry had published his work in electromagnetism. That year he did announce his construction of his electromagnetic "rocker" motor and also his work in magnetic telegraphy. He pointed out that his use of a long coil, producing an intense current at great distance, opened the way for commercial development of the telegraph. While he apparently had preceded Faraday in the discovery that electricity could be generated from magnetism, he conceded priority. The latter had carried the work much farther, having built the first electromagnetic dynamo. Henry's preëminence in the study of induction was recognized, however, when the 1893 International Electrical congress in Chicago resolved to call the unit of electrical inductance a henry.

In 1832 Henry went to Princeton university as professor of natural philosophy. There he built an electromagnet which could lift 3,500 pounds and also a telegraphic circuit to send messages between his laboratory and his house.

His most important work, however, was the determination of the principles underlying the modern transformer. Henry had found that the making or breaking of a current in one coil induced a current in an adjacent coil.

If the first coil was long and the second short, a current of great quantity was produced in the secondary. But if the first was short and the second long, a current of small quantity but great intensity was produced in the secondary. That is, it had great shocking force. This coil-to-coil interchange of quantity to intensity and vice versa is the basis of the modern step-up and step-down transformers.

While Henry was studying high and low potential induction, Samuel F. B. Morse, an artist and sculptor six years older than he, was trying to perfect a telegraph, but was unable to sustain a current strong enough to move the pivoting magnet or armature at the receiving end. In 1835 he was directed to study Joseph Henry's work. The latter's finely wrapped coils, already used in transmitting signals, provided the desired sensitivity and a few years later America had its first telegraph.

Although another seventy-five years was to elapse before the invention of radio, Henry's brilliant mind dealt even with this phenomenon. In 1842 he produced an inch-long spark at the end of a wire which induced a magnetized needle in the cellar thirty feet below to turn parallel to the circuit. The invisible power was a radio wave.

About this time congress was discussing rather heatedly the $500,000 bequest of James Smithson, British chemist, for "an establishment for the increase and diffusion of knowledge among men," to be centered in Washington, D. C. The result was the Smithsonian institution, whose board of regents on Dec. 14, 1846, called Henry, then 49, to Washington to become the first secretary and director.

The standing of Henry may be appreciated from the board's resolution before his appointment: "Resolved, . . . That the secretary of the Smithsonian institution be a man possessing weight of character and a high grade of talent; and . . . that he possess eminent scientific and general acquirements; that he be a man capable of advancing science and promoting letters by original research and effort."

It was a good description of Henry, who combined energy and decision with courtesy and sympathy in all his dealings.

In the thirty-one years Henry headed the institution he endowed it with all his own intellectual brilliance. Congress allotted a part of the Smithsonian income to supporting a library, museum, art gallery, and laboratory. Henry maintained that such operations would consume more and more of the income and defeat the institution's purpose. He said that "the diffusion of knowledge" could best be effected by stimulating and supporting original research.

This he did, despite opposition, by making the institution the first in America to offer scientists free publication of their research. He inaugurated an exchange system for distributing these scientific papers to libraries and scientific bodies throughout the world. Congress eventually realized the greater value of this "clearing house" function.

One of Henry's greatest achievements was the establishment of a United States weather service. Beginning in 1850, he organized a corps of volunteer observers scattered through the nation, used the telegraph to transmit weather reports, depicted atmospheric conditions on a "weather map," devised a single system for the entire continent, and made forecasts on the data obtained. These innovations were perpetuated as standard weather forecasting practice when the United States weather bureau took over the Smithsonian institution's work.

In 1852 Henry became a member of the lighthouse board and later its head. His studies of the relation of sound to fog provided the country with a system for maritime fog signaling. His research also brought about the advance from whale oil to kerosene as a fuel for beacons. He was a leader in establishing the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the National Academy of Sciences, and the Philosophical society of Washington, holding at some time the office of president in each.

Henry died in his Washington home on May 13, 1878, of nephritis. National memorial services were conducted.

Three years before his death he was visited by Alexander Graham Bell, then nursing an idea for his invention of the telephone. Bell explained it at great length to the venerable old man, and, not feeling too optimistic, asked whether he should attempt to solve the problem himself or turn it over to others.

"You have a germ of a great invention," said Henry. "Work at it."

"But there are mechanical difficulties," said Bell, "and I do not feel that I have the necessary electrical knowledge."

"Get it," replied Henry.

After he had got it Bell confessed, "But for Joseph Henry I should never have gone on with the telephone."

Mostly About Dogs

Summer May Be Hard on Dogs

SUMMER weather with its hot days usually is welcomed by all outdoor fans, but with countless thousands of dogs we imagine that the summer is not so popular. Hot weather brings trouble to some pups that suffer from "summer skin disease," or so-called eczema. Then there are fleas and flies. As if that were not enough, thousands of owners fail to groom their pets properly, which means that the pups are very uncomfortable with their unnecessarily long coats.

The following letter from the owner of a cocker spaniel tells how dogs may be uncomfortable during hot weather because the owners haven't kept themselves posted on correct dog care:

"Will you advise me if it is possible to have my cocker spaniel's coat trimmed during this hot weather? He's scratching a lot, his hair is coming out, and he apparently has fleas. He has very long hair on his stomach and his legs."

A professional handler or a dog owner who knows the tricks of dog care can take this dog, use a stripping knife on its coat to make it look and feel better, give the dog a treatment for fleas, and finally a bath, and make the cocker look forward to happier days. Thousands of wire-haired terriers, Scotties, Airedales, spaniels, and other dogs need attention to their coats during the summer. Veterinarians and professional dog handlers are the best counselers on this problem.

Some dog owners must get discouraged every summer when their pets develop eczema or dermatitis, no matter how carefully the animals are cared for. On the other hand, many owners neglect the diet of their pets, let them get very fat, and then wonder why their dogs have skin trouble in the summer. Improper diet during hot weather is a major factor in summer skin trouble among dogs. The term improper diet includes many an error on the part of the dog owner. For example, it means overfeeding, so that the dog is far above normal weight; unbalanced diet; too much food for the amount of exercise that the dog gets; giving the dog pastries or sweets; feeding a poorly made, cheap prepared dog food; a diet that lacks the necessary vitamins; and similar factors.

If you will talk to your veterinarian about feeding a dog, the amount to feed and how much a dog should weigh according to the breed standard, you'll find that the advice will be: During warm weather it's best to underfeed a dog rather than overfeed, and wise is the owner who can see the ribs of his pet!

One of the things that bothers our dogs in the summer (and, we might add, also bothers their owners!) is the woodtick. Woodticks are increasing in many parts of the country and extending their range to others. They're tough, hard to kill, difficult to locate on a dog with a long coat, and a headache to a kennel owner once the little things get a foothold. One may use both powders and liquids in combating ticks on dogs. A liquid insect killer applied with a little hand spray is used by many dog owners and kennels. This same liquid may be used for fleas and other insects which bother dogs.

Just Roderic, a cocker spaniel only a little over 1 year old, was a winner in several puppy matches before going into regular dog show competition. It is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Glover Young, Park Ridge, Ill.

DOG NOTES

The dog's versatility is the answer to a popularity that has been constant for thousands of years, according to an official of the American Kennel club, governing body of pure-bred dogs in the United States. Other domesticated animals find various fields of usefulness, but not one of them can fill as many capacities as the dog. He is a companion, a guardian, a worker, and a means to sport. Sometimes he combines all of these rôles.

The Maltese and the komondor were two breeds of dog that didn't have one registration with the American Kennel club last year.

● JANET GAYNOR was born in Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 6, 1906. When she was 8 years old her family moved to Chicago and Janet continued her studies at the Graeme Stewart grade school. At that early age she was appearing in school plays, and by the time she was 10 she was in great demand for amateur theatricals. Her family moved to San Francisco, and she finished her education at San Francisco Polytechnic High school. After her graduation she found work as an usher in a motion picture theater. Her family finally moved to Hollywood, and Janet set out to get a job in pictures. She got her first job as an extra in 1924. Later she played bits in Hal Roach comedies. Her first big rôle was in "The Johnstown Flood." She skyrocketed to fame, however, when she played opposite Charles Farrell in "Seventh Heaven." She's 5 feet tall and weighs 100 pounds.

● JOEL McCREA was born in South Pasadena, Cal., Nov. 5, 1905, and has lived in and around Hollywood all his life. Went to Hollywood High school and Pomona college, where he was active in school plays. When he was graduated from college he set out to find a place for himself in the film world. He "crashed the gate" in a Sam Woods production and for a year played small parts in any films made by Mr. Woods. When "The Jazz Age," featuring Douglas Fairbanks Jr. and Marceline Day, was produced he was given the second lead in that picture. It was his first featured rôle. Since that time he has played leading rôles in many films. His most recent part is opposite Andrea Leeds and Jascha Heifetz in "They Shall Have Music." Mr. McCrea is married to Frances Dee, film actress, and has two sons. He's 6 feet 2 inches tall and weighs 185 pounds.

KNOW YOUR CAMERA

By ANDREW B. HECHT, Ph. D.

Striking cloud effects against a practically black sky are created by the use of a red filter.

Filters Give Life to Your Photos

IT MAKES a world of difference whether you take your pictures "straight" or use a filter in front of your lens. A filter, which is but a simple piece of colored glass or gelatin, can transform a flat and uninteresting picture, or one in which the color values have been madly scrambled, into a picture of striking beauty and true color rendition.

The reason for all this and for the need of filters is that film emulsions are more sensitive to certain colors than to others. Consequently they don't record values of color and light as the human eye sees them. Color filters correct this effect.

All films are oversensitive to blue light rays, while orthochromatic films are not sensitive to red. Both orthochromatic and panchromatic films record various colors in degrees which do not correspond to the light values as seen by the human eye. While yellow and green are the brightest colors to the eye, blue records strongest on your film.

To get a well balanced picture you must cut out some of the blue or occasionally some of the other colors, as your picture requirements may dictate. The way to do it is by using a filter. The action of filters is based on the fact that transparent materials permit light of their own color to pass through them, while they "filter out" light of their complementary color. For instance, a yellow filter permits yellow light to pass but cuts out most of the blue.

After what has been said about the excessive blue sensitivity of films in general it is obvious that yellow filters of various densities are the most important instruments of their kind. Orange, green, and red are other filters which will help amateurs create certain pictorial effects. Professionals use several dozen different kinds of filters, but the amateur will rarely have use for more than three or four, and in most cases he can get by with a single medium yellow filter.

And now let us see what filters will do to your pictures. Take the yellow filter. By cutting down on the blue light it darkens the sky and allows white clouds to stand out as white. Haze is mostly blue. The yellow filter eliminates this blue, permits other colors beyond the haze to register, and gives your landscapes depth. It generally enables you to hold more detail in your pictures. When shooting water or snow it helps you record texture by darkening the shadows. These shadows contain reflected blue light from the sky. Without a filter they would register strongly as highlights, thus eliminating detail from your picture.

In portraiture the yellow filter helps you give a correct rendering of the skin tones, the color of the eyes, the lips, and the hair. It generally cuts down on glare.

All of these effects are at their best when using a medium yellow filter. Light yellow filters give a weaker correction, which in some cases may be desirable. When shooting a landscape you may want to retain some of the distant haze as a special effect. You can do this by using a light yellow filter. Dark yellow and orange filters, on the other hand, tend to produce overcorrection, meaning that they throw off the balance of colors in a different direction from the incorrect balance recorded without any filter.

Similarly, red filters produce overcorrection in most cases. This result, however, may be very desirable for the sake of pictorial effect. It dramatizes the picture and gives it a punch which you could never obtain by any other method. In the case of outdoor shots it practically blackens the sky or the water and makes white clouds or sails stand out in brilliant contrast — a contrast stronger than that seen in nature.

Green filters render the greens in your subject in lighter tones than they would appear without filters. They produce separation between the many shades of green in a forest or garden scene and are needed wherever such separation is wanted.

All of the color filters mentioned slow down exposure. They cannot help doing so, because they eliminate part of the available light. The amount by which the exposure must be increased is called the filter factor. It varies according to the type of film and filter used.
